AGREEMENT ON TAX BILL REACHED BY SENATE BODY

Compromise Calls for Further Reduction in Surtax Rates and Repeal of the Inheritance Levy.

FINAL VOTE EARLY IN FEBRUARY SURE

Measure to Be Reported Tuesday—Simmons Says Provisions Give Democrats a Victory.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Senate Republicans and Democrats on the Finance Committee compromised their differences on tax reduction today and ordered by unanimous vote a report of the House revenue bill to the Senate with considerable modifications.

The compromise, which involved principally further reductions in the surtax rates and repeal of the inheritance tax, increased the total reduction provided by the House measure for this year from $330,000,000 to $360,000,000 and cleared the way for early passage of the bill by the Senate.

Chairman Smoot said he would report the measure to the Senate on Tuesday, but would hold up its consideration for a couple of days, unless the cloture rule was invoked to permit an early vote on the World Court.

Agreement Reached.

Spokesmen of the two parties in the Senate expressed satisfaction with the compromise and declared a final vote on the bill by the Senate early in February was almost certain.

The agreement came suddenly and the committee concluded its consideration of the bill in a cordial spirit. Ending its work within two weeks after the bill was first taken up, the committee established a new record in the consideration of revenue legislation.

The following changes in the House bill were voted today: Further reduction on surtax rates applying on incomes between $26,000 and $100,000.

Repeal of the inheritance tax.

Restoration of the present alcohol levies which the House had voted to cut in half.

Agreement on House action for repealing the gift tax.

Increased Reductions.

The increased reductions in the surtax rates would involve an additional estimated loss of $12,700,000 from this source this year. Senator Simmons of North Carolina, ranking Democrat on the committee, had presented a program for the minority members calling for additional reductions in these rates amounting to $44,000,000.

The Democratic program, which also called for repeal of the taxes on capital stock, admissions and dues, would have increased the total reduction to $500,000,000.

The reduction on surtaxes voted by the committee went considerably below the minimum in the House schedule which called for a cut in these rates on incomes over $44,000.

Senator King (Dem.), Utah, voted against the 16 other members of the committee on the proposed repeal of the inheritance tax. This vote also included repeal of the increased inheritance rates as put in the 1924 revenue act and instead, would make the lower rates in the 1921 revenue act apply on all inheritances since the 1924 rates became effective and up to enactment of the proposed bill into law.

A "Democratic Victory."

This retroactive reduction on inheritances which was voted by the House Ways and Means Committee but later rescinded by that body, would involve a loss of $20,000,000 this year.

The Treasury had estimated that under the present inheritance rates this tax would yield $110,000,000 in 1926.

Commenting on the committee's action, Senator Simmons described it as "a victory for the Democrats," pointing out their proposal for repeal of the capital stock tax had been accepted and that the committee had modified the surtax and admission levies.

The committee refused, however, a proposal by the Democrats to revise the debt funding retirement plan whereby the sinking fund would be slightly increased, but all payments from foreign govern-

AMOUNT OF SURTAX WHICH WOULD BE PAID UNDER SENATE RATES

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.

THE amount of surtax which would be paid under the new rates adopted today by the Senate Finance Committee, as compared with the amounts paid under the present law and that proposed by the House bill are shown in the following table. It assumes that the first $20,000 of income is "earned," on which a 25 per cent reduction would be allowed under the pending bill.

All income over $100,000 would be taxed 20 per cent under both the House and Senate schedules compared with the present 40 per cent.

17-YEAR-OLD MARKSMAN HITS 244 CONSECUTIVE BULL'S-EYES

Samuel Moore of Newton, Mass., Breaks One World's Record and Maybe Another.

By the Associated Press.

NEWTON, Mass., Jan. 16.—L. Samuel Moore, 17-year-old high school senior, completed nearly eight hours of continuous rifle shooting today with one new world's record to his credit, but uncertain whether he had captured another. Moore, firing a 22-caliber rifle at a 50-foot range, from prone position under the supervision of officials of the Boston Rifle and Revolver Association, scored 244 consecutive "A" bull's-eyes. This is a new record for junior marksmen.

Whether he also broke the world's record of 1785 consecutive bull's-eyes in 11 hours has not been finally determined. The Rifle Club officials ruled that he had fired 3000 consecutive shots into the bull's-eye circle of the target. But in examining his targets late today Moore himself questioned one target registered shortly after he fired his 1600th shot. The target will be sent to national officers for a ruling.

POLICEMEN SUE FOR $20,000 GIVEN THEM BY MAIL ROBBERS

Four Chicagoans Seek to Recover Sum Turned Over to U. S. After Rondout, Ill., Holdup.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Superintendent of Police Collins testified today in a Federal suit, in which Chief of Detectives Schoemaker and three detectives are seeking to recover $20,000, that Willie Newton, one of the train robbers in the $2,000,000 Rondout holdup in 1923, intended the money as a bribe. The detectives accepted the money, but did not release Newton as he had supposed they would do.

"I've always heard that the Chicago police were 'right,'" Collins quoted Newton as saying, when questioned after he had given the detective the $20,000. "Isn't it enough? I can get $20,000 more."

The original $20,000 was turned over to the Government as part of the train loot. Then Louise Drafka Brown, known as Newton's wife, gave the additional $20,000 to the police. This sum was taken over by the Government and the detectives now are seeking its recovery.

FIRST WASHINGTON CARILLON WILL BE IN HONOR OF BRYAN

Committee Finally Decides on Site for Memorial in Nation's Capitol

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The life and works of William Jennings Bryan will be commemorated, it was decided here today, by the erection of a memorial surmounted by the first carillon to be constructed in the Nation's Capitol.

A meeting of leaders in the movement, headed by Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy in the Wilson cabinet, considered plans for a fitting memorial to the former Secretary of State, but reached a decision on only one phase of the program, the establishment of the carillon.

In announcing the committee's decision, Daniels said it was the unanimous thought of those associated with him that Washington should be the site for the memorial.

FIRST EFFORT TO PENALIZE RADIO STATION

Government Will Prosecute Owners of WJAZ for Pirating Wave Length When Denied License.

OWNER TRESPASSES ON CANADIAN FIELD

Penalty for Violation of License Is Fine and Confiscation—Apparatus Valued at $75,000.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Governmental right to regulate the use of the air by radio broadcasting stations was under test for the first time today with the arrival in Chicago of orders from Attorney-General Sargent for the prosecution of the operators of Station WJAZ and the Zenith Radio Corporation for the pirating of a wave length.

The action of the Attorney-General sets a precedent. It is the first time that any broadcaster has departed from the general spirit of co-operation which has prevailed as a result of the annual radio conferences.

Several months ago E. F. McDonald, owner of the station and president of the Zenith Company, applied to the Department of Commerce for a license for WJAZ. He was told that there were no additional wave lengths available for use in Chicago. McDonald replied that he could make arrangements to divide time with KOA of Denver on a 322-meter wave length. The Denver station is silent every Thursday night between 10 and 12 o'clock, and it was agreed that McDonald's station could use the 322-meter length for those two hours each week. At the time McDonald specified that two hours were enough for him and the license as granted authorized him only to use the wave length between 10 and 12 o'clock on Thursday nights.

A few weeks ago, however, McDonald became dissatisfied and wanted more time. Officials of KOA were not willing to give up more time, and the Department of Commerce advised McDonald that it was impossible to furnish him any other wave length. Thereupon, McDonald took matters into his own hands and began operating on a 312-meter length, which is used exclusively by Canadian stations.

The operation of WJAZ on the Canadian wave length was in direct violation of the unwritten agreement which has been observed by American and Canadian officials in assigning wave lengths to stations in their respective countries. The United States Department of Commerce has respected the wave lengths assigned to Canadian stations and Canadian officials have respected the wave lengths assigned to American stations. This arrangement has prevented interference between stations of the two countries.

The penalty for violation of a Government radio license is confiscation of the apparatus and a fine of $500. It is estimated that the value of McDonald's station is about $75,000.

WOMAN QUESTIONED BY POLICE AFTER MAN DIES IN HER ROOM

Mrs. Theresa Watson of Indianapolis Arrested in Chicago After Business Man Succumbs.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Mrs. Theresa Watson, 45-year-old widow, of Indianapolis, was taken into custody for questioning today following the death, in her room at the Great Northern Hotel, of E. G. Hartle, 60, and married, of Columbus, O., field manager of the Galion Iron Works and Manufacturing Co. of Galion, O.

They met here on a business deal by appointment last night, Mrs. Watson said. "We had nearby rooms at the hotel," she added. "After a theater and supper he complained of feeling ill and came into my room. He died before I could summon a physician."

It was pointed out that Hartle's clothing was in her room and that his death was not reported until 8 a. m. today. Internal hemorrhages were believed to have been the cause of death. Mrs. Watson said they had known each other five years.

CHICAGO & ALTON PROPOSES TO INSTALL BUS LINES

Would Replace Certain Trains Which Are Paralleled by Hard Roads.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—The Chicago & Alton Railroad, Chief Operating Officer A. P. Titus said today, is considering motor busses to replace certain trains over runs which are paralelled by hard roads.

It has not been decided to make the change, he said, but two or three busses of eight-wheel type may be tried out over certain runs such as Jacksonville to St. Louis, with the idea that to replace some poorly patronized trains between cities also connected by hard roads might be a paying proposition. The proposed busses would be used for passenger traffic only.

Motor cars are now used on 14 runs, replacing steam engines, with a saving of two-thirds in expenses, Titus said. Some are in Missouri and some in Illinois, between Hardin and Carlinville and Springfield and Peoria.

FRANKFURTERS AND FLOWERS MAKE FRANCO-GERMAN ENTENTE

Paris Parley for Commercial Treaty Agrees to Reciprocity—All Is Well.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Frankfurters and flowers furnished the basis for the first real progress made in the negotiations for a commercial treaty between France and Germany which have been just resumed here.

The German mission wanted to put a prohibitive tariff on French horticultural products, but also demanded a favorable tariff rate on German sausage, which is being consumed in France in increasing amounts along with Alsatian sauerkraut. The French replied, in effect:

"No French flowers in Germany, no German frankfurters in France."

From this situation resulted the first definite agreement achieved since the negotiations opened in October, 1924, and reciprocally favorable duties on these items were fixed.

INCREASE IN EMPLOYMENT

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Employment in the United States increased slightly during December over November, the Labor Department reported today, while wage earnings increased more substantially. Checking the payroll totals from 9294 establishments in 53 industries, the statement placed the December index of numbers employed at 92.6, while for November it was represented by 92.5.

The total wage paid was represented in December by the index figure of 97.3, while for November it was represented by 96.2. Of the 53 industries, 30 showed an increased number of employes, while among those showing a loss were a number subject to seasonal fluctuation.

They were given until Tuesday to make a plea.

THIRD OF STATE ROAD SYSTEM NOW COMPLETE

Half of 7640 Miles of Primary and Secondary Highways to Be Finished During Year.

PROGRAM TO COST $195,000,000 BY 1934

Chief Highway Engineer Reports Banner Year in Annual Statement to Commission.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 16.—Hard surfacing of the State highway system of 7640 miles of primary and secondary roads was 33.2 per cent completed on Jan. 1 last, and the system will be half finished by the end of this year, Chief Highway Engineer B. H. Piepmeier stated in the annual report of the State Highway Commission, made public today. The commission expects to finish the entire system, estimated to cost $195,000,000, by 1934.

The last year was the banner year of Missouri road construction since the commission was formed in 1921. During the year the commission let contracts aggregating $35,000,000, and construction totaled 1221 miles of road, costing $26,207,612, including $1,896,790 for bridges and culverts.

Piepmeier has previously stated that the work done in 1925 constituted the alrgest State construction program actually under way in the United States, although the total Missouri road program is not as large as that of some of the States.

Half of Paving Completed.

On Jan. 1 the commission actually had completed, or had under contract, 50 per cent of the 1540 miles of primary or higher type roads, and had completed, or had under contract, 46 per cent of the 6100 miles of secondary road. The primary roads will be completed with 18-foot concrete paving, or an equivalent type of paving, by 1932. The secondary roads, also hard-surfaced, will be completed by 1934.

The commission also expects to complete by 1934 the refunds to all counties for funds advanced in constructing roads adopted as part of the State system. These refunds largely will be in additional roads to be built in the counties. Before the $60,000,000 State road bond issue was voted in 1920 a number of counties, notably in Southeast Missouri, had voted county road bond issues, and some of the roads built with those funds under State supervision were adopted as part of the State system when it was laid out in 1921.

Roads built in 1925 included 388 miles of graded earth that will be hard surfaced later; 429 miles of 18-foot concrete paving; 36 miles of nine-foot concrete paving, 29 miles of miscellaneous types of hard surfaced roads, and 339 miles of gravel surfacing, a total of 1221 miles.

The outstanding event of the 1925 construction project was the virtual completion of State Highway No. 2, the St. Louis-Kansas City "airline" primary route which now is open to traffic from end to end. The road now is paved for its entire length except for two gaps totaling 46 miles, which are gravel surfaced. These gravel stretches will be replaced by concrete paving by the end of this year.

The report shows that up to Jan. 1, the contract commitments on the system totaled $89,526,002, of which $49,981,266 represented projects completed and $39,544,736 represented projects under contract.

Work actually completed thus far, including finished mileage on contracts still under way, is as follows: Earth grading, 2250 miles, costing $20,413,123; hard-surfacing, 2530 miles, costing $47,848,127; bridges and culverts, $5,279,436. These items total $73,540,686. The total of 4780 miles of road work done, is in excess of what is considered completed road mileage, because of overlapping of hard-surfacing contracts on graded earth contracts. The 2530 miles of hard-surfacing completed is 33.2 per cent of the entire system of 7640 miles.

Total receipts from the automobile registration fees and gasoline tax are estimated at $12,150,000 for 1925. December gasoline taxes are not payable until Jan. 25. The Highway Commission estimates the receipts from automobile licenses and the gasoline tax will reach $20,000,000 a year by 1935.

COOLIDGE A LAWBREAKER IN CONTROL OF TARIFF BOARD, NORRIS CHARGES

MUSSOLINI DARES FOES TO DEBATE MATTEOTTI CASE

Accusers of Premier Frightened at Challenge Dash From Chamber of Deputies in Disorder.

ONE THROWN OUT, TWO OTHERS HURT

Dramatic Scene Comes at Close of Session in Honor of Memory of Late Queen Mother.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Jan. 16.—Premier Mussolini today cast a challenge at his opponents to openly debate their accusations of his complicity in the murder of the Socialist Deputy Matteotti in the Chamber of Deputies tomorrow. Matteotti was killed in June, 1924, and his death has constituted the strongest weapon of the opponents of fascism and the most serious blot on the fascist escutcheon.

Politicians said tonight that the affair will be publicly threshed out tomorrow if the opposition Deputies dare to accept the Premier's challenge.

This question, referred to as a "moral question," although not specifically named, was brought up dramatically in the Chamber this afternoon, when Deputies of the popular and Social-Democratic parties, formerly belonging to the Aventine group, unexpectedly entered, the house during a session devoted to honoring the memory of the late Queen Mother Margherita.

Premier Seizes Opportunity.

Since the opposition Deputies, in creating the "moral question" of the Matteotti affair 19 months ago, proclaimed to the nation that they would not return to Parliament until Mussolini fell, their return this afternoon was interpreted in some circles as a retraction of their accusations. The Premier, however, hastened to avail himself of this opportunity to offer proof of his innocence.

He announced dramatically that the return to the chamber of the former members of the aventine group created "a moral question which must be confronted immediately." He demanded a special session of the chamber tomorrow for this purpose, overruling the objection of Roberto Fairinacci, secretary-general of the Fascist party, that the opposition was too unimportant to warrant attention.

The Premier was extremely pale when he made his announcement in the midst of a tense silence, which, however, gave way to an ovation as the Deputies approved his proposal. The opposition members, sensing danger if they remained in the chamber, where they were vastly outnumbered by the excited Fascists, dashed for the exits, pursued by many fascists.

One Deputy Thrown Out.

A burly sergeant-at-arms held off most of the attackers until nearly all of the fleeing Deputies had escaped, but Palo Cappa, a member of the popular party from Genoa, was seized and thrown out forcibly, suffering severe bruises. Deputies Luigi Carbonari and Umberto Merlin also received injuries.

After this incident Deputies of the popular party held a meeting and passed a resolution that after the violence they had suffered it would be impossible to participate in the work of Parliament.

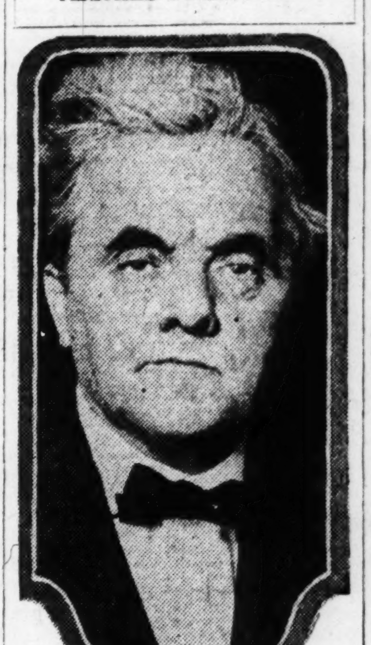
ASSAILS PRESIDENT



SENATOR NORRIS OF NEBRASKA.

GANNA WALSKA SAILS, BUT HUSBAND DOES NOT

No Explanation of McCormick's Sudden Change of Mind—Had Booked Passage.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Two unexpected happenings marked the departure tonight for Europe of Mme. Ganna Walska, Polish opera singer, who is the wife of Harold F. McCormick. Mme. Walska is returning to Europe determined to triumph over the critics who received her last continental appearance coldly.

The events which featured her departure came after she had boarded the steamship Paris. First she was served with a summons in a suit for $700 brought by Dimitry Onofrei, San Carlos Opera Co. tenor. A few minutes later McCormick, the harvester millionaire, who had booked passage with his wife and taken his baggage aboard, suddenly left the ship, had his baggage taken off, and declined to say why he had decided not to sail.

McCormick and his wife had posed together for photographers shortly before he left the ship. He was with her in her stateroom also when she told reporters she was "writing a book that would tell the truth about Ganna Walska."

Then he was seen leaving the ship, apparently perturbed.

Had Nothing to Say.

He would say nothing, and his wife told reporters, "It makes no difference to me what you write; so many lies have already been told about me."

Mme. Walska previously had said she intended to sing the lead in "Madame Butterly" in Paris, and then to tour Poland in a concert program with a famous basso, whose name she would not divulge. She said she had engaged a Japanese wrestler to teach her the proper methods for simulating hari-kari, the traditional Japanese form of suicide required in the role.

"I am convinced I'll be triumphant this time," she declared. "I'm going to sing to Europe. Then I'm coming back here and prove to everyone that I really can sing."

The suit brought by Onofrei was for salary for rehearsing with her a week in "Romeo and Juliet." He maintained that he canceled engagements in Pittsburg to sing with her and that she afterwards refused to pay him.

Was Barred in Nice.

During Mme. Walska's last operatic invasion of Europe the critics were almost uniformly cold in their appraisal of her work and cable dispatches reported that the Mayor of Nice banned her appearance at the opera house there on the ground that she was "no artist." Mme. Walska's Paris appearance will probably be in the Theater des Champs Elysees, which is controlled by McCormick, her husband.

Reporters who went to Mme. Walska's home on Park avenue this afternoon in the hope of clearing up the mystery of McCormick's sudden decision not to sail with his wife, found only a caretaker who said he was closing the place up fo trhe winter. This man said McCormick had gone from the house to the railroad station where he had taken a train, presumably for Chicago.

CLUB OVER HEADS OF COMMISSIONERS

Misuse of High Office to Misconstrue Letter and Spirit of Statute Alleged in Attack.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Giving the Senate today the first chapter of a revelation which he prophesied some time ago would "shock the conscience of the American people," Senator Norris, Progressive Republican, of Nebraska, read into the record a memorandum disclosing the inside history of one of the President's acts in converting the United States Tariff Commission from a fact-finding body into a partisan instrument for the safeguarding of the high protective tariff.

Norris gave it as his considered judgment that "the President, according to his peculiar idea of his duty and his right to control independent bodies, is violating the laws of the land."

The memorandum read by Norris was written by William S. Culbertson, who at the time of its writing was vice chairman of the Tariff Commission and is now, by virtue of having been kicked upstairs, Minister to Rumania. It was sent by Culbertson, together with a covering, explanatory letter, to Edward P. Costigan, a fellow member of the commission, who at that time was in Colorado, his home State, on account of ill health.

No Doubt of Authenticity.

The memorandum and letter, concerning whose authenticity there can be no doubt, throw new and important light on the political philosophy and practices of the President.

Briefly, they show that the President, before giving a recess appointment to Tariff Commissioner David J. Lewis, a Maryland Democrat, during the campaign of 1924, sought to have Lewis put in his hands a written form of resignation, to be used at the President's pleasure.

Culbertson, who is a Republican, wrote in his memorandum, which he entitled a "contemporary memorandum" of an interview he had with the President on the subject of the Lewis appointment, that the President "implied that he desired to use the appointment of Mr. Lewis for trading purposes in case of necessity."

Lewis declined to enter into a secret understanding with the President. He received his commission anyway, but was dropped from office on the opening of the special session of the Senate last March.

Norris said that Lewis, in a talk with him, had corroborated everything in the Culbertson memorandum. He expressed the hope that if an investigation of the Tariff Commission, as proposed in a pending Senate resolution, should be ordered, the committee in charge would summon both Lewis and Culbertson to the witness stand.

Background of Memorandum.

Before giving the Culbertson memorandum and letter in full, it is necessary, for the sake of clearness, to sketch the background against which they were written. This can be adequately done in the language of Senator Norris in his address to the Senate this afternoon.

Norris explained that the Tariff Commission is a quasijudicial body set up by Congress for the purpose of gathering nonpartisan, scientific

MAYOR TO SEEK PUBLIC VIEW ON CAR FRANCHISES

Miller Plans Council Table at Which Citizens, the City and Company Will Be Represented.

THEN TO INSIST ON VOTE BY PEOPLE

Wants Grants to New Concern to Take Over the U. R. to Provide for Service at Cost.

Negotiations for the grant of a new franchise by the city to the St. Louis Public Service Co., as the reorganized United Railways will be known, will ensue shortly at a Council table where Mayor Miller plans to have the city, the public and the railway company represented.

The Mayor outlined in a statement yesterday his conception of the requirements a franchise should include, and said definitely that the people should either initiate or approve by a referendum vote the ordinance under which it is granted.

Mayor Miller said that he planned to ask a committee of five prominent citizens, representing the public, to confer with a committee of the railway operators and members of the Board of Aldermen, Comptroller, City Counselor and Director of Public Utilities, representing the city, on the matter of what the franchise shall grant the operating company.

Ordinance Likely Result.

It is likely, in view of the Mayor's stand, that this committee's conclusions will be incorporated in an ordinance and submitted to public vote.

J. K. Newman, New Orleans investment banker, who is handling the financial phases of the reorganization, arrived in St. Louis yesterday, presumably to take part in the deliberations which will precede a franchise grant.

Mayor Miller offers his approval to a service-at-cost plan which permits of the appointment of a Street Railway Commissioner, representing the city, who will see that operations of the company are at cost. He favors co-ordinated service, presumably of motor bus and street car lines, in order that the greatest amount of service "with the least waste" may be given.

In this connection it is known that the annual report of the United Railways, expected shortly, will show an operating loss of about $250,000 which Receiver Wells has attributed in large part to motor bus competition.

For "Recapture" Provision.

The Mayor further stated that he believed a new franchise should include a recapture provision whereby the city might exercise a right to operate the company itself, or have another company operate it. He said the city should reserve the right to designate the kind and character of service the company should give. He pointed out that all the negotiations at the present time should proceed with a consideration of future requirements in the way of subways or elevated lines.

It is likely that a 50-year franchise will be discussed, providing for co-ordination of busses and street cars, with a provision that investors will receive a fair return. Mayor Miller in his statement points out that the citizens of St. Louis "do not expect something for nothing, but want their money's worth."

More than a year ago the Reorganiaztion Committee conducted negotiations looking toward the purchase of the People's Motorbus Co. for $2,800,000. The negotiations fell through and although there have been frequent rumors about their renewal, no definite step has been taken.

HONOR MEDAL OF CONGRESS SOUGHT FOR MISSOURI HERO

Senator Williams and Representative Cannon Sponsor Bills for Capt. R. D. White, U. S. N.

20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—After receiving hundreds of letters from Missourians, Senator Williams (Rep.) and Representative Clarence Cannon (Dem.) of the Ninth District have introduced bills in the Senate and House asking that a congressional medal of honor be awarded to Capt. Richard Drace White, U. S. N., of Montgomery City, Mo., for his courage and fortitude in navigating the Transport Orizaba from the bridge with an arm and a leg broken and a jaw bone smashed. White is now stationed at the War College here. He has served in the navy for almost 30 years.

MAY BE DECORATED

CAPT. R. D. WHITE, U. S. N.

According to Dr. Connie Wynne, surgeon on the Orizba when a depth bomb exploded prematurely, killing the executive officer and wounding White and a dozen members of the crew, White later maneuvered his ship past two submarines which attempted to torpedo the vessel.

"White was in command of the Orizaba in 1918 when we were going over jammed with troops and with only naval reservists for officers," Wynne is quoted as saying. "The executive officer had devised a method of launching depth charges at a greater distance from the ship, but Capt. White pronounced the method dangerous and forbade him to experiment further.

Officer Blown to Bits.

"Later, however, the executive officer again attempted to set off the firing apparatus. The Captain was warned and came tearing aft, shouting orders to desist. As the Captain neared there was a terrific explosion.

"I rushed to the deck and met some seamen carrying a sheet. I ordered them to lay it down, and looking within I saw the body of the executive officer blown to pieces. A dozen men were frightfully wounded, three of them dying the next day.

"At that moment, hearing a series of terrible grunts I looked around and saw Capt. White attempting to pull himself from the deck by a stanchion. One arm and one leg hung limp. His jaw bone was broken. He was peppered all over with the wounds of flying steel. Unable to speak, he was desperately trying to indicate the danger of a small fire started by the explosion reaching the depth charges along the deck.

"When the fire had been extinguished I had the Captain taken to the sick bay, and stopped his bleeding temporarily. He wrote on a slip of paper, 'Tend to the others first.'

Lashed to a Stanchion.

"I had him carried to his cabin and ordered him to stay there while I attended to the other wounded men. Finally I was informed the Captain was not in his cabin, but was on the bridge.

"I rushed up there and expostulated. He wrote: 'I have no one to navigate the ship.' He had caused himself to be carried to the bridge and tied to a stanchion to hold himself upright though his leg and arm had not been set.

"I had him taken to the sick bay and began work on him. We carried a speaking tube connected with the bridge to the side of the operating table.

"When the Captain had been cared for I had him carried to his cabin and for a week he navigated his ship from there by the pad and pencil and tube method. In that time he fought off two submarines which attempted to torpedo us."

Among those who have asked that White be awarded the highest award for bravery are Dr. J. C. Jones, former president of the University of Missouri; Prof. F. F. Stephens of the history department; Isaac H. Orr of St. Louis; Charles H. Buffum of Louisiana; W. Wallace Fry and Frank Hollingsworth of Mexico.

FOE OF MILITARY TRAINING OUSTED BY SECURITY LEAGUE

Prof. W. B. Otis Resigns As Director At Request of Maj. Gen. Robert Lee Bullard.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Prof. William Bradley Otis of the College of the City of New York tonight resigned as director of the National Security League at the request of the League president, Maj. Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, who opposed Prof. Otis' views against compulsory military training in colleges. Prof. Otis said he would continue to oppose compulsory military training.

While a majority of board of directors concurred with Gen. Bullard in asking for Prof. Otis' resignation, the action was not unanimous. The chairman of the board, S. Stanwood Menken, told Prof. Otis that if the league "cannot have free speech and free thought it had better go out of business."

ACTION IN INSURANCE SUITS

Federal Judge Fitz Henry Settles Certificates of Evidence.

By the Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Jan. 16.—Judge Fitz Henry has settled the certificate of evidence in two of the injunction suits pending before him against the Illinois Bankers' Life Insurance Association of Monmouth, he announced today. The case will be presented as an emergency cause to the Circuit Court of Appeals in a few weeks.

Judge Fitz Henry previously had granted a preliminary injunction preventing the directors from voting certain proxies in a special meeting to contract reinsurance with the Illinois Bankers' Insurance Co., especially organized for the purpose. Judge Fitz Henry also issued a statement to policy holders that their interests would be protected in all actions in the future.

Baltimore Man Says He Lost Funds in Stocks and Horse Racing.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 16.—Embezzlement of $107,550 from Robert Garrett & Sons, banking and brokerage house, was disclosed today with the arrest of Clarence O. Dix, 38-year-old teller. Dix previously had confessed to officials of the firm and repeated his confession to police. He told police he lost in stock speculation and horse racing.

"I am glad they caught me," said Dix, who is married. He declined the services of a lawyer and expressed a desire to be sentenced as soon as possible.

ments on account of war debts or interest, would be applied to it.

Other Charges Made.

In its consideration of the nonpartisan House bill, the committee has made the following additional changes:

Increase in the exemption from the admission tax from 50 to 75 cent tickets.

Repeal of the House provision exempting tickets to spoken drama productions from the admission levy.

Repeal of the stamp taxes on custom house entries and withdrawals and on steamship passage tickets.

Restoration of a two per cent tax on automobile trucks. The House had voted to repeal the present three per cent tax on trucks.

Repeal of the capital stock tax.

Increase of the corporation tax of 12½ per cent to 13 per cent on taxes payable this year and to 13½ per cent on taxes payable after Jan. 11, 1927. This was done to offset the repeal of the corporation tax.

A motion by Senator Shortridge (Rep.), of California, to permit wives and husbands to file separate returns on their incomes in states where community property laws are in effect, was defeated. Such laws are in effect in eight states.

MRS. E. R. BRADLEY DIES ON LINER ON TOUR OF WORLD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 16.—Confirmation of report that Mrs. E. R. Bradley, wife of E. R. Bradley, millionaire owner of Idle Hour Farm near here, had died on the steamer Belgenland, near Shanghai, China, while making a trip around the world, was received in cablegrams by Lexington friends here today. Accompanied by her adopted daughter, Miss Korna Hamon, Mrs. Bradley left Lexington Nov. 22, sailing two days later from New York. Death was due to heart disease.

Col. Bradley is at his hotel resort at Palm Beach, Fla.

Mrs. Bradley was Agnes Currie and was born in Columbia, Mo. She frequently visited relatives in St. Louis. She told friends here before she departed to remember her Jan. 16, as she was going to have a big birthday celebration on the Belgenland. She died on her birthday.

It was while she was a schoolgirl that she met Bradley, about 30 years ago, and they were married in St. Louis.

HOUSE APPROVES DEBT AGREEMENTS WITH FIVE NATIONS

Settlements Involve the Payment of Approximately $600,000,000 to U. S. Over a 62-Year Period.

RESOLUTIONS NOW UP TO THE SENATE

Chief Interest in Proceedings Centered in Belgium the Vote Being 314 to 24 for Acceptance.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The war debt agreements with Belgium, Rumania, Latvia, Esthonia and Czecho-Slovakia, involving approximately $600,000,000, were approved today by the House in rapid succession.

By adopting resolutions to authorize acceptance of the terms recommended by the American Debt Commission, the House disposed of the last of the settlements negotiated during the summer, that with Italy having been approved yesterday.

As sent to the Senate, all of the agreements provide for a funding of the respective obligations over a 62-year period. Including the Italian debt, the United States will receive approximately $3,000,000,000 from the six war loans.

Status of War Loans.

Of the 19 war loans to foreign nations, settlements with Great Britain, Finland, Hungary, Lithuania, Poland and Nicaragua have been ratified by Congress, while the action by the House today brings half a dozen more loans to the last step in their congressional journey.

Of the seven other loans, Austria has been granted a 20-year moratorium, while France, Greece, Liberia and Yugoslavia have as yet to agree finally on their respective settlements. The present Russian Government has repudiated an American loan of $192,000,000, and Armenia, with an obligation of $12,000,000, has ceased to exist as an independent nation.

Interest in the five agreements approved by the House today centered chiefly on that with Belgium, which was accepted by a vote of 314 to 24.

Feeling as to Belgium.

Speaking in favor of the agreement, Representatives Burton (Rep.) of Ohio and Crisp (Dem.) of Georgia, both members of the Debt Commission, described the havoc the World War brought to the little kingdom, while Representative Andrew (Rep.) of Massachusetts asserted he regretted that the United States was alone among nations in asking repayment of money loaned that country while its territory was occupied by German troops.

POLICE SEIZE QUANTITY OF BEER IN "BUCK" KEENAN'S SALOON

Find Only Cracked Ice And Beer Pipes at First, but Negro Porter Gives Them a Hunch

Detective Sergeant Coakley and his rum squad, armed with a search warrant, walked into "Buck" Keenan's saloon at 13 North Seventh street yesterday afternoon, and after the Sergeant read the document to George Hoffman, the barkeepers, the squad searched the place. They found cracked ice and beer pipes in the ice box, but no beer.

They were about to leave when they saw the Negro porter, William Jones, enter an adjoining room. The squad followed and found 3½ barrels of beer and 6 cartons, containing 24 pints, of a like fluid. Hoffman and Jones were arrested, as Keenan was not there.

Last night the squad raided saloons at 1854 Cass avenue and 2145 Chouteau avenue, making five arrests.

Federal prohibition agents last night raided the saloon of David B. Peebles, at Grand boulevard and Couzens avenue, confiscating 450 pints of home-brewed beer and 40 pints of whisky. They arrested Peebles and Thomas J. Foster, of 3100 Clifton place, who was behind the bar.

Norris in Attack on President

data on the tariff for the information of the President and Congress in framing tariff schedules.

"There are those, however," he continued, "who believe that the Tariff Commission should be used as an instrumentality, partisan in its nature, for the purpose of upholding one kind or another view of the tariff. I believe that President Coolidge belongs to that class.

"I have in my mind or in my heart no prejudice of any kind against President Coolidge, and I am not charging him with dishonesty or malice in holding the view that I think he holds, and yet at the same time I do not want anybody to take what I say as an apology for what I do say.

"I think he has misconstrued not only the law but the spirit of the law and that he has undertaken to use his high office in the control of the Tariff Commission contrary to the real spirit and intention of the law itself."

Quotes William Allen White.

Norris then read from a published article in which William Allen White, whom Norris described as one of the best friends of the President, told how the President had "loaded" the Tariff Commission, the Trade Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission with men of his own point of view, and how this illustrated the habitual tendency of the President to place business ahead of justice. The burden of the White article, as read by Norris, was that the President believes that "the business of the American Government is business."

Coming down to cases, Norris recalled that in 1924 the Tariff Commission was prosecuting an important inquiry into the tariff on sugar.

"It is my opinion," he said, "that President Coolidge used the great power of his office to influence the Tariff Commission, which ought to have been absolutely independent of any interference by him or from any other source in the world, for the purpose of delaying the report which was going to be made to the President, recommending a reduction of the tariff on sugar."

Norris went on to explain that the term of David J. Lewis, one of the original members of the commission, expired in September, 1924, during the campaign.

Lewis' Stand on Sugar.

Norris described Lewis as "a man of the highest honor, a man of great ability, a man of unlimited courage and of unlimited industry." It was generally understood, said Norris, that Lewis would join in the recommendation for a lower duty on sugar, though at no time had it been intimated that Lewis was moved to take this course by his personal views.

For the President to fail to reappoint Lewis while the campaign was on, continued Norris, would have been a very bad political stroke, and if he did reappoint him in good faith "then it would become his duty when Congress reconvened to send his name to the Senate."

The President gave Lewis a recess appointment, thereby getting credit in the campaign for fairness and broad-mindedness, but he did not send his name to the Senate during the ensuing session of Congress, and when the special session of the Senate opened last March he sent in the name of another man, who was confirmed.

Norris read to the Senate a significant item which appeared in the "Protectionist," a high tariff organ with which Thomas O. Marvin, chairman of the Tariff Commission, was connected at the time of his original appointment to the commission. This item, published shortly after the President's recess appointment of Lewis, sought to allay any fears that might have been created among protectionists by that action.

"Protectionist" Explanation.

The "Protectionist" said that it was not to be inferred from the naming of Lewis that the President was unaware of conditions within the commission. More than this, the "Protectionist" told its readers, could not be said without violation of confidence, but it begged them to rest assured "that the Tariff Commission will in due time be pulled out of the morass into which it has fallen and that no one who is looking for executive efficiency in that body will be disappointed."

Continuing the story of the President's maneuvering to get a commission to his liking, Norris related that at about the time Lewis' term expired, in September, 1924, Vice Chairman Culbertson, a Republican from Kansas, was called to the White House.

"Commissioner Culbertson," Norris proceeded, "was directed to report to Mr. Lewis that the President was going to reappoint him, but the President had a condition attached to the reappointment. I cannot better give that condition to the Senate and the country than by reading a letter from Mr. Culbertson, written to Mr. Costigan, another member of the commission, then in Colorado."

Norris explained that Culbertson was in the habit of writing memoranda of things that occurred from day to day. He wrote one in this case, and inclosed it in the letter to Costigan at Palmer Lake, Colorado. The letter was on the letter head of the Tariff Commission and was dated Sept. 9, 1924.

Reads Memorandum.

As read by Norris to the Senate, it ran as follows:

"My Dear Costigan:

"You will perhaps have seen today in the press that Mr. Lewis was reappointed yesterday. I reached Washington Sunday evening and had not been in my office very long Monday morning before I was sent for by the President. The result of my interview is covered by a memorandum, a copy of which I inclose.

"When I returned to the office I took the President's suggestion up with Lewis and later he reached the decision that he would not write the letter of resignation requested by the President. He, however, went to see the President during the afternoon and, I presume, he will write you the details of what took place. In general this is what happened."

Norris here broke into the reading of the letter to present the Culbertson memorandum. It was as follows:

"Contemporary memorandum of the interview with the President, Sept. 8, 1924.

"Shortly after I reached my office this morning about 9:30, I received a request over the telephone to come to the White House to see the President. I went over immediately. The President was reasonably cordial. He began by saying that the subject of the interview was Mr. Lewis' reappointment. Mr. Lewis' term as a member of the Tariff Commission expired yesterday.

"The President stated that he intended to reappoint Mr. Lewis, but he desired that Mr. Lewis prepare and give to him a letter of resignation as a member of the Tariff Commission. At first I did not fully comprehend the nature of that request.

President's Explanation.

"I spoke of Mr. Lewis' term having already expired. Then the President explained that he wanted Mr. Lewis to submit his resignation under the new commission to be effective in case he (the President) desires at any time in the future to accept it.

"The President at this point called in Mr. Forster, one of his secretaries, and instructed him to make out Mr. Lewis' commission of reappointment as a member of the Tariff Commission, effective today.

"The President then handed me a sheet of White House paper so that I could take down the tenor of the letter which he wished Mr. Lewis to write. I wrote down the following words: 'I hereby resign as a member of the Tariff Commission to take effect upon your acceptance.'

"I raised the objection at this point that an unqualified resignation of this kind would imply on the record that Mr. Lewis did not desire to continue as a member of the Tariff Commission. The President replied that this was a matter for Mr. Lewis to decide.

"In explanation of his request the President said that he desired to be free after the election concerning the position filled by Mr. Lewis. He said that if he were not elected, the Democrats might undertake to hold up other appointments which he had during the next session of the Senate, and he implied that he desired to use the appointment of Mr. Lewis for trading purposes in case of necessity.

Refused to Give Assurance.

"I thereupon asked the President whether I could have his assurance that if he were re-elected, Mr. Lewis could be continued as a member of the Tariff Commission. He said that he could not at this time make any commitments.

"We then talked of other matters, and at the end the President asked me to have Mr. Lewis see him during the afternoon, when he said he would give him his commission."

The rest of the story is told in the continuation of Culbertson's letter to Costigan, as follows:

"He went in to the President's office and the President had before him the commission. He took up his pen and signed it in Lewis' presence. He then turned to Lewis and asked him whether he had 'that letter.'

"Lewis then explained that he did not feel free to furnish the President with the letter which he requested. Lewis said that the President was visibly disturbed and said with a little heat that it did not make any difference anyway, that the position would be held only at the pleasure of the President.

"Lewis then said to the President that only the two of them knew that the commission was signed and he suggested that the President was at liberty to destroy the commission. The President, however, did not respond to this suggestion and Lewis left the President's office with his commission. A little later he was sworn in.

"Thus ends another curious chapter in the Tariff Commission's history. It indicates clearly, I think, that there is a line beyond which the President will not go in opposing the principles for which the three of us have stood in the development of the Tariff Commission.

"We miss your counsels very much, but I suggest that you stay in the Colorado climate until you are certain that your return here will not bring with it a return of your hay fever.

"Very cordially yours,

"CULBERTSON."

Norris then referred to the fact that Senator Dillon of Washington put into the record the other day "a telegram from the President in which he said in so many words that before he (the President) had appointed a certain man to a position, he had a certain understanding with him and that the man had not carried out that understanding and that therefore he demanded his resignation."

This was Norris' epitome of the case of Bert E. Haney of Oregon, a member of the Shipping Board. Haney was given a recess appointment by the President on the expiration of his term in June 25. He had planned to retire but the President insisted that he stay on the board.

In August the President sent him a peremptory telegram from Massachusetts calling for his resignation. The President gave as his reason that "You (Haney) are proposing to remove Admiral Palmer contrary to the understanding I had with you when I reappointed you."

Haney to Be Removed.

Haney wrote to the President denying that there had been any such understanding and refusing to resign. He is scheduled to be displaced soon by a new appointee.

"I wondered then and I wonder now how many resignations the President is carrying around in his pocket now of men whom he has appointed, who have accepted the conditions which Mr. Lewis refused to accept. To my mind it is an indirect but a very forceful method of influencing the official action of commission and other officials of the Government contrary to their own convictions.

"How many men are there, human as men are, who will under all circumstances fail to deviate from the path that they believe to be right, when they know that the man with their resignations in his pocket wants them to take another course?

"Before this question of the investigation of the Tariff Commission is disposed of I intend to add another which seems to me to demonstrate, even to a greater extent than what I have already said, that the President, according to his peculiar idea of his duty and his right to control independent bodies, is in my judgment violating the laws of the land.

Secret Understandings.

"If we are to have that kind of a Government, if the Tariff Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Shipping Board, are to be controlled and handled through secret understanding with the man who makes the appointment, then why not abolish them all, if that is the right way to do it? And why not extend the principle to the courts? Are there not Judges now sitting upon the bench who have signed resignations that they have placed in the hands of the President? Is this a common thing? Is this secret understanding that the President himself claims he had with Haney common with other officials of the Government?

"These are some of the things that this committee, when it is appointed to investigate the Tariff Commission, will very properly consider."

PLAN TO INVOKE CLOTURE ON COURT ISSUE IN SENATE

Finance Committee Members Want Vote Hastened to Make Way for Tax Reduction Bill.

MOSES RENEWS ATTACK ON FLOOR

Fails, However, to Deprive Question of Its Priority When Upper House Convenes Monday.

y the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—A move to invoke cloture on the World Court issue so as to get it out of the way speedily to make way for the tax reduction bill developed late today in Senate circles.

Some of those initiating the movement said the effort to limit debate to one hour for one speaker might be made Monday. A two-thirds majority would be necessary to make the cloture rule operative.

This subject was discussed today in the Finance Committee with a number of members favoring such a step under the apprehension that some opponents of the court might undertake to delay action on the tax bill if that should displace the Court on the Senate calendar.

Some Democratic Senators are identified with the cloture movement. They conclude that delaying tactics have been resorted to by opponents and that the Senate should act on a matter which has been pending for nearly three years.

Priority Maintained.

An effort to deprive the Court proposal of its position of priority failed today and when Monday's session begins the court resolution will remain the first order of business.

Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, of the old irreconcilable group, who made the only speech on the subject today, sought to produce a situation giving general legislation the right of way on Monday, but on motion of Senator Lenroot, Republican, Wisconsin, the Senate voted to keep the court issue in its position of vantage.

Delivering a prepared address, Senator Moses attacked the World Court as a "league court." It not only is a creature of the League of Nations, he said, but the "lawyer and apologist" for the league as well.

Another reservation to the court resolution was offered by Senator razier, Republican, North Dakota. It would propose establishment of an international "police of the sea," and destruction of all other armed naval craft, and would set forth that American adhesion would be conditional upon the "police of the sea" operating to the satisfaction of the United States.

Under the authority given to the League and the court by the treaty of Versailles, he continued, "there is no question affecting the relations of the United States and other powers concerning which the court may not be required to render any advisory opinion."

"There certainly is no legal obstacle to prevent the Council of the League of Nations from submitting to the court the question of the competence of any of our debtors to pay the money which they owe us," Senator Moses added, "or from asking the court to render an opinion on the subject of immigration or upon the question of our tariffs; and inasmuch as the question of international waterways is expressly dealt with in the treaty of Versailles and the court has special jurisdiction over matters rising out of treaties which have been lodged with it, there is no legal obstacle whatever to bringing before the court the question of tolls in the Panama Canal."

Senator Moses called attention to the fact that a former Finance Minister of Italy, Signor Paralore, writing in an Italian newspaper with reference to the Italian debt to this country, said that if the Italian standpoint was not accepted by this country "we may bring the case before the Permanent Court of International Justice."

00 DEDICATE NEW $300,000 CARPENTERS' UNION BUILDING

Some 1200 members of local and suburban carpenters' unions gathered last night in the auditorium of the new Carpenters' District Building, Grand boulevard and Co- [illegible] avenue, for the dedication of the $300,000 structure.

William L. Hutcheson of Indianapolis, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, spoke of the achievements of the organization since its origin in 1881, and of the proposed plan for providing homes and pensions for aged carpenters.

The meeting was preceded by a banquet at Cafferata's, Delmar boulevard and Hamilton avenue, at which 175 guests were served. Vaudeville and a dance completed the dedication program.

Entire Boston Hotel Moved Thirty Feet

Because it was right on the edge of the street, the Hotel Commodore in Boston was ordered moved back 30 feet. It took a crew of 13 men to turn the jack screws which moved the building one inch with each turn.

SHOOTS EX-PARTNER, THEN KILLS HIMSELF

Sam Dandre Wounds Felix Avondo, Saloonkeeper, After Quarrel Over Woman.

Felix Avondo, 25 years old, a saloonkeeper, of 325 South Broadway, was shot twice and critically wounded at 11 o'clock last night at Sixth and Spruce streets by his former partner, Sam Dandre, 30, of 327 Spruce street, who then killed himself.

The shooting, the police learned, was the culmination of a quarrel between the former friends over a woman who was to marry Avondo tomorrow. Several days ago Dandre withdrew from partnership in a saloon at 615 Spruce street as a result of his quarrel with Avondo and got a job as bartender a few doors east.

The men met last night as Avondo was leaving his saloon. Three shots were fired by Dandre, and the first persons to arrive on the scene found Avonda on the sidewalk. Dandre fled south on Sixth street. A half-block away he stopped and fired a bullet into his heart.

Avonda was shot twice in the abdomen. City Hospital physicians said he had only a slight chance of recovery.

ALLEGED KIDNAPER OF SON OF J. S. CABANNE LOSES PLEA

E. V. B. Von Brandenburg Must Serve Time for Asbestos Mine Swindle, Court Rules.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Prison doors opened again today for Earl Victor Broughton von Brandenburg, former well known magazine writer, ex-officer of the Czar, and convicted swindler, who was acquitted 17 years ago of forging President Cleveland's name to an article said to have been signed just before the President's death.

He was arrested after the Court of Appeals upheld his conviction in 1920 for larceny in connection with a nonexistent "asbestos mine" near Topkinsville, Staten Island. A sentence of two and a half years is ahead of him.

The mine swindle, in which several hundred thousand dollars was lost by investors, was only one of many schemes which put Von Brandenburg behind the bars. In 1909, he was charged with kidnaping the 7-year-old son of James Shepherd Cabanne of St. Louis. He also was charged with a $27,000 fake stock deal and was convicted of forgery.

Miller in Proclamation, Asks All to Observe Program.

Thrift Week begins today. In a proclamation Mayor Miller asks all citizens to observe it. Today is designated as "Share With Others Day"; Monday, "Thrift Day"; Tuesday, "Budget Day"; Wednesday, "Life Insurance Day"; Thursday, "Own Your Own Home Day"; Friday, "Safe Investment Day," and Saturday, "Pay Bills Promptly Day."

The Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Y. M. H. A. and banking organizations are active in promoting Thrift Week.

Class for Girl Scout Leaders.

A demand from hundreds of girls who are under 10 and wish to be Girl Scouts has led to the formation of "Brownie Packs" which take girls from seven to 10. A class for future leaders for "Brownie Packs" will open tomorrow at St. Peter's parish house at 2:30 p. m. and will continue for six weeks. Miss Margaret Shepley, chairman pro-tem of the National Brownie Committee, will give this course. It is open to any girl who is over 21, whether she desires to take a pack or not.

WITNESS TO HOLDUP TELLS OF THREATS

Archie Johnson, Negro, Says Effort Was First Made to Induce Him to Disappear.

Life has been one threat after another for Archie Johnson, a Negro, since March 18, 1925. On that date Archie chanced to be driving his employer's truck past the Pine Lawn Bank, 6149 Natural Bridge road, when he heard a series of revolver shots. Then he saw three armed youths run out of the bank and escape in an automobile driven by a fourth man.

The holdup had netted the robbers nothing, as officials of the bank had refused to be intimidated by revolver shots. Subsequently Bennie Bethel was arrested and identified by Johnson as the youth who had waited at the wheel of the automobile for the holdup men.

Offered Change and Fare.

Not long after Johnson was driving his truck near Pine Lawn when four men in an automobile crowded him to one side of the road. Their spokesman told Johnson he would receive a "piece of change" if he would oblige by not appearing at Bethel's trial. In fact, his railroad fare "to any place" would be paid, in addition to "the piece of change."

But Johnson demurred. "If I don't stay here for the trial they might put me in jail when I come back, and he (Bethel) might as well be in jail as me."

"Well, if you appear, you won't live to get back to Kinloch Park," was the reply of the man as he and his fellows drove away.

Johnson lives in Kinloch Park.

Stopped on County Road.

Threat No. 2 came last Aug. 18. Again Johnson was stopped on a county road by a group of men in a car. He was asked if he was Johnson, the witness, and made emphatic denial. The man who asked the questions placed a revolver to Johnson's head and announced ominously:

"If you was Johnson we had some medicine for you."

With that the men let Johnson go. He did not sleep well that night in his little home in Kinloch Park.

The third threat followed in due time. Johnson was halted in a building in Wellston by three youths.

"Are you Johnson?" one asked.

"Oh, no, you got me wrong."

"Well, tell Johnson we have something to give him."

Reluctant to Talk Now.

Archie Johnson has now reached the point where he's reluctant to talk about the case. For instance, he was sitting in the Sheriff's office at Clayton a few nights ago when a lawyer, who is associated with Bethel's bondsman, stuck his head in the door and said, "How do you do?" The lawyer followed by inviting Johnson out into the corridor for a talk. The invitation was refused.

Last Friday Johnson told Prosecuting Attorney Mueller all about the threats. Mueller told Judge Wurdeman, and the latter is conducting an investigation. Mueller testified in court that John [illegible], bondsman for Bethal, had tried to persuade him to stop the prosecution of Bethel, and had made veiled threats.

Ex-French Ambassador Sails.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Emil Daeschner, retiring French Ambassador, sailed today for France aboard the liner Paris, with Mme. Daeschner and their daughters. M. Daeschner said that Senator Berenger, who has replaced him in the diplomatic post, is on a "purely political mission" here.

STATE TO GO ON TAXING NATIONAL BANK STOCK

Commission Issues Ruling to County Assessors Pending Appeal of St. Louis Case.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 16.—The State Tax Commission today issued a ruling to county assessors to continue their assessments on the capital stock, surplus and undivided profits of national banks in Missouri, pending action in the higher Federal courts on an appeal from a decision by Federal District Judge Faris in St. Louis, invalidating capital stock taxes levied on national banks by the State for 1924.

The commission also recommended that county courts refuse to consider applications of banks for abatements on the ground of erroneous assessments until a final decision was rendered by the higher courts.

These recommendations were made by the commission following reports from several counties that national banks were refusing to pay their 1925 taxes on capital stock, contending they did not have to pay such taxes under Judge Faris' ruling.

In the St. Louis case, six national banks contended the city of St. Louis had no legal authority to collect $757,000 in taxes assessed on their capital stocks for 1924, on the ground the Missouri system of taxing national banks was void because the State had failed to elect one of three alternative methods offered by Federal law for taxation of National Bank stock by the State.

The alternative methods are: a tax on the stock, a tax on the income of the bank or a tax on income of the stockholders from their stock. This case involved taxes assessed on June 1, 1923, and payable at the close of 1924.

ST. LOUIS SINGERS THREATEN TO LEAVE "THE MIRACLE" MO

Firing of One Late-Comer Leads to Talk of Strike, Chorister Explains.

A mobless mob scene in the Inquisition episode of "The Miracle" nearly resulted Thursday night when 40 St. Louisans, members of a male chorus which sings a motif, threatened to quit unless one of their number, who had been dismissed, was reinstated.

According to Louis Lieberstein of 4720 Newberry terrace, for years a singer in the Apollo Club and volunteer choruses, the member was dismissed because he did not arrive in time for the previous mob scene during the revolution, in which there is no singing. Lieberstein remonstrated with Langdon West, stage director and told him the other members would quit if the late member was not reinstated. West complied, but Lieberstein resigned.

Lieberstein complains that St. Louis members of the chorus have not had protection for their property or clothing. Petty thieves have gone through the clothing and taken jewelry and valuables, he said. The local singers are paid $2.50 a performance, but appear only as a matter of civic pride, Lieberstein explained.

Postal Clerks O. K. Hudson Bill.

The St. Louis branch of the United National Association of Postal Clerks indorsed the Hudson bill now before Congress, at a meeting Thursday night at the Marquette Hotel. The bill, prepared by the Association for the Retirement of Untied States Civil Service Employes, provides for option retirement of postal employes after 30 years of service and compulsory retirement at the age of 70, with fixed annuities. It was introduced in the House Dec. 7 and has been referred to the Committee on Civil Service.

U. S. CONTROL OF FARM PRODUCTS ADVOCATED

Two Bills in Congress Would Provide Relief From Violent Price Fluctuations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Farm relief legislation continued to claim considerable attention today in Congress.

Direct government control of grain and other products was proposed in a bill introduced in the Senate by Senator Frazier (Rep.) of North Dakota, and one presented in the House by Representative Little (Dem.) of Kansas. Though dissimilar, the measures both are intended to relieve the farmer of violent price fluctuations and to insure sale of surplus crops.

Senator Frazier's bill would appropriate $200,000,000 to create a Federal Agricultural Marketing Board to handle corn, wheat and cotton. Representative Little's proposal seeks to set aside $100,000,000 for a revolving fund to be used by the Government to establish bonded elevators, store wheat in them, and sell it, at home and abroad, at prices calculated to bring the growers fair returns.

The House Agricultural Committee continued hearings. John P. Wallace and Harvey Ingham, publishers of Des Moines, indorsed the Dickinson bill, which would form a Federal Export Board and levy an equalization tax for disposition of surplus crops. They declared the food supply of the nation was being menaced by agricultural depression.

William Adcock of Galesburg, Ill., representing the Illinois General Assembly, urged an export bounty on wheat, corn and livestock. He also advocated an excise tax on the import tariff to pay for the bounty.

13-YEAR SENTENCE FOR FRAUD

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 16.—Word was received here today that Ted Dickson, president of the Tropical Products Co., operating in Panama, has been sentenced to 13 years' imprisonment here on conviction of criminal fraud. The sentence grew out of attempts by two employes to collect wages which Dickson held was not due them. He was released in bond.

Dickson formerly was a newspaper man, and for a time worked on a Brooklyn newspaper.

Orchids Take a Mud Bath To Brighten Up for Show

Aristocratic Blooms at Shaw's Garden Suffer From Sooty Complexions and Require Treatment the Same as Human Buds.

Orchids, of course, are the blue-blooded aristocrats among flowers, and the collection now on display at Shaw's Garden is the smartest and most complete in the world, with the possible exception of that owned by the Kew Garden of London. All of this is well known. But what is not so well known is the fact that the fresh and dainty specimens of the St. Louis exhibit were treated to a bath of mud in preparation for the show, which opened yesterday. Mud! The haughty plants were literally smeared with it just as gouty bachelors or rheumatic dowagers of the "400" might be.

PICKUP

The purpose of the bath, as for dowager or duke, was chiefly medicinal. Orchids do not have gout or rheumatism, but they do suffer from soot deposits of the St. Louis atmosphere. The soot clogs their pores and they cannot breathe.

George H. Pring, court physician to the orchids by virtue of being horticulturist of the garden, approached the case with the utmost concentration. Plebeian soap and water would not do. Besides, it was whispered in the back halls along Orchid Row the aristocrats were too dirty for mere soap and water. Earth, plain mud, would do the trick, Pring decided—but not ordinary earth. This must be a very fine earth, one that would not mar the silken texture of the blooms.

In time he found an exceptionally fine-grained earth, the very thing. It was moistened to a paste, smeared on the aristocratic foliage, and wiped off. The soot came off with it. Every one of the thousands of orchids at the garden had its mud-bath. It took a month, but how dainty, how fresh and how very aristocratic they looked for the show!

Visitors yesterday were disposed to forget the ordinary brick walk underfoot and the border of retiring primula and narcissus. The blue-bloods among flowers may have suggested to some the jungle and to others the Unattainable Princess. Certainly they suggested to nobody anything ordinary.

Even the atmosphere was not common, for it was instinct with the fragrance of the Flora de Mayo. Light sank softly into the delicate mauve of Colombian Tulipans or glowed in the rich dark throat of Mexican Laelias and seemed to flash back redoubled from the bright lemon lip of the Brazilian tiger orchid.

Orchids hung from dead trees, as they grow in the tropics, and some were on the same branches on which Pring brought them back from the Andes two years ago. White and delicate moth orchids from the Philippines hung beside dun and unlovely monk's-hoods, and beside a bank of slipper orchids from Burma, the East Indies and the Himalayas, weird of shape and grim of color, stood a waxen white "Star of Bethlehem" from Madagascar.

DEPORT ALIENS WHO DON'T LIKE U. S., LONGWORTH URGES

Otherwise, America Was Never More Respected Than Today, He Tells G. O. P. Women.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the House of Representatives, today made a violent attack on enemies of the United States within the country and advocated sending them back to the countries whence they came.

Speaking at the luncheon of the Women's National Republican club, Longworth told the more than 2000 diners that at present there is no danger from any foreign enemy because the United States never was so well respected as it is today.

"And this," he added, "without any definite association of nations."

So far as domestic enemies are concerned, he said he regretted there are some who continually go about sowing seeds of class hatred.

"That is why I am a strong restrictionist on immigration," the speaker continued, "and I would go even stronger than immigration restriction. I would take every one who inculcates Bolsheviki ideas in this country, if it were necessary, to use every available ship and send them back to the lands whence they came."

ADMITS 7 HOLDUPS AFTER IDENTIFICATION

Herbert Jacquemin Says He Robbed Stores and Motorist; Shot Pedestrian.

Confronted by witnesses who made positive identification, Herbert Jacquemin, 25 years old, of 1217 Mississippi avenue, yesterday admitted seven store and street holdups in the past three months, before detectives at Soulard Street Police Station.

His story began with the evening of Nov. 28, when he shot Sam Garanovich of 2150 Lafayette avenue, in the hand, when Garanovich resisted robbery in front of his home. The same evening, Jacquemin compelled Clarence Greenstreet of 2938 Henrietta street, to drive him several blocks and surrender his watch and $12.

His "system," Jacquemin explained, was to perpetrate robberies in the vicinity of his home, taking off his shell-rimmed spectacles before the holdup and putting them on again as he ran home. He was arrested Friday night in front of a grocery at Eighteenth and Hickory streets by detectives who had been watching his movements. In his belt was a loaded revolver. At his home, they found a watch and a pocket knife identified later as property of his victims.

Proprietors of five South Side stores identified him as the robber who took sums ranging from $15 to $40 on occasions in December and January. In two instances, he stole checks which he subsequently cashed at other neighborhood stores.

Highway robbery warrants will be applied for Monday, as well as an assault to kill warrant in the Garanovich case.

NAVY RECRUITING IS ORDERED

Two Hundred Reservists Called to Serve in Campaign.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. — The Navy Department has ordered recruiting resumed on an unlimited basis and is arranging to call back to active service 200 reservists to serve in recruiting offices during the campaign.

The step is necessary because the navy is now down to about 81,000 men and is to be faced this year with an exceptionally large number of enlistments which are to expire by limitation. While the enlisted strength is authorized at 86,000 men, for several months, due to shortage of funds, it has been below that figure. The annual appropriation bill as reported to the House for the next fiscal year, would provide pay for only 82,000.

'SUDDEN DEATH' SHOW AT DRY CELEBRATION

New York Anti-Saloon League Challenges Wets to Show-Down Exposition.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.— In observance of the sixth anniversity of prohibition, the New York Anti-Salooon League held a "sudden death" dinner tonight to show the dangers that lurk in forbidden bottles. Counterfeit labels and strip stamps confiscated in plants devoted to the producing of bootleg liquor from denatured alcohol were exhibited as evidence of "the kind of stuff wets drink."

The original plan to include an exhibit of bootleg liquor fell through when the U. S. District attorney's office refused to co-operate. The dinner was given in honor of William F. (Pussyfoot) Johnson, veteran campaigner for prohibition.

Plans for a "showdown exposition" to be held in New York in June to allow wets and drys to meet in graphic encounter were announced at the dinner by Arthur J. Davis, state superintendent of the dry league. One half of the exposition floor will be left open to the anti-prohibitionists to fill, if they choose, with their own exhibits to offset those being prepared by the prohibitionists.

State to Oppose Car Withdrawal.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 16.—Attorney-General Gentry departed this afternoon for Washington, where he will file a motion in the Supreme Court asking for permission to intervene in a case involving an agreement for withdrawal of a large number of refrigerator cars from railroad lines in Missouri. The suit is between the Wabash and Missouri Pacific Railroad companies, and the American Refrigerator Transit Co., asking the courts to construe an agreement which would permit the refrigerator company to withdraw a large number of cars now in use in Missouri, Gentry said. He declared the Missouri shippers needed more cars than now are provided.

ROBBERS GET $385 IN FOUR HOLDUPS

Kroger Manager Locked in Rear Room—Saloonman Fires at Negro.

Highwaymen obtained a total of $385 and two watches valued at $45 in four holdups of business establishments between 8 and 9 o'clock last night.

At 8:20 three armed men entered a Kroger store at 1108 Bayard avenue, and with revolvers drawn, ordered Robert Haggerty, the manager, and two clerks and a customer into a rear room. While one stood guard, the others looted two cash registers of $45 and the trio escaped.

Half and hour later three men answering the same descriptions visited the grocery of John Kolb, 4070 Juniata avenue. Kolb, his son, Clarence, and his son-in-law, Hugo Hagenow, were forced into a rear room and searched. From Kolb they took $1, from Clarence, $4 and from Hagenow, $40. They then looted the cash register of $145 and ran out. About the same time, two armed robbers entered the furnishing store of Max Benesch at 1000 Franklin avenue and held up Menesch and a clerk Simon Lowenstein, of 4700A Newberry terrace. Two watches valued at $45 were taken from Denesch, and search of Lowenstein yielded an empty pocketbook, the robbers overlooking $16 in another pocket. From the cash register $100 was taken.

Several shots were exchanged when a Negro held up the saloon of Charles Barnei at 541 West Jefferson avenue about 8:50 p. m. Bernei and two customers were lined up facing a rear wall while the robber was looting the cash register of $50. When he ran out, Barnei seized a revolver and fired three shots, which went wild, as did those returned by the robber.

Two Negroes, one of them armed, entered Charles Rosen's tailor shop at 1216 Franklin avenue at 9:45 o'clock yesterday morning and robbed him of $210 in currency, Rosen reported to the police. One of the robbers, Rosen said, was the same who two days before attempted to steal a bolt of goods from his shop.

Fred Bender, 56 years old, 3622 Paris avenue, was struck on the head by one of two men who attempted to hold him up as he wasf walking across Tenth street, near Cass avenue, at 10:30 p. m. He was taken to City Hospital, suffering from three lacerations of the scalp.

WOMAN HURT BY AUTO THAT FAILS TO STOP

Mrs. Anna Meek, Knocked Down When Crossing Street, Suffers Fracture of Skull.

Mrs. Anna Meek, 58 years old, of 9213 South Broadway, was taken to St. Mary's Infirmary yesterday having suffered a fracture of the skull when struck by an automobile, which continued after knocking her to the street. Mrs. Meek was crossing Broadway at Wise avenue.

As he was about to board a northbound street car at Jefferson avenue and Victor street yesterday, Harry W. White, 62, a clerk, of 2228 Gravois avenue, was struck by an automobile driven north by Nelson C. Scott, of 3143A California avenue. White was taken to City Hospital, suffering from internal injuries and a fractured right leg. Scott said the street car started and then stopped, and that he was unable to avoid striking White. He was arrested, charged with careless driving.

Two persons were injured yesterday in an accident at Turner and Sacramento avenues, where an automobile driven by Leroy McGrew, 22, a Negro, of 3145 Clifton place, and occupied by James W. Tully, 31, a florist, of 4162 McRee avenue, collided with a car driven by Frank F. White of 2704 North Twenty-third street. Tully suffered cuts of the scalp and bruises, and was treated at City Hospital. McGrew was taken to City Hospital No. 2, suffering from cuts.

Stefan Rockoran, 55 years old, of 2342 Hickory street, suffered a skull fracture at 6:20 p. m. when he was struck by an automobile belonging to the city water department and driven by Morris Carlic, on Jefferson avenue near Hickory street.

Probationary Patrolman Herman Randeres, 25, of Laclede Avenue Station, suffered a sprained ankle and cuts at 8:25 p. m. at the Lindell cutoff when struck by a machine.

PADEREWSKI

Plays in Recital Thursday Evening January Twenty-first

ODEON

JUST as every appearance of Paderewski is an event of first importance in the music life of a community, so are his public statements heeded as rare and significant utterances of a great world-figure.

The article below, contributed by Paderewski, should be read by everyone who loves and appreciates music. It should be read particularly by parents who wish their children to enjoy the inestimable benefits and advantages of a music understanding.

CULTURAL AND EDUCATIONAL ADVANTAGES OF

The DUO-ART

Reproducing Piano

by I. J. PADEREWSKI

"I HAVE been asked often for suggestions or advice on musical matters; a course of studies for adults or children or some method to help an aspiring pianist. I welcome the present opportunity to advise publicly the general adoption of the instrument known as the Duo-Art Piano.

Of Utmost Significance to Music Study

"I specifically name the Duo-Art, for, while there are a number of reproducing pianos, undoubtedly possessing certain merits, the Duo-Art far surpasses any of these in musical value and in repertoire. In my estimation, this instrument is of utmost significance to music study, whether the aim be simply an understanding and appreciation of the beauties of music, or a determination to make a life struggle to master the art.

Far-Reaching Influence on Musical Taste

"In its broadest aspect, the Duo-Art will exert a far-reaching influence on musical taste. Children in the home possessing the Duo-Art Piano must naturally and unconsciously become discriminating listeners. Hearing frequent repetitions of the great masterpieces as played by skilled performers, the foundation is laid for musical enlightenment which means enjoyment and gratification in later life.

Children Become Discriminating Listeners

"Whatever musical talent a child may possess is stimulated in such an atmosphere, and when lessons begin, the instructor finds a willing and apt pupil instead of one whose view of music is entirely confined to uninspiring exercises and practice.

Invaluable in the Home or Conservatory

"For students, whether in the home or in the conservatory, the Duo-Art is invaluable. While it can in no manner take the place of painstaking and exhaustive studies of manual technique, it teaches the technique of expression most effectively. Through this instrument and its rolls a student may acquire an intimate knowledge of the style of leading pianists, may hear the subtleties of great master works expounded by the most competent authorities.

Aid to Advanced Students

"Another point not to be disregarded is the Duo-Art's aid to advanced students in saving valuable time. There is great temptation to waste precious hours in playing new works, either to get acquainted with them, or simply for the pleasure of hearing them. This time might much better be spent in studying exact details of fingering, pedaling, or phrasing, looking to the Duo-Art for the mere pleasure of hearing works that have no relation to the study being pursued.

A Truly Great Invention

"The Duo-Art is, therefore, a truly great invention. Music does not live until audible. By causing it to live, by exhibiting it in its most beautiful aspects to countless thousands, the Duo-Art is not only a perfect performer, but a precious assistant, a helpful friend whose noble purpose and beneficial influence must be recognized and appreciated."

I. J. Paderewski

BERRIES THRIVING IN ALASKA

Lack of Snow Prevents Shipment of Railroad Ties.

By the Associated Press.

SEWARD, Alaska, Jan. 16.—Strawberry plants and grass crops are growing in the fild, spring-like weather here. At this time last year rotary snow plow crews were fighting snow slides. It was raining today and there was almost no snow on the railroad, except in the high mountain passes.

Because of the lack of snow for sleds, the contractors have been unable to fill their orders. As a result the railroad has ordered thousands of ties from Seattle to be shipped to Seward by water.

FRED CONWAY SKETCH FIRST IN COMPETITION

Pencil Study of Union Station Wins $250 Prize in Post-Dispatch Competition.

Fred Conway's pencil sketch of Union Station and neighboring buildings at Eighteenth and Market streets is the winner of the $250 first prize in the Post-Dispatch Black and White Competition for St. Louis scenes. The award was announced last night at the Artists' Guild, at a dinner which opened the exhibition of entries.

The second prize of $100 was won by O. E. Berninghaus with a pencil sketch of Broadway and Market street, in which the old courthouse is the chief figure. The $50 third prize was won by C. K. Gleason with an etching of the Central States Life Insurance Building at 3207 Washington boulevard.

The entries of Charles Quest, Wallace Bassford and J. J. Eppensteiner got honorable mention. The judges were J. Allen St. John, Elmer A. Frosberg and Frederick Victor Poole, all of the Chicago Art Institute.

Sixty-two artists had exhibits in this year's competition, as against 46 in the first annual contest a year ago. There are 171 pieces on display, as compared with 139 a year ago.

Fred Conway, a newcomer to St. Louis, a teacher at Washington University School of Fine Arts, and his slashing studies of the town he now calls home, would attract attention anywhere. Conway draws with a sensitive, nervous pencil, seeing the essentials and cutting through non-essentials as with a saber stroke. There is modernity in these things, the bits of color from the street, the city life. They have the speed and rush of modern life, the dash and boldness of youth.

And there are the woodcuts of C. W. Jaeger, great stunning masses of brilliant black and white, decorative things, whose massive rhythms reflect the slow and heavy life of the levee or the bending toil of the excavators in modern construction. These works do not represent life. They have a life that is intrinsic to them. Jaeger, who is a worker in the Juvenile Courts, spends his spare time in working out his own destiny in art. These prints have the very feel of the wood block, just as the river front scenes have the very essential feeling of slow weight, of bent backs and heavy burdens, and of long lazy hours of lounging in the sun.

Esther Silber's Work.

Again, there are the pencil studies of Esther Silber, a last year's prize winner—sensitive sketches, sympathetically felt and completely realized from picturesque bits of the older city. And there are characteristic glimpses of the town he loves from the pencil of J. J. Eppensteiner, who sees and makes the onlooker share in his vision of the quaintness of St. Louis.

Tom P. Barnett is represented by "The Tower of Babel," seemingly the artist's conception of the new Bell telephone building. Barnett has realized the essential structural strength, yet has caught the poetry of the mass. So, too, has Wallace Bassford, who emphasizes rather the poetry of the building than its strength. Bassford also is represented by several drawings, characteristic in their poetic moods and in their excellent representation.

There is Oscar Berninghaus' study of the old court house—"Broadway and Market," he calls it—with its wide foreground of pavement and the sooty and dignified old building rising from the busy street.

Charles K. Gleason is represented by several interesting etchings and a few good drawings. He, too, was a prize-winner last year. Another whose work is a delight is Cornelia Maury with two charming etchings, one of them of the doorway to Eugene Field's old home, the other of a Carondelet fireplace; and with two drawings, one in particular of a Carondelet home, of old-world charm. Mrs. Eloise Wells shows a charming glimpse of Fairgrounds pool with the spirit of wide-eyed childhood in the picture, and there is a gay spirited little "Merry-Go-Round" by Anton Ujka.

Those whose pictures are hung are: J. J. Eppensteiner, T. J. Jenkins, T. R. Blow, Leta May Margaret Irish, O. G. Klein, Esther Silber, Lloyd Lueschan, Charles Bruegger, C. W. Jaeger, F. R. Leimkuehler, H. L. Marshall, G. D. Long, John Fagnini, Fred Conway, T. P. Barnett, Carl Stoffregan, Charles Quest, C. K. Gleason, Long Wells, Virginia Frayser, Arthur Krause, Wallace Bassford, Jessie MacNichols, H. M. Orwig Jr., Carl C. Walter, E. G. Schmidt, E. O. Apels, S. H. Stephens, Walter Kunz, Jos. Maury, Arthur Zeiler and Margueretta Brown.

Ideal Climate for Tuberculosis Patients

THE arrest and cure of tuberculosis lies in prolonged rest, proper food, dry clear air, abundant sunshine and the supervision of physicians who have made an intensive study of tuberculosis in all its forms.

Colorado Springs and Manitou, nestling at the foot of Pikes Peak in the American Rockies, offer every one of these requisites. The winters are mild, the summers cool and there is an average of 310 days of healing sunshine annually. The sanitoria and medical equipment represent the latest in scientific research.

At the proper stage of recovery, one may enjoy motoring, horseback riding, hiking, fishing and golf—all in the most beautiful natural surroundings, also music and drama, public and private schools, colleges and up-to-date shops.

At the first signs of tuberculosis, you should consult your physician, then, if practicable to make the change, seek climatic condition favorable to the cure.

Write E. E. Jackson, Secretary of Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce, Colorado Springs, Colo., for booklet "Winning Health in the Pikes Peak Region," and for information as to housing facilities and any other desired data.

NEW PRICES

Studebaker Values Supreme in Quality Sedan Field

THESE new prices on the finest enclosed cars Studebaker ever produced represent reductions of $100 on each model. This is the third time since January 1, 1925, that Studebaker has reduced prices, thereby passing on to purchasers the savings resulting from One-Profit manufacture.

Prices Effective January 14, 1926

Standard Six Sedan (Wool Trimmed)	$1295
Standard Six Sedan (Mohair Trimmed)	$1395
Big Six Sedan (5-Passenger)	$1895
Big Six Sedan (7-Passenger)	$2145
Big Six Brougham	$2095
Big Six Berline	$2225
Big Six Club Coupe	$1650

Freight and war tax extra

Studebaker Sedans are more up-to-date than the newest yearly models because of the Studebaker policy of adding every improvement as soon as developed without waiting for annual announcement.

Studebaker Sedans have been reduced in price without reduction in quality because of these two factors:

1. Studebaker has net assets exceeding $100,000,000 concentrated on the production of One-Profit cars.
2. The vast Studebaker plants have been kept going at capacity during the past year. Sales in 1925 exceeded 136,000 cars--an increase of 23% over 1924.

Savings due to One-Profit, manufacture and volume production enable Studebaker to use the finest alloy steels, Northern ash and hard maple, genuine leather, the best curled hair, plate glass, mohair, wool and other quality materials.

These One-Profit savings insure the maintenance of the highest standards of workmanship and permit many refinements and much extra equipment.

Comparison will prove to you that these fine Unit-Built automobiles equal or excel in quality and in performance cars which sell at prices hundreds of dollars higher.

You cannot judge value by price. Ask for a demonstration in a Studebaker Sedan

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

READER.—Friedrich Nietzsche, a German philosophic writer, was one of the most daring thinkers and charming stylists of the nineteenth century. He was born at Rocken, near Leipzig, in 1844, son of a Protestant pastor of the village, who died when the precocious boy was 5 years of age. He was brought up by his mother at Naumburg on the Saale and studied at the noted state school at Pforta, and then devoted himself to the study of the classics in the universities of Bonn and Leipzig. At 25, on the recommendation of Ritschl, he became professor extraordinarius of classical philosophy at Basel and shortly afterwards was promoted to be professor ordinarius there—a post which he was forced to resign in 1879 because of an affection of his eyes. Meanwhile Nietzche had made the acquaintance of Wagner and became an ardent advocate of Schopenhauer's theories of art. During this period, which was brief and immature, the only work of importance he wrote was "Geburt der Tragodie aus dem Geiste der Musik" (1872), in which he maintained that both Dionysiac (orgiastic) and Apollonic (temperate) motifs contributed to the origination of Attic tragedy. The book might be termed a defense of Wagner's program. But shortly thereafter came a breach between Nietzche and Wagner, said to be due to Wagner's compromise with success. With the loss of faith in Wagner, he lost faith in God and in Christianity, in traditional morality, and in current human ideals, and ended by defying passion and despising reason. He went so far as to say that untruth of a view is not a valid objection to it if only it be useful, and that the falsest views are often the most useful. Satisfaction of instincts became his ideal; we must, he maintained, at all hazards, realize the will to dominate (der Wille zur Macht). The moral man who lives for others is a weakling, a degenerate. The lordly egoist who exploits other men and rises on stepping stones of their dead selves to higher things is the proper human ideal, the over-man (Uebermensch). The evolution of Nitezche's thought, which culminated in this idealization of the inhumane victor in the struggle for existence, can be traced in his "Menschliches, Allzumenschliches, ein Buch fur freie Geister." After Nietzche left Basel he lived for several years in Turin; in 1889 it became evident that his brain was affected, partly due to hereditary causes and partly to the abuse of soporifics. He retired to his mother's home near Weimar, where he was cared for by his sister until his death, in 1900. Nietzche accepted the struggle for existence as an ultimate fact which man ought not to attempt to ameliorate. His popularity is due partly to this hyper-Darwinianism, but more largely, since such a doctrine is against the predominant spirit of humanity of the present age, to his fascinating literary style. He is a great prose poet. His books can be obtained at the Public Library.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

MRS. M.—We regret that we cannot advise you regarding the estate. Consult your lawyer and follow his advice.

C. R. S.—(1) The Missouri law would not recognize the marriage of first cousins. (2) In Illinois the law declares such a marriage to be incestuous and void. It could be annulled.

MRS. P. M.—We have no information regarding the concern in question. Probably it is under the supervision of the State Finance Commission. You might write to him at Jefferson City, Mo., for the information.

H. R. — A foot peddler's or hawker's license is necessary to sell the eggs from house to house. This costs $10 per year or $5 for six months. Inquire at the License Collector's office, Room 102, City Hall.

PETER J.—They can compel you to take the outfit for the other two rooms, if you agreed to do so, and if the furniture they offer you is what they represented it to be.

MRS. J. T.—(1) An owner or tenant of farm land, used exclusively for agricultural purposes, and members of his family, can hunt on his land without a license. (2) He cannot sell fur without a license. (3) If he was unlawfully arrested he can sue for damages.

O. S.—You can sue your wife's mother and sister for damages for alienation of her affections. You can sue for divorce and, if you have the evidence stated in your letter, you could probably obtain custody of the child, provided that you are able to take care of it properly. You should consult a lawyer.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

MRS. I. O. Q.—The answer to your first question is "No." (2) The doctor can tell whether the operation has been performed or not. (3) There is a cure for the disease in question. Consult a reputable physician.

BEN.—All devices intended for correction of rupture are mechanical and no definite or certain cure can be expected; some devices, if properly fitted, give some relief. A cure can only be obtained through surgery. As to the one you refer to, cannot say that it is superior to the others invented for the same purpose or that it will fulfill the claims of manufacturers.

C. J. E. — The blushing, fears, etc., that you mention are due, of course, to a high nervous tension which may be the result of different causes. Among which are mentioned herewith: Overwork, worry, dissipation, bad and irregular hours for meals and sleep, and last but not least by any means, excessive or abnormal indulgence in improper acts. The remedy for any of these naturally suggests itself. (2) You state that the excessive perspiring is confined to the arm pits, but I imagine it is oftentimes quite general. Dusting under the arms night and morning after thorough washing with carbolate soap and water or a powder composed of equal parts of boracic acid and subnitrate of bismuth should be of benefit. However, this, like your other trouble, will tend to disappear when the errors in your mode of life have been corrected and your standard of health brought to a normal level.

In sweet remembrance of our darling mother and grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Reden, who passed away Jan. 15, 1924.
REDEN FAMILY.

Sacred to the memory of Alpha Paulina Ritchey, who passed away Jan. 18, 1923.
Always missed by HER DAUGHTERS. (c)

In loving memory of my dear husband and father, Charles Edward Schaan, who departed this life one year ago, Jan. 14, 1925. Sadly missed by WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In loving remembrance of our dear son and brother, Edmond F. Grund, who passed into eternal rest Jan. 15, 1920.
Gone but not forgotten.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, FATHER, BROTHER.

In memory of Lottie Case:
'Neath our eyes she faded quickly,
Growing day by day more frail;
Bearing sweetly all her sufferings
Without murmur, moan or wail.
Sadly missed by MOTHER.

An anniversary solemn high mass of requiem will be celebrated at Visitation Church for Patrick J. Lavin on Saturday, Jan. 23, at 8 o'clock. The deceased was a member of the Paulian Council, K. of C. (c)

In loving memory of my dear wife and mother, Ida Brecht, who died Jan. 18, 1925.
A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled.
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dear devoted daughter, Lottie Otto-La Velle, who died Jan. 15, 1925.
Lottie dear, how we miss you
Since from earth you passed away,
Sad our hearts, but sweet the memory
As we think of you each day.
MOTHER AND FATHER.

In loving memory of our dear husband, father and grandfather, Joseph Merkel, who departed this life Jan. 16, 1924:
A precious one from us has gone,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
You shall never be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade.
Sadly missed by: Wife, Mary Merkel, Children and Grandchildren.

In memory of Benjamin Vogel, who departed this life Jan. 17, 1925.
'Tis sweet to be remembered and a pleasant thing to find
That, though you may be absent, you still are kept in mind.
You shall never be forgotten, never from our memory fade;
Loving hearts will always linger around the grave where you are laid.
Sadly missed by
SONS AND DAUGHTERS.

In loving memory of Michael Joseph Streib, age 10, who departed this life Jan. 16, 1925.
They say he died one year ago,
Our hearts were filled with bitter woe,
That one so young must leave.
Tho gentle time may ease our lot,
Our comfort still is in the thought—
He is not dead—
He only sleeps amid the leaves.
Sadly missed by MOTHER, FATHER, SISTERS AND BROTHER.

In loving memory of our dear daughter, Rose Briesacher (nee Samona) who departed this life five years ago, Jan. 14, 1921.
She bid no one a last farewell,
She said goodbye to none,
Her loving heart had ceased to beat,
Before we knew she was gone.
Her cheery smile and kindly ways
Are pleasant to recall.
She had a kind word for each one
And died beloved by all.
Sadly missed by her Father and Mother Samona.

In memory of my beloved wife, our dear mother and sister, Minnie B. Quante, who departed this life two years ago, Jan. 15, 1924:
Days of sadness oft come o'er us,
Tears in silence often flow;
Love shall always keep you near us,
Though you left two years ago.
Never shall you be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade.
Loving hearts shall always linger
Around the grave where you are laid.
Sadly missed by FAMILY. (c)

LOUIS RAHE AND CHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Louise Saborosch, who departed this life one year ago, Jan. 14, 1925.
The golden sun is shining
Upon dear mother's grave.
One we loved so dearly,
Tried so hard to save.
When we lost dear mother
We lost our dearest pal.
We love and miss you,
And forever shall.
So rest in peace, dear mother,
Your place in heavenly bower.
The day when we shall meet
Grows nearer every hour.
Sadly missed by
SONS, DAUGHTER AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

ARE YOU A $5000 MAN?
[illegible]ll make you a $10,000—$20,000 [illegible]oducer—On a Permanent Basis!

We've just completed another splendid year—and ten more of our Field Men have been developed and promoted to District Managerships!

These new District Managers leave vacant the fine territories that have already given them Big Money—and in those territories we want to place others who will be given the same opportunity for immediate big earnings and the same opportunity for prompt progress.

You're familiar with the "usual" Fine Story, that sometimes can't be backed with facts. Ours is, however, a Fine Story of the kind that is rarely listened to—and we back every word of it with PROOF in Black and White.

Proof of what? Proof that—first, ours is the largest industrial service Organization of its kind in the world. Second—our clientele numbers tens of thousands of the country's foremost business organizations—and for those organizations, during the past ten years, we have cut payroll losses and overhead expense, increased production and net profits, and developed remarkable economies totaling hundreds of thousands of dollars. Executives of these clients say so over their own signatures!

To carry on this work we need men between 30 and 40 years of age. Men who can call on Chief Executive Heads of business—dominate those men—and sell them in the first interview. If YOU, for example, have a background of $5000-a-year-or-more earning ability, and can vision and sell a Big Idea that is merchandised only on proof of every statement made—then you're our kind of a man! If you haven't such qualifications, please don't waste our time or yours.

The new men we take on will be put in training at once—and paid while learning the go-getter knacks and fine points of our Sales Talk. They will be given Exclusive Contracts, with full credit on all renewal business in their territories—and immediately connected with an earning capacity of ten to twenty thousand dollars per year. That's what the "average man" is earning in his business.

Are you making less now than you WANT to make? Can you meet our specifications? Then let's both GET ACTION at once.

Phone or write Mr. V. J. McGuire, Hotel Statler, for appointment, Sunday and Monday. (c)

LOCAL STOCK TRADE SHOWS MIXED CHANGES

Gains and Losses About Equal in Number Among the More Active Securities on the Local Exchanges.

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, Jan. 16.—The week closed on the local market with about as many securities showing net losses for the six days trading as there advances for the period while a somewhat similar number finished the week on an unchanged basis.

The total volume of trading in any individual issue did not quite reach 1500 shares. International Shoe common and Johansen Shoe reflected the widest individual price ranges. Missouri-Portland gained more than point.

United Railways preferred certificates of deposit were traded in to extent of 800 shares, but a net decline was shown at the close.

There was a small sale of a City of St. Louis issue, the first for some time.

WIDE RANGES SHOWN IN WEEK'S TRADE ON CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The week's trading on the Curb Exchange was marked by wide fluctuations in the important groups and in many special issues. Public utilities, which continued directly influenced by the various arrangements for mergers and consolidations as well as by recently announced readjustment of capitalization and large stock dividends, traveled over a wide range. Many made advances of 5 to 10 points in the first half of the week, but reacted after that period, when other trading groups, including the Stock Exchange, became acutely unsettled and irregular.

The oil stocks were heavily traded again, some issues showing pronounced strength. The chief force consists of the further reduction in the output of crude oil and the indications of advances in crude oil and petroleum products coming coincident with decreased production and increased consumption. This situation attracted attention to development work in many fields, including the Panhandle of Texas, in which there has been heavy increases in land values including the properties owned or controlled by Gibson Oil. Over 90 wells are now in process of drilling in that territory. Tropical Oils were also in urgent demand, American Maracaibo making a new high record. Humble Oil, after its recent display of strength, was in supply in large volume and yielded over 6 points to below 90. Standard Oil of Indiana was in steady demand in the first few days, when it rose over 2 points to above 68, but when the market became irregular, lost about half its gain.

United Gas Improvement was a feature in the utility groups, advancing 14 points to above 134. Lehigh Power had an advance of 17 points to above 237 and then declined 10 points. Northern Ohio Power was heavily traded all through the week, advancing over 7 points to above 26 and then having a sharp reaction.

Glen Alden Coal yielded 14 points to 150¾ on the announcement of the failure of the miners' conference, and Lehigh Valley Coal, which had been strong for a time, dropped from 44 to 4●. Bond sales were on an extremely large scale over 100 different issues being dealt in daily.

COTTON SELLS HIGHER ON NEW YORK MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The cotton market was featured today by continued firmness of near months. March contracts sold up to 20.50, or 20 points net higher, and within 3 points of the best price touched on the advance in late November. They closed at 20.46, or 215 points over the price of October, compared with a difference of 204 points at the close of the previous day. The general market closed steady, at net advances of 4 to 16 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 4 to 13 points and soon showed net gains of 7 to 20 points and covering, promoted by steadiness in Liverpool, reports of continued good demand for cotton cloths in Manchester from India and China, and encouraging week-end reviews of the domestic goods markets. This early advance attracted week-end realizing. There also may have been a little local selling on prospects for rain in the Southwest over Sunday as there have been complaints of insufficient rainfall in some parts of Texas during the past two months.

Offerings were light, however, and after reacting to about Friday's closing prices, the market firmed up again on renewed covering by near month shorts, May making a new high price for the day in late trading. That delivery sold up to 19.90, while the advance in October was checked around 18.34 partly on selling by purchasers of old crop months. Last prices were within a few points of the best.

Reports of increasing firmness in the Southern spot markets, combined with the continued absence of any evidence of shipments here for contract delivery and expectations of further exports out of the local stock, were believed responsible for the near month buying.

Private cables from Liverpool reported rallying, covering and continental buyer in futures, but only a small spot demand from spinners and exporters.

Egyptian cotton in the Liverpool market was 30 points higher and there was an advance of 10 points in the Liverpool market for Indian cotton.

MODERATE CHANGES IN LIVESTOCK PRICES

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last wk.	Pr. wk.	Yr. ago.
Cattle and calves	28,927	26,420	18,641
Hogs	79,123	81,673	91,307
Sheep	8,325	8,488	4,644
Horses and mules	2,188	2,257	2,485
Total	118,563	118,838	117,077

Only moderate changes occurred in livestock prices at the St. Louis National Stockyards during the past week. Receipts were an average in the various departments. Cattle markets were uneven throughout the period, with the tendency lower in some departments. Beef steers closed about steady on the plain and medium offerings, although some of the heavier grades declined 25c or more. A spread of $8.50 to $9.50 per cwt. covered most of the steers offered, and some of the better consignments reached $10.00, $10.40 and $10.65 per cwt. The latter price, or top went for a 1392-pound drove. Light steers and heifers, in generous supply, broke 25c. Quality was fair and the majority of the sales were $7 to $8.50, with best lots making $9.25, $10, $10.10 and $10.60. Beef cows were higher the fore part of the week, but closed minus the early gains. The closing bulk was $5 to $6.50. Canner and cutter cows strengthened slightly, cutters closing at $3.75 to $4.50 and canners at $3.40 to $3.75. A strong market prevailed for bulls. Bolognas were most numerous at $5 to $6, followed by light-weight and canner offerings around $4 and $4.50. Choice weighty beef animals scored upward to $7. Stocker and feeders steers, in limited supply, again developed strength under an active demand. The best offerings scored in the $7 column, and a few were good enough to bring $8 to $8.50. Plainer graded graduated down to $6. From a $13.50 basis at the week's opening, choice veal calves strengthened to a $13.50 to $14 basis on the close. Southern canner yearlings appreciated 25c to 75c, offerings selling in a spread of $4.25 to $5.50.

Hog Prices Irregular.

Buyers made a determined effort the past week to secure a sharp break in hog prices, and, while they succeeded to some extent during the week's latter sessions, early advances were more than adequate to offset the declines later on. Light receipts, especially of the shipping weight hogs was a feature of the week's trade, and was largely responsible for the difficulty buyers experienced in breaking prices. The excessive supply of corn that farmers now have on hand is the reason for this deficit in receipts, feeders finding it more profitable to market their grain as pork. Receipts this week at 11 markets were considerably lighter than the previous week and showed an abrupt decrease from a year ago. Compared with last week a drop of 71,860 is shown, with a decrease of 288,740 from the corresponding week last year. Eastern orders were of good volume this week and furnished plenty of competition for packers on the medium and light hogs, prices on these weights showing an advance for the week. Closing top is $13 on lights and pigs, with the bulk of sales on 160 to 190 pound hogs at $12.65 to $12.90, showing a gain of 15c to 25c. The top of $13 is the highest figure paid locally since October of 1925. Medium weight butchers are closing the week on a basis of 15c to 25c higher, also, sales of 190 to 220 pound averages at $12.15 to $12.60. Heavy butchers are 10c to 15c higher at the close, with sales on 230 pounds and up ranging from $11.75 to $12 mostly. Pigs were uneven throughout the week, with a very light supply supporting prices. Good 130 to 150 pound averages bulked at $12.75 to $12.90, with a top of $13. Plainer and light pigs ranged downward to $11.50, with Southern kinds as low as $10. Sows were strong to 25c higher for the week at $10 to $10.35, stags showing no change at $8 to $9 mainly. Closing quotations for the week are as follows: Good butchers, 230 pounds and over, $11.75 to $12.10; medium weights, 200 to 220 pounds, $12.10 to $12.50; lighter kinds, 160 to 190 pounds, $12.60 to $13. Pigs $11.50 to $13, all weights; sows $10 to $10.35, and stags $8 to $9.

Lamb prices throughout the West showed a weaker tendency throughout the week just closed but the selling end of the trade put up a stubborn resistance and little progress was made by killers. Receipts were of fair volume both locally and at other Western points, 11 markets showing a decrease from the previous week but running heavier than a year ago. There was a right good showing made in regards to quality, a big proportion of the run being Western lambs with a fair representation of local fed stuff also. Top to local butcher reached $16 for a few head during the middle of the week, but packers held their top down to $15.85 for several lots of choice Westerns. This figure was lowered to $15.75 by the Thursday session and declines on native lambs that made up the Friday supply would indicate a peak of $15.50 on the week's close. Bulk of sales for the week was wide at $15.25 to $15.75. Yearlings were here in modest numbers and prices showed a stronger trend on this class. Late in the week a top of $14 was registered on some fancy lamb weight offerings with others ranging from $13.75 down to $12.50. A consignment of clipped yearlings brought $12. Two-year-olds brought $11 to $11.50 with aged kinds at $10. Mutton sheep were firm with some advance amounting to approximately 25c registered on the best kinds. Light offerings of fair flesh sold up to $8.75 with the bulk of sales at $7.50 to $8.50 on all kinds. The plainer grades such as choppers and canners showed no change, bucks also maintaining a steady basis.

Good to choice lambs closed the week quotable at $14.50 to $15.50; medium to good, $13.50 to $14.50; plain and medium, $12.50 to 13.50; cull and common, $10 to $12; skins, $5 to $9; good to choice yearlings at $12.75 to $13.75; medium to good, $11.75 to $12.75; plain to medium, $10.75 to $11.75, and culls, $8 to $10; good to choice mutton ewes, $7 to $9; medium to good, $7 to $8; plain to medium, $6 to $7. Choppers and bucks, $3 to $5; canners, $1 to $3. Fat goats, $3 to $3.50; thin and common goats, $1 to $2.50; kids, $5 to $7.

WEAKNESS SHOWN BY WHEAT AT WEEK-END

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—The weakness in wheat today was due to lack of news to rouse buying power. Pressure to sell was not heavy, but except for intervals when the market ran into limited orders, there was little demand. The close was 1⅛c to 2⅛c lower and for the week ¾c to 4⅛c lower. New May $1.73⅜ to $1.73½, old $1.71¼, July $1.50½ to $1.50⅝, September, $1.43¼ to $1.43¼.

Commission houses were on both sides at the opening, resting orders at $1.75 to buy new May giving the market a steady appearance for a time. Selling, however persisted while buying gave out and prices broke over 2c from the top before buying against indemnities proved sufficient to stay the decline. Foreign demand was at a standstill and Liverpool was easier than expected. The official Argentine crop report was moderately bearish. It gave now figures but said that 80 per cent of the crop is cut and yields range from 7.4 to 32.8 bushels an acre. The outrun is generally very satisfactory but mostly of light weight. Cash wheat premiums here are strong and mills took 17,000 bushels. Since Monday 182,000 bushels have been cancelled for shipment out of store. Minneapolis stocks decreased 20,000 bushels for one day.

Corn was weak. Liquidation was general by local and Eastern longs and buying limited. The close was 1½c to 1⅝c lower, making losses of 4¼c to 5c for the week. May 83⅜c to 83½c, July 86⅛c to 86c, September 86¼c.

The cash situation is weak and discounts on low grade were the widest on the crop showing a loss of 1c from yesterday. Receipts were heavy the estimate being for 535 cars and the forecast is for nearly 1000 cars on Monday. Shipping sales were 53,000 bushels.

Trade in oats was so light that it was unimportant. Prices moved within ⅝c range all day. The action of other grains had a depressing effect. Closing prices were ⅜c to ⅝c lower and for the week ⅝c. Shipping sales were 68,000 bushels.

Provisions were higher on buying by commission houses and cash interests. Lard stocks increased 4,000,000 pounds the first of January while ribs were 8000 pounds heavier and bellies about a stand off. Lard closed 7½c to 12½c higher.

VEGETABLE MARKET

Potatoes Easier in Light Week-End Trade.

ST. LOUIS PRODUCE ROW, Jan. 16.—Potatoes were easier in a quiet trade. Buyers were not inclined to take anything but real fancy stock. Unseasonably mild weather prevailed. There was some pressure to sell. The few sales reported indicated declines of 10c to 15c. Sales were one car of Idaho russet burbanks at $4 invoice weights and per 100 lbs. delivered; two loads Colorado red McLures at $4.25; load Idoha russet Burbanks at $4.10; load Idaho russet Burbanks at $4 and two loads selected Idaho russet Burbanks (yesterday) at $4.25.

Sweet potatoes were dull.

Potato price range: Colorado russet burbanks, $4.25; McClure's $4.25; Nebraska triumphs, $4.25; Idaho russet burbanks $4 to $4.25; Minnesota russet burbanks $4 to $4.25 [illegible]

WHEAT PRICE DOWN ON LOCAL MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Jan. 16.—Wheat and corn futures closed lower on the local market today reflecting slowness of export demand for wheat, further talk of Russian offerings of wheat, relative easiness in foreign markets and liberal corn movement to Chicago which affected that market.

In the local cash grain market soft wheat and hard were both 1c lower. Offerings were light and demand limited. Corn was 2c to 3c lower. Demand was good. Oats were ½c to 1c lower. Demand was [illegible]

A lower range of full cent marked the early trade in wheat, the current delivery of corn also being down. Liverpool closed unchanged to ⅛d lower. Winnipeg was ⅝c lower.

May wheat opened at $1.76⅜. July wheat $1.51⅛. May corn 84⅛c and July corn 86⅝c.

The three Northwestern markets combined had 741 cars of wheat, compared with 1310 a week ago and 552 last year, Minneapolis receiving 291 cars, Duluth 42 and Winnipeg 408.

Local wheat receipts, which were [illegible] bushels, compared with 102,200 a week ago and 91,000 last year, included 23 cars local and 37 through. Corn receipts which were 92,400 bushels, compared with [illegible] a week ago and 142,800 last year, included 61 cars local and 5 through. Oats receipts which were 108,000 bushels, compared with 80,000 a week ago and 174,000 last year included 30 cars local and 24 through. Hay receipts were 29 cars local and 12 through.

Primary receipts of wheat were 783,000 bushels, compared with 924,000 a week ago and 1,020,000 last year. Corn receipts were 1,311,000 bushels, compared with 1,013,000 a week ago and 1,170,000 last year. Oats receipts were [illegible] bushels, compared with 673,000 a week ago and 720,000 last year. Wheat shipments weer 513,000 bushels, compared with 450,000 a week ago and [illegible] last year. Corn shipments were 383,000 bushels, compared with 401,000 a week ago and 505,000 last year. Oats shipments were 440,000 bushels, compared with 514,000 a week ago and 551,000 last year.

Clearances were 35,000 bushels of wheat, 193,000 bushels of corn, [illegible] barrels of flour and 80,000 bushels of wheat and flour.

REAL STOCK PRICE TREND OBSCURED

Movement on New York Exchange So Far This Year Irregular Due to Opposing Forces in Market.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Without realizing it, followers of the market are beginning to fall more definitely into one or the other of two lines of march that lead to opposing camps. For somewhat more than a year opinion in quarters where market trends are watched regularly has been, except for temporary periods, overwhelmingly bullish. Perhaps a majority of the persons active in stocks still favor the constructive side, but the proportion of bulls has been substantially reduced in recent weeks. Indeed, for the first time since the present bull market really found its stride, the camp of the bears has been able to draw into its fold many persons who still are optimistic on the future of business but skeptical on the market. In consequence operators find it more difficult than formerly to put prices up, for when they attempt to do so indiscriminately they only release large offerings of stock which must be absorbed. The result of all this is that prices in the stock market for the year to date have moved irregularly, and, with the declines offsetting the advances, it would take a delicate index indeed to reveal whether the market as a whole is moving upward or downward.

Stock Trend and Money.

"Certainly the flow of January investment funds has failed in volume during the last 10 days, and, although now about at the high seasonal point, it has not been strong enough to lift the market to peak levels for the movement. That the stimulating effect of the funds has been offset in part by the action of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in raising its rediscount rate is plain, but of course money still is cheap, even if not so cheap as it was when the bull market was strongest. Whatever objective may have been in the minds of the Federal Reserve authorities in picking early January as a time to act, the effect has been highly favorable from the standpoints of those that lean on the side of conservatism. By calling attention forcibly to the fact that funds for speculative purposes from now on will not be available in such abundance as before, the Federal Reserve System, and particularly the institution at New York, has checked a movement in stocks that in this instance might have become dangerous. As money conditions gradually tighten, speculators more and more will make business conditions the basis for their market commitments. Such a foundation for prices is more lasting than one built on the basis primarily of cheap money.

Problem of Auto Output.

"In the world of business all eyes for a week have been turned on the automobile industry, for, it must be admitted, the New York showing of 1926 models has stimulated a broader interest than had been expected. Even when allowance is made for expressions of optimism calculated to arouse interest, the actual count of orders taken indicates that sales are running impressively higher than a year ago. Perhaps it would be better if the industry was not so cheerful over its immediate future, for in their present mood the builders will not hold production schedules down, in all instances, to a conservative basis. The thought appears to be to move fast while the going is good. All of which is well enough if the country can absorb another record volume of new cars in 1926, but somewhat disturbing as is possible, the rate of growth tapers off before the end of the year. Already we note a disposition to stimulate sales by price cuts, but meanwhile the different companies are proceeding to build more cars than usual for the winter season. In the building industry, too, activity continues at a record pace.

Opening Actively Greater.

"That our general state of trade and industry as 1926 begins reflects greater activity by considerable than a year ago must be clear, but the comparison is not especially illuminating. The country is busier now than it was early in 1925 in the two major industries responsible for prosperity and mentioned above, but of course both the motor and building industries started 1925 rather modestly. It was not until later in the year that they became brisk. Exceptional activity in these lines represents a carry-over in momentum from the autumn of last year, but to what degree it also reflects the demands of the new year we shall know better in a few months than now. For the moment we must be content in the knowledge that we are beginning 1926 in a manner very different from that in which we began 1925. Business now is moving fast, but a pretty high rate of activity already has been developed whereas business a year ago started at a more moderate pace and gained momentum as time went on."

Sagging Tendency Saturday.

"Feeble rallies failed to stimulate renewed buying in moderately active trading on the stock market today and selling for the decline by professionals who saw greater prospects of profits on the short side gained momentum. Motor stocks were again under pressure and although manu industrials received good support at times, the general list was inclined to sag. Close observers insisted the market appeared tired after its climb through December and the first week of the new year and was in a vulnerable position, therefore, to selling pressure. Little attention was paid to reports of improvements in commercial circles and to expectations of continued easy money. Trading in bonds was quiet and prices held within narrow limits. Some slackening in the demand for investments was noted, reflecting expectations of a large number of new issues to be offered for public subscription.

Bears Still in Control.

"Encouraged by the progress made yesterday in depressing prices of leading speculative favorites, traders launched another drive against vulnerable industrial stocks and specialties at the opening. Commission house experts were inclined to believe that liquidation had not been completed for the time and continued to suggest lightening of commitments. As a result support was meager and new low prices for the week were established in many of the market leaders. Rails showed greater resistance, many speculators holding to the view that those who had made profits in industrials would switch to the carriers if given any encouragement. Atchison and several others were supported. Further profit-taking and selling pressure in the industrial group brought about considerable irregularity. A few specialties continued in demand, but in the main traders were inclined to let the market drift.

Foreign Exchanges Steady.

"Demand for remittances on European centers continued firm in quiet trading, rates on London holding around the high point of the movement. Japanese exchange provided the feature, however, with another spurt to 44⅝c, the highest quotation in two years. The European list was steady.

Excess in Reserves $25,000,000.

"Clear evidence of the ease in the money market was furnished in the weekly statment of the weekly statement of the Clearing House banks, showing an increase in surplus of $54,723,900 and bringing about an excess in reserves of $25,210,560, eliminating deficits of the last two weeks. Loans, discounts, etc., decreased $56,393,000."

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—In the following table will be found a list of sales, highest, lowest and closing prices of bonds traded in on the Stock Exchange today, sales being in $1000 lots (000 omitted):

Quotations on all United States Liberty bonds are in dollars and thirty-seconds of a dollar; that is, for instance, a sale printed 99—24 means $99 and twenty-four thirty-seconds of a dollar, and not $99.24.

Total sales today were $7,274,000, against $12,900,000 yesterday, $7,365,000 a week ago, $8,593,000 a year ago, and $9,113,000 two years ago. From Jan. 1 to date sales were $148,006,000, against $204,128,000 a year ago, and $211,858,000 two years ago.

BANKHEAD HOTEL
(Birmingham, Alabama)
First Mortgage 7s at 100 to Yield 7.00%
Maturing Serially Nov. 1, 1927-40

Secured by a closed first mortgage on the 15-story hotel building being erected on one of Birmingham's principal thoroughfares. Total valuation of property, building and equipment has been placed at $1,575,000, making this issue a 60% loan. Because of the large margin of physical security, the constant reduction of the loan under the serial payment plan, without releasing any of the security, and the full seven per cent yield, we recommend these bonds as an unusually attractive investment.

FIVE $5000 STAKES VOTED BY DIRECTORS

Expansion Program to Link Fairmount With Louisville, Latonia and Washington Park Launched.

For the first time in 20 years St. Louis turf followers will this year have a chance to see the running of a Derby without an all-night train ride or an all-day auto trip. This was made known yesterday, following a meeting of the new board of directors of the Fairmount Jockey Club at East St. Louis. The board voted to include among the fixtures of the next spring meetings at the Fairmount Jockey Club's track near Collinsville a Derby to be worth $25,000, and five other stakes of not less than $5000.

In addition the board voted $250,000 for improvements in the grandstand, increasing the number of stables, the construction of an up-to-date clubhouse, the extension of the drainage system and landscape beautification.

The last derby run in this vicinity was held at the Fairgrounds 20 years ago. It had a value of $12,000, less than half the sum voted for the Fairmount feature.

The aggressive hand of Col. Matt Winn, head of the Kentucky Jockey Club and managing director of Fairmount is seen in the plan to raise the Fairmount meeting to a level with the best in the West.

Fairmount One of "Big Four."

Col. Winn, at yesterday's meeting, was re-elected to the position assigned him last year. His investments in Fairmount assure it a place on the same plane with the other leading Western courses now under control of Winn, namely: the Kentucky Jockey Club at Churchill Downs, Louisville; the Latonia Jockey Club, across from Cincinnati; and the new Washington Jockey Club track, at Chicago. These four tracks, working in unison, as to dates can control the pick of the racing class of the country. Winn is in a position to guarantee that some of the greatest three-year-olds in training will be seen here for the derby.

The group of tracks managed by Winn will hold four derbies the coming season: The Kentucky Derby, the Latonia Derby, the revival of the American Derby at Washington Park, Chicago, and the derby at Fairmount.

Details of the East Side feature have not yet been concluded. The distance is still to be determined as is the date. Naturally the length of the race will depend on the time of the year the event is run.

Derby Not Yet Named.

"We have not even decided upon a name for the derby as yet," C. Bruce Head, manager of the plant and newly-elected secretary-treasurer of the club, told the Post-Dispatch. "Some thought of calling it the St. Louis derby. In all probability, however, it will be termed the Fairmount Derby."

"The details as to the other stakes are still in the making, but there will be fixtures for 2-year-olds and stakes for older horses. These will be in addition to other stakes that may be added to the card.

"We expect to have plenty of news regarding the spring meeting which will open late in May. We have not yet definitely decided whether Decoration Day will be the opening occasion or not. We want to avoid conflict with the racing fixtures at other tracks so as to make it possible for owners of the best horses to enter our events."

The $250,000 to be added to the track's improvement will bring the cost of the East Side plant to about $850,000.

Seating Capacity to Be Increased.

The club house planned will be erected to the right of the present grandstand. Additional grandstand seats will be built between the stand and the paddock. The improvements will all be under the

Belmont Futurity of 1928 Will Be Worth More Than $130,000

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.

THE Belmont Futurity, autumn racing classic for 2-year-old thoroughbreds, will have a value in excess of $130,000 for 1928 and as such will be the richest stake event ever contested for in any conutry, the West Chester Racing Association disclosed today.

The Futurity last fall, won by Pompey, had a value of approximately $75,000. A record entry for the juvenile classic is assured.

Additional nominations are expected from English, French and Irish turfmen and these will add to the race's value.

Yeatman Gains Victory Over Roosevelt, 29-16

Visitors' Fine Attack and Strong 16 to 13—Ens Scores 19 Points for Yeatman.

Yeatman High School's undefeated basketball team gained another victory in the Interscholastic League last night at the Roosevelt court, crushing Roosevelt under a 29 to 16 score. The 29 points made by Yeatman gave them a total of 59 for the season. In the first game of the weekly double header Central won from Cleveland 16 to 13. It was Central's first league game.

Yeatman in winning from Roosevelt showed a wonderful scoring punch. Ens, the tall center for Yeatman counted 19 of his team's points although guarded well by two oponents. Speuring, right forward, was the only other Yeatman player to drop in a field goal, he accounted for two. Most of Ens' goals were made when he was within the foul zone.

At the start Yeatman scored 6 points before their oponents were able to count. Left forward Hill, of Roosevelt, made the first score for his team by dropping in a free throw. After Roosevelt tied the score at 6-6, Yeatman drew away and was never headed thereafter. Yeatman was leading 13 to 9 at the end of the half.

During the second half, Ens scored five field goals. The teamwork of the winners seemed to have the Roosevelt team puzzled. The forwards of Yeatman getting the ball and fed it with short passes to Ens who neatly dropped it in the basket. Ens made several dribbles which resulted in field goals.

Coach Lewis of Yeatman sent in his second string men at the start of the second half. Smith's guarding for Yeatman kept Roosevelt from scoring on many attempts. Sauselle was the individual star for Roosevelt, with a total of 7 points.

Hohn's failure to make a free throw was largely responsible for Cleveland's defeat at the hands of Central 16 to 13, in the first game. At only one stage of the game was Cleveland ahead, to the end of the first quarter the score was Cleveland 4, Central 3.

The end of the half saw the Centralites leading, 7 to 4. The Red and Black increased its score five points during the next period while Cleveland made only two field baskets. Field goals by Hohn and Fowler of Cleveland brought the score to 14 to 13 with Central in the lead. Willis of Central then fouled Hohn who missed the throw thus failing to tie the game. M. Hosler dropped the final goal of the game to bring the score to 16 to 13.

The close guarding of the two

Billikens' "Big Three", Stars of 7 Seasons, Graduate This Season

Dan Savage's Great St. Louis University Basketball Combination, Now at Its Peak, Will Lose the Bradburn Boys, Stanton and Practically All Regulars.

Basketball prospects at St. Louis University will be rather drab after graduation this year. Virtually all the members of the regular team will receive diplomas, including Capt. Bill Bradburn, Vernon Bradburn and Tom Stanton, who have been coached by Dan Savage for seven years in high school and college.

Savage's winning college teams have been built around these three men who entered university life under a coaching system with which they were entirely familiar. They had been members of the title winning quintets which Savage had put out under the colors of St. Louis U. High, and their graduation into college coincided happily with Savage's transition from academy to university coach.

Another auspicious circumstance which served to boost basketball stock was the coincident arrival at the school of Al Kapl, who, during his high school days was a sensation in Cleveland, O., basketball circles. Kapl is perhaps a more brilliant player than any of the other three, but works well in the harness and fits in perfectly.

Regulars All Six-Footers.

The appointment of Savage as 'varsity coach marked a new era in Billiken basketball, which hitherto had been about as encouraging as the football record. He made the most of the past experience of his men and their rangy build (they are all over six feet tall) and soon had a team that attracted notice.

While his material was good, however, the facilities for practice were poor, as they still are, and the result was that the record of the team in its first two years of varsity experience was spotty, flashy here and drab there, when practice lagged.

But this season they overcame all obstacles and are now regarded by many as the city's strongest combination. There is a note of tragedy in the fact that about the time this team is graduating, the gymnasium which they so badly needed, will be almost completed. Practice in past years has been held at various times on the Sodality Hall court, the high school, Muegge's gym and the Armory, wherever and whenever space was available.

This year on the strength of three days' practice, the Billikens bit off too big a piece and dropped their initial game to Iowa, but on returning home demonstrated

Concordia Loses To Chillicothe

Visitors' Five Attack and Strong Defense Enable Them to Gain Easy Victory, 39 to 19.

In a loosely played and poorly contested game the Chillicothe Business College team of Chillicothe, Mo., defeated the Concordia Seminary five at Holy Cross Hall last night 39 to 19.

Chillicothe, last year's champions of the Missouri State conference, exhibited a well balanced attack, a strong defense and accurate basket shooting. The superior play of the visiting five was too much for Concordia to compete with.

The crowd exhibited hostility toward J. E. Davis, the referee and he assessed three free throws against Concordia as punishment.

Thode, the Concordia captain was unable to start the game because of a broken nose, but went into the contest in the last half.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 16.—Harold "Red" Grange's Chicago Bears defeated the Los Angeles Tigers, 17 to 7, here today in the West's final professional football game. The galloping ghost of Illinois was probably outshone, however, by the leader of the Western team; George Wilson, University of Washington star.

HELFFRICH WINS BUT IS DISQUALIFIED; RITOLA CAPTURES 2-MILE RACE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Alan Helffrich, former Penn State middle-distance star, now running under the colors of the New York A. C., was disqualified in the special invitation half mile, feature event at the Fordham University indoor games tonight, for cutting in on the last turn.

Helffrich won the event in 1:58 3-5, but was ruled out by the officials, who then gave first place to Pincus Sobar, of New York, who finished second.

Johnny Holden, former Georgetown athlete but now running for th Now York A. C., who finished third, was placed second and Jimmy Connelly was placed third.

In the two mile special, Willie Ritola led Bill Goodwin, of the New York A. C. by 40 yards in fast time. Ritola registered nine minutes 11 seconds flat, falling short of Nurmi's mark, at which he aimed by a large margin.

The national tournament in amateur Class A was awarded to Philadelphia, a new member of the federation, and will be held in connection with the Sesquicentennial exposition there. Chicago was chosen for the industrial class tournament.

ST. LOUIS TAKES EARLY LEAD AND HANDS INDIANA TEAM ITS FIRST DEFEAT

Blue and White Counts 12 Points in First Half Before Visitors Get Range of Basket —Kapl Plays Brilliantly.

By John H. Alexander.

St. Louis University's basketball team added another victory to its list last night when it defeated the fast quintet from the Evansville College, 33 to 24. It was the first defeat of the year for the Indiana quintet, which showed more speed and better team work than any team which had played the Billikens previously this season.

The visitors were thrown off their stride early in the evening when the Blue and White tossers of Coach Dan Savage put on a storm at the first tipoff and ran up 12 points before the Evansville team could find the range of the basket. Al Kapl was the outstanding star of this early storm, caging four baskets for eight of the dozen points. The team work of the Billikens also was exceptionally good and the lead proved sufficient.

Evansville rallied before the half ended and brought the score to 19 to 14. In the second half the visitors played better basketball and at one time put on a rally which brought them within three points of a tie. This was when the Billikens led, 21 to 18, the nearest the Indiana quint came to the Blue and White.

V. Bradburn's Rampage.

At this point Vernon Bradburn went on a rampage, caging four field goals in rapid succession and again putting the Evansville team off its stride. Hurd went into the game the second half, taking Red Bradburn's place, and he added strength to the Billikens, entering the game when the visitors were tiring.

St. Louis' guarding was excellent and the five-man defense did much to break up the Evansville plays, especially when the visitors attempted to take rebounds from the backstops.

Harper was the star of the game for the visitors, with Gardner at guard doing excellent work.

Kapl Plays Brilliantly.

For the Billikens Kapl and Vernon Bradburn were outstanding heroes on the offense, while Young's guarding did much to hold down the total of the Evansville quintet.

It was one of the most interesting games ever witnessed, as both teams displayed a fine passing attack. Members of the Evansville team had been playing together for five years and similarly members of the Billiken quintet have been associated on the basketball court in high school and at the university.

A crowd of 1500 taxed the capacity of the Armory, another indication of the growing popularity of basketball and of the need of the Billikens for a gymnasium and field house.

Ames Defeats Missouri, 23-22

Field Goal by Substitute in Last Minute of Play Gives Iowa State Victory.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Jan. 16.—A field goal by Kling, a substitute forward, in the last 30 seconds of play gave Iowa State College victory over Missouri here 23 to 22, tonight. Kling's winning counter came after the lead had see-sawed back and forth, and after Missouri had stepped into front by a margin of one point with three minutes to play.

The Cyclones went into the second period with a lead of 17 to 13, a margin which they had held most of the first half. McDonough scored from the floor twice and a free throw by Yunker put the Bengals in front, but Arnold sank a long field goal, followed by a counter from Fennema, which once more had the visitors leading. A third field goal from McDonough's hands apparently had the game put away for Missouri, 22 to 21, when Bacchus committed his fourth personal foul with a minute to play.

The Bengals had the situation well in hand, but the scorers failed to halt the game for Bacchus' removal, until he had scored another friend goal, and Coach Bill Chandler of Ames rushed on the court to halt the game. The goal did not count, and when the play was resumed the Cyclones got the ball and Kling sank the winning goal.

Coral Gables Pro Team Wins, 14-13

Florida Eleven Trails for Three-Quarters of Game With N. Y. Giants.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 16.—After trailing for three periods the Coral Gables collegiates today defeated the New York Giants 14 to 13 in a professional football game.

McBride, former Syracuse star, by a touchdown, point after score, and two drop kicks, kept the Giants out in front in the first half of the game. The score at the end of the half was 10 to 7. Flanagan made Coral Gables' touchdown and point afterward.

During the third quarter the Giants added another three points.

Late in the final period Charlie Berry blocked a punt on the Giants' five-yard line and Docelett, a former Lafayette star, smashed through the line for a touchdown to tie the score. Berry added the extra point to win the game.

PRINCIPIA ACADEMY QUINTET DEFEATS SOLDAN HIGH, 11-8

Principia Academy defeated Soldan in a basketball game last night on the former's court 11 to 8. Robert Richardson, forward for Principia led the attack for the winners, he accounted for six points. Hassler, center for Soldan, led his team with two field goals. The score at the end of the first half was Principia 9, Soldan 1.

In a preliminary game the Soldan seconds defeated Principia reserves 25 to 5.

ST. LOUIS PROSPECTS FOR A PENNANT ARE BRIGHTEST IN YEARS

Hornsby Confident His Club Will Crowd Pirates If His Pitchers Deliver

Bill Killifer Is Counted on to Produce Four or Five Winners Out of Mound Material—Browns Bolster Pitching Department but Could Use a Good Catcher.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Many years have elapsed since St. Louis had a baseball manager as enthusiastic about his team's chances as is Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals this season. Even in 1922, when the Brown came within a game of winning a pennant and the Cardinals fought for a long time near the top of the heap, there was none of the spring confidence that is to be found in the young leader of the athletes of Sam Breadon.

Hornsby is impatient for the start of the campaign. He already has issued the call to assemble his athletes at Hot Wells, Tex., a week prior to the opening of the regular training season at San Antonio. And while Hornsby has failed to land the two good right-handers mentioned last fall as prime requisites, he is cocksure that the Cards are going to be dangerous pennant contenders.

There is a general tendency among baseball men to concede the flag to Pittsburg before the season starts. Even men close to the Cardinals who have been in baseball for years drop remarks occasionally that it is going to be a tough job to beat the team of Bill McKechnie. But Hornsby concedes nothing to the Pirates. Didn't they prove fizzles in 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1924? Did they not wilt time after time when they generally were admitted to be the class of the league? They did. And Hornsby believes his team can knock off the Pirates.

One Question Mark.

Of course there is one big IF in the proposition. Rogers is satisfied with his outfield. He believes Hafey, Douthit and Blades will be the goods. He showed that when he consented to the sale of Shinners, a real clever outfielder. Hornsby also is satisfied with his infield. He thinks that Thevenow and Bell will take care of the left side of the diamond and of course with Bottomley and Hornsby on the other side of the infield, there is no great cause for concern.

The manager has expressed a willingness to grab a veteran catcher if he could. But withal he is well pleased with Bob O'Farrell as his regular and Ernie Vick and Bill Warwick as reserves.

Thus Hornsby is satisfied with all departments save one. That is the pitching staff.

"We have the material, enough men who look like they ought to come through," said Hornsby. "We have 16 men on the staff and none can be classed as dead wood or joke material. But you never can tell about pitchers. That's our big IF. If four or five of the 16 men come through we will be up there on top. We have the fielders and the hitters. If we get the pitching we'll be there.

"Take Sherdel, Mails, Dyer, Reinhart, Clough and Hallahan. There's a promising group of left-handers. Hallahan and Clough may need more seasoning. But Sherdel, Mails, Dyer and Reinhart are big league stuff, men who may come through with a flock of victories. Then we have a flock of right-handers—Haines, Sothoron, Rhem, Dickerman, Keen, Huntzinger, Stuart, Bell and Johnson.

Killifer on the Job.

"Does it seem unreasonable to suppose that five good pitchers surely will develop out of that crowd. We have the material and we have Bell Killifer to coach the staff. Killifer always has had good pitchers. And I have great confidence in his ability to produce winning pitchers out of our material. If the staff doesn't come through I will be disappointed, but if it does come through I don't see any club in the league that will stop us."

Killifer recently wrote to Hornsby congratulating him on putting over the deal for Victor Keen, the former Cub. Bill wrote that he was willing to risk his reputation on Keen. "Only a broken leg will prevent him from being a winner in 1926," Bill wrote. Coming from Bill, who knows as much about pitchers as any man in baseball, that is highly encouraging, despite Keen's poor record in 1925. He suffered with a sore arm throughout the season.

Browns Don't Need Much to Develop Into a Pennant-Winning Club

The coming season should be a great year for baseball in St. Louis. Both St. Louis teams appear to have a fine chance to get somewhere. The Cards, of course, will have to deliver in great style to beat out the Pirates. But in the American League there is no team that stands out and it will not take much added strength to make a championship ball club out of the Browns.

That infield still looks good. Gerber will be the regular at short again, with Lamotte in reserve and Gene Robertson will be at third unless a last minute trade develops. Robbie had a great year in 1924 and there is no reason why he can't regain his batting power this season. McManus, of course, will be at second base for the Browns, and not for the Yankees, Senators or Tigers and if McManus is happy and contented as he should be, there will be no second baseman in the league to compare with the Browns' second-sack guardian. Sisler should be about back at his 1922 efficiency.

Outfield Still Strong.

In the outfield Williams, Jacobson and Rice undoubtedly will be the regulars, with Tobin, Bennett and Evans as reserve material. Tobin is a very valuable man. He is a dangerous pinch hitter, a man of great courage in the pinch and a fielder of no mean ability, although perhaps not as fast as during his many years of greatness as the best lead-off man in either league.

Sisler and Friel have indicated that they would like very much to land a good catcher, a seasoned backstop. Dixon is a clever catcher, but not so much as a hitter. Hargrave can hit, but his work behind the bat is not so good. Rego is a relic of the many for few trade which brought Lyons here for a short stay. Rego is too small for regular duty, though a good relief man. At best he can be considered only an emergency catcher.

However, it is not likely that the Browns will be able to land a catcher. Good backstops are hard to find and it is probable that the team will be forced to open the season with a catching department that is not up to snuff. But if anybody can find a fine catcher, they can earn a handsome sum, as the salesman says, for turning in the tip.

Steps have been taken to bolster the pitching staff and Jonnard should develop into a real asset as a relief pitcher. He and Vangilder probably will be assigned to that duty. Bolen, a southpaw, is counted on to add much strength to the staff.

On the infield Lamotte and Oscar Mellilo, the red-haired Italian from Milwaukee, will constitute the reserve corps, though Mellilo set such a fine fielding mark in the Association, that he may make an infielder hustle to retain a regular job.

ADMISSION WILL BE CHARGED TO MUNICIPAL BASKETBALL CONTEST

When the Werner & Werner and St. Ann basketball teams battle at Sherman Park Wednesday night in open division A of the Municipal Association this week, an admission fee of 25 cents will be charged, it was announced by officials yesterday. The lead in the group will be at stake, as the quintets are at present tied with four victories and one defeat.

It will be the first basket clash of the season at which an admission charge will be made. Arrangements have been made to accommodate 1500 persons.

The Werners were the winners in the last meeting of the two teams, 36 to 14. Three clashes remain on the schedule following the contest.

The probable lineups:

Werners...	Position...	St. Anns.
Strauss or Reinhardt	R. F.	Eggler
Deal	L. F.	Sanders or Koob
Hoyt	C.	Mullin
Berninger or Lee	R. G.	Kelly or Frank
Goeddel or Schack	L. G.	O'Toole or Donahue

Officials—R. Von Dach and Ernie Hausman.

supervision of General Manager Head.

In his report to the stockholders Col. Winn expressed satisfaction at the support given the initial meeting of Fairmount, last fall, held under adverse conditions.

He stated that the meeting, notwithstanding all its drawbacks, had been a success. Under favoring conditions next spring, he expects the second meeting to "go over big."

The meeting of the board of directors yesterday preceded a meeting of the stockholders of the organization at which the by-laws of the corporation were amended to provide for six members on the board of directors and a board of governors of 25 members.

The annual election resulted in a re-election of Lyman T. Hay as president, J. H. Rickman of Chester, Ill., as vice president, Col. Matt J. Winn as vice president and managing director of the corporation and C. Bruce Head as secretary-treasurer and general manager of the plant.

THE HUNTING · · CALL · ·

By ALEC MERMOD

Local Names of Migratory Birds.

HEARING an argument a few days ago between two men regardgarding a certain duck killed by one of these hunters, prompts us to give a few of the local names of some of our water fowl. The duck under discussion evidently was the American Widgeon. One of the men called it Baldpate, the other man insisted it was a Gray-duck. As a matter of fact both men were more or less right.

MERMOD

The U. S. Department of Agriculture refers to this duck as Baldpate, while in Arkansas it is called gray duck; in Utah it is Norwegian, while in Louisiana it is called whistling duck.

The Merganser (which doesn't rank very high as a table bird) is divided into three groups or families, familiar to hunters in this locality.

The American Merganser, red-breasted Merganser and hooded Merganser. The familiar names for this really beautiful bird are fish duck, sawbill and sheldrake.

The shoveler has a great many names; that most commonly heard is spoonbill or spoony. In Utah he is called broad-faced mallard, whil in parts of Illinois he is a Jew duck and Nebraskans call him mud duck.

The pin-tail is known in this locality is sprig-tail, shortened to sprig; the hunters in Michigan style it pin-tail widgeon, while Louisiana calls it spring-tail.

The Wood duck, in this locality often called summer duck, sometimes Tree duck (on account of it nesting in trees); in Arkansas the favorite name is Squealer, while in South Carolina it is Acorn duck.

The Redhead, which runs a close second with the Canvasback as a table duck, seems to have no local vernacular name, but the old market hunter of French descent, working the marshes of Louisiana, has several names for it—Canard Mulet (mule duck), Canard Tete Rouge (red-head duck) and Canard Violin (fiddle duck).

The Bufflehead, exclusively known in these parts as Butterball, is called Butterbox in Pennsylvania; in North Carolina he is often called Scotch Teal.

The Upland plover has many names, such as Field plover, Highland plover, Grass plover, Prairie snipe. The Cajan hunters of Louisiana call him Papabotte. This bird is often miscalled Yellow Legs.

The King Rail is often called marsh hen, meadow hen, rice hen; many of the same names are applied to the Chapper Rail, a part of the rail family not often seen in this neighborhood.

We are all familiar with the little Sora, called chicken bill, meadow chicken, Ortolan and rice rail. The Carmorant, often miscalled Loon, is known as Nigger goose or Indian goose.

There are many reasons why our wild water fowl of the several families are decreasing, but the great big reason is civilization.

The draining of lakes and swamps taking away the natural feeding and resting places, forcing the ducks to use smaller ponds and lakes where they are much easier to kill.

The using of the waters of Bear River in Utah for irrigation has at different times so lowered the water that ducks have died by the thousand owing to alkali poisoning.

Almost too late, our Government awoke to the fact that our wild game meant more than just affording sport for a few.

The fact that wild game was plentiful and that rich and poor alike had the privilege of shooting it has done much to develop our soldiers, besides fixing healthful recreation to thousands, and every nation realizes that the people must play as well as work. BUT this wholesale shooting was killing off the birds faster than they could be produced, so the Government, after several years' consideration decided that the prohibiting of spring shooting would go far toward saving the migratory birds, but when this bill was passed a "howl" went up from all over the country, especially in the Central States.

Two prominent Judges pronounced such a law unconstitutional, and as we all know, the law was not enforced, but now that we have the treaty with Canada, the law is pretty well observed, and it means much to posterity.

Shore Birds Suffer.

The shore birds have suffered more than the ducks, for while a duck will bring out a brood of 10 or more, most of the shore birds (snipe, woodcock, plover, etc.) only hatch two eggs.

Fifty years ago snipe were scattered all over this part of the country, not thousands, but millions. "Wet Prairie," over near Mitchell, Ill., was a famous snipe ground, where in the spring (no one made any attempt to shoot snipe in the fall) one man who was just a fair shot could easily bag 100 in a day.

This prairie was a paradise for the market hunter who used to bring snipe over to St. Louis by the wagonload.

When one thinks about how the jacksnipe is shot at from the time he leaves his nesting ground in the North till he finally lands in winter quarters in the South, and then is constantly "harried" for six months, he wonder that there is a jack left in the whole world.

There is a record in Louisiana of one hunter who during 20 years, from 186[illegible] to 1887, killed 69,087 snipe, an average of 3500 a winter.

In 1877 this hunter killed more snipe than in any other year. In seven consecutive days he killed 1943 birds, an average of 278 per day.

On Dec. 11 he killed 366, which is supposed to be a world's record for slaughter by one man in one day. Even if some of our hunters don't like it, the stopping of spring shooting is going far towards saving our migratory birds.

It was estimated a few years ago that the prohibition of shooting ducks in the spring in Missouri and Illinois meant a difference of 5,000,000 ducks in the next fall.

in a few games that they were dangerous. Butler College, always formidable, was the first victim and Arkansas and Marquette followed in order. The victory over Arkansas was particularly impressive as the Razorbacks had the day before defeated the strong Coliseum A. C. quintet for their eighth straight victory.

In beating Arkansas the teamwork bred of seasons of play was plainly evident. Arkansas was a fast team and accurate, but their attack was rough cut or at least appeared so alongside the smooth-working Billiken machine.

Fight Referee of Today Just A Ring Policeman, Sharpe Says; No-Decision Bouts the Cause

Modern Fistic Conditions Have Deprived Official of His Principal Threat—Boxers Hold Rule Violations Lightly—Tricks Take Place of Ring Science.

By Harry S. Sharpe.

Referee for the Business Men's and the Coliseum Athletic Clubs.

AMONG the referees of boxing at this time there are no successors to such noted officials as George Siler of Chicago, Charlie White of New York, Eddie Graney of San Francisco, Eddie McBride of Buffola, Professor John Duffy of New Orleans and Eugene Corri of London, England.

HARRY SHARPE

Defensive boxing, short, limited-round and no-decision bouts are responsible for this. It is no longer necessary to know the science of boxing and how to deduce a decision. The present-day referee is merely a policeman of the ring, there to keep order and enforce regulations. Referees of two or more decades ago were obliged to know every department of the boxing game, and their opinions were respected.

Formerly fighters fought to win the referee's decision; now, most of the boxers seem more concerned about being in the ring at the end of a contest, regardless of whether they win or lose, than they are of being the winner.

In the writer's opinion, the "no-decision" system is largely responsible for this and is a contributing cause to the degeneracy of the boxing game. Under this system boxers cannot be controlled by referees and made to fear punishment for indifferent effort or violation of the rules. There is nothing to fear but disqualification, and the boxers know a referee will resort to this only when all other measures have failed.

Merely a Ring Traffic Cop.

THE official's duty appears to be merely to watch for and warn or disqualify for low punches that are foul; to keep boxers from hanging on in the clinches, and to see that they do no hitting while holding and the latter provision is often too lightly enforced. The science of boxing is entirely lost sight of and there is nothing upon which a referee is required to predicate his judgment.

Fear of the referee's adverse decision, because of penalties imposed for violation of the rules or unfair conduct in the ring, is a thing of the past.

The plan of having judges and a referee has done little to modify this condition and modern ring lore is a mass of confusion because of inexperience, inability and lack of knowledge on the part of officials.

Until the whole system of boxing and promotion is revised and a return is made to the old regime, with some unsavory elements eliminated, the game is not going to prosper beyond an ordinary result. Boxers should be favored only upon their merits, and referees should be developed who know every department of the game, able to render decisions; and have the courage to stand by their convictions.

'Tricks' Take Place of Science

SO great has been the change in the boxing game that discussions are quite common now concerning the relative merits of the boxer of today with the fighter of years ago. As a matter of fact, it is hard to compare them, though it is easy to take your choice, for they are very different.

The glove artist of today has mastered all the TRICKS of boxing, and his exhibitions are generally an exploitation of those tricks. He is a great defensive boxer; knows how to avoid punishment; how to "tie up" the other fellow; and his foot work carries him swiftly out of danger. For all these things he is classed as "clever." He gains "popular" decisions—but few of these boxers stamp their mastery over all others.

With the old-time fighter it was different. He was a fighter first, and maybe a boxer afterwards. He was taught to fight, and had to do it to win. If he lost, he was lucky, indeed, to get a return match and reverse the decision. Some of them did—but after they were once whipped they generally stayed whipped by the opponent who had bested them. Matches were made to determine which was the better man, and they fought to win. There remained little doubt after the contest, though some of them were closely matched; but when a man lost he had generally resorted to every resource at his command, and he went down to defeat an exhausted fighter. It was a "survival of the fittest."

Old Timers Fought to Win.

INSTEAD of the clinching and "stalling" tactics so common today, fighters were taught to keep their hands clear and hit. Of course, there was some necessary blocking and guarding of punches and swings, but no first-class fighting man entered the ring with the idea that he must not be hit predominating. They expected to be hit, but they utilized their cleverness in taking the blows where they would do the least harm, and to this end they were taught to duck and slip punches, so far as possible, and keep their hands clear to counter and take advantage of opportunities to deliver punches. Their free-hitting style was far more pleasing and entertaining than the "hit-and-clinch" methods of most of our modern boxers.

Another distinctive difference that is not to the credit of the modern boxer is the complacency with which many of them accept the situation when disqualified for hitting a low foul punch. Formerly when a fighter struck a low punch and fouled his man he was in disgrace and made to feel it keenly. He was warned and trained to avoid hitting low, and no excuse was made for him when he did it. Of course, accidents happened then as they do now, but the instances were rare.

Offences Soon Forgotten.

NOW, when this all too-frequent violation occurs, the guilty boxer generally mumbles something about "Hard luck," "Didn't mean to do it," or something of that sort and lets it go at that. He rarely suffers a penalty beyond disqualification by the referee, and soon thereafter is matched again WITH HIS OFFENSE ENTIRELY FORGOTTEN! These things happen because of carelessness and indifference and the boxer guilty of such foul tactics should be barred. Something certainly should be done to put a stop to it.

The writer's observance is directed strictly to that period of time since the Marquis of Queensberry Rules were adopted. Prize fights held under the London Prize Ring Rules were inexcusably brutal and devoid of sportsmanship, and it was for this very reason that the Marquis devised a code that would make a sport of boxing. "To be a fair, stand-up boxing match" is the first provision of the rules.

Packs Consents To Give Carter's Unknown a Trial

Promoter Reserves Right to Name Opponent of "Mystery" Wrestler.

Lloyd Carter's "mysterious unknown" wrestler will get a chance at the Coliseum, provided he complies with conditions laid down by Promoter Tom Packs.

Carter, himself a veteran wrestler of considerable merit, thinks he has found a young giant from the Northwest capable of making a dent on the best of the heavyweights being shown in this center. He says that he tried to get local promoters to give the newcomer a chance but without avail.

A letter to the Post-Dispatch seems to have had better results, as indicated in the following reply from the local promoter:

Jan. 15, 1926.

I noticed in Thursday's Post-Dispatch that Lloyd Carter is again trying to secure a match at the New Coliseum for some mysterious and unknown heavyweight wrestler whom he claims to have taken under his personal management. I presume this mysterious athlete is the same one who previously issued a sweeping challenge through your columns and who was at the time requested by me to report at the New Coliseum to challenge the winner of any bout on the next card held under my direction. I have patiently awaited this fellow's appearance but have neither heard from him nor seen anything of him.

As I do not care to become involved in any controversy over the physical prowess or merit of Carter's new protege, I would like to accord him a trial match and put an end to such wild challenges. I do not propose to schedule this match as part of my regular program but will schedule it as an added attraction and will gladly go to this additional expense if he agrees to meet the man I select, as outlined in his challenge.

Should Carter's challenger win the trial match I will be pleased to sign him for future contests with wrestlers of near-championship caliber.

I am leaving tonight for New York. I expect to return within a week and will then be glad to take up the matter of Carter's challenge.

Please be kind enough to convey this message to Carter and his mysterious unknown.

Yours very truly,
THOMAS N. PACKS.

Carter declines to reveal his protege's name until he steps in the ring, but says that the unknown is capable of taking care of himself against men of near championship caliber.

By Herman Wecke.

The Vespers, finalists in the United States Football Association cup final two years ago, will swing into action in the national title competition this afternoon when they oppose the Royalton Stars of Royalton, Ill., in a first-round clash. The battle will be started at 2:30 o'clock. It will be the second cup tilt here in two weeks, as last Sunday, the Raticans eliminated the Wellstons.

In the game today it will be another clash between soccer, as played by American-born athletes against the foreign born. Each member of the Royalton club was born, and, in fact, learned his soccer abroad. Tom Scott, fullback of the Vespers, is a foreign-born player, but he has acquired the St. Louis dash during his stay with the local eleven.

Manager McCarthy, taking no chances on being eliminated in an early round, will send his strongest battle front against the Illinois aggregation. This team will include no fewer than seven athletes who saw service in the final against Fall River, in which the Vespers were defeated. The players who participated in the tilt are LaBarge, Scott, Burke, Oster, Wimer, Becker and Gockel.

Hand a Coming Star.

In Joe Hand, Manager McCarthy thinks he has a player who will in time develop into the best center forward in the St. Louis League. Hand has had previous cup experience, gained while he was a member of the Gillespie (Ill.) aggregation. Reid and Hanson are Municipal League graduates and are rated among the "finds" of the year. An effort will be made by McCarthy to have Johnny Rooney in the game. Rooney is regarded as one of the best forwards in the city. One thing certain, he knows what to do with the sphere when he gets it. He can dribble and he knows how to pass. A player like that is valuable.

Royalton has appeared here on several previous occasions and always has made a favorable impression. The eleven holds the Carrington Cup and eliminated Gillespie to qualify for the clash with the Vespers.

10 Scottish Born Players.

Of the regulars of the team, 10 were born in Scotland, while the other, Richard Worth, the goalie, is an Englishman. The "dope" on the Royalton players as furnished by Manager Robert Brandon is as follows:

Richard Worth, English born, played with Sunderland.

James Brandon, Scotch, played with Bellshill Athletic.

James Campbell, Scotch, Royal Albert.

William Welsh, Scotland, Glencraig Celtic.

Thomas Finnigan, Scotch, Stevenson Thistle.

James Hill, Scotch, Burnbank Athletic.

Walter Patterson, Scotch, Larkhell Thistle.

John Haley, Scotch, Burnbank Athletic.

Peter Currie, Scotch, Bradford City and Clyde.

John McGhee, Scotch, Vale of Clyde.

Walter Smillie, Scotch, Albion Rovers.

Currie of the visitors is well-known to St. Louis followers inasmuch as he had a tryout with the Vespers several years ago.

"Bibby" Murphy has been selected to referee the contest, in which full 45 minute halves will be played. The admission will be 75 cents.

Sanderson Meets Kogut.

Joe Sanderson and Jack Kogut will wrestle in a two falls out of three match at 145 pounds at the Liberty Music Hall tomorrow night.

berry Rules were adopted. Prize fights held under the London Prize Ring Rules were inexcusably brutal and devoid of sportsmanship, and it was for this very reason that the Marquis devised a code that would make a sport of boxing. "To be a fair, stand-up boxing match" is the first provision of the rules.

VESPERS AND ROYALTON STARS PLAY IN FIRST ROUND CUP GAME TODAY

Local Eleven Was in Finals Two Years Ago

Illinois Stars Made Up Entirely of Foreign-Born Players—Rooney May Play.

PROBABLE LINEUPS FOR GAME TODAY

Referee, R. Murphy; linesmen, Cradock and Carey. Time of halves—45m.

By Herman Wecke.

The Vespers, finalists in the United States Football Association cup final two years ago, will swing into action in the national title competition this afternoon when they oppose the Royalton Stars of Royalton, Ill., in a first-round clash. The battle will be started at 2:30 o'clock. It will be the second cup tilt here in two weeks, as last Sunday, the Raticans eliminated the Wellstons.

In the game today it will be another clash between soccer as played by American-born athletes against the foreign born. Each member of the Royalton club was born, and, in fact, learned his soccer abroad. Tom Scott, fullback of the Vespers, is a foreign-born player, but he has acquired the St. Lous dash during his stay with the local eleven.

Manager McCarthy, taking no chances on being eliminated in an early round, will send his strongest battle front against the Illinois aggregation. This team will include no fewer than seven athletes who saw service in the final against Fall River, in which the Vespers were defeated. The players who participated in the tilt are LaBarge, Scott, Burke, Oster, Wimer, Becker and Gockel.

Hand a Coming Star.

In Joe Hand, Manager McCarthy thinks he has a player, who will in time develop into the best center forward in the St. Louis League. Hand has had previous cup experience, gained while he was a member of the Gillespie (Ill.) aggregation. Reid and Hanson are Municipal League graduates and are rated among the "finds" of the year. An effort will be made by McCarthy to have Johnny Rooney in the game. Rooney is regarded as one of the best forwards in the city. One thing certain, he knows what to do with the sphere when he gets it. He can dribble and he knows how to pass. A player like that is valuable.

Royalton has appeared here on several previous occasions and always has made a favorable impression. The eleven holds the Farrington Cup and eliminated Gillespie to qualify for the clash with the Vespers.

10 Scottish Born Players.

Of the regulars of the team, 10 were born in Scotland, while the other, Richard Worth, the goalie, is an Englishman. The "dope" on the Royalton players as furnished by Manager Robert Brandon is as follows:

Richard Worth, English born, played with Sunderland.

James Brandon, Scotch, played with Bellshill Athletic.

James Campbell, Scotch, Royal Albert.

William Welsh, Scotland, Glencraig Celtic.

Thomas Finnigan, Scotch, Stevenson Thistle.

James Hill, Scotch, Burnbank Athletic.

Walter Patterson, Scotch, Larkhell Thistle.

John Haley, Scotch, Burnbank Athletic.

Peter Currie, Scotch, Bradford City and Clyde.

John McGhee, Scotch, Vale of Clyde.

Walter Smillie, Scotch, Albion Rovers.

Currie of the visitors is well-known to St. Louis followers inasmuch as he had a tryout with the Vespers several years ago.

"Bibby" Murphy has been selected to referee the contest, in which full 45 minute halves will be played. The admission will be 75 cents.

Texas Woman, Peeling an Orange, Discovers Pattern for One-Piece Cover for Baseball

New Geometrical Design, a Plane Figure That Will Cover a Sphere, Result of Accident—May Be Valuable in Making Maps of World.

A San Antonio woman peeled a Texas orange recently, and from that simple incident there has evolved a new theory in geometry and the discovery of a fact that may revolutionize such unrelated industries as the manufacture of baseballs and the making of maps of the world. Sir Isaac Newton is said to have formulated the law of gravity after noticing an apple drop from a tree, and James Watt is credited with inventing the steam engine after watching his mother's tea kettle boil over. Archimedes discovered the law of physics that bears his name while in the bathtub. The peeling of an orange by Miss Penelope Borden is a modern counterpart of these little incidents in history which led to the propounding of great scientific principles, although its effect may not be so far-reaching.

The relation between baseball and such dreary studies as geometry and geography may not be obvious to the mind of the schoolboy, whose love of the one is matched only by his dislike of the others. But when Miss Borden had peeled her orange, she noticed that the skin took a peculiar shape on the table, the entire peel stretching out in one single flat figure of an unusual shape. There she had what scientists for centuries had never obtained, a plane figure that would cover a sphere—the basis for a one-piece baseball cover and a new kind of a map of the two hemispheres in one figure.

One-Piece Cover an Accident.

"I was reading at my desk," she says, in recounting her discovery, "and bit into one end of an orange I intended to eat. I began stripping off the skin carelessly without taking my eyes from the book I was reading. When I laid the peel on the table, I noticed the peculiar shape it had taken, and immediately the form became connected in my mind with a statement I had read years ago, that the present cover for baseballs could not be improved.

"I remembered a couplet I had learned in my childhood, 'What goes up must come down, on the head or on the ground.' If the orange peel had come off a sphere in that form, it would go back on again in the same pattern. Accurately cut and measured, I had the pattern for a one-piece baseball cover, long believed impossible."

"I pressed the peel out flat and drew a line from the center of each circular end, finding that I had a self-contained figure capable of endless maps and map making. Were students to become used to the changed placing of oceans and continents on such a figure, they would have a far more correct idea of size-relationships than is possible with the accepted change in proportion known as Mercator's projection. For one thing, it would do away with the North and South, East and West idea and would demonstrate the essential unity of the whole world in remarkable fashion. It would show that the relationship of direction is to the poles and not up and down at all. In the present maps, North is always shown as up and South as down, which is an arbitrary arrangement and not a physical fact."

Miss Borden, together with her friend Dr. Emma T. Miller, a former medical missionary to Persia, studied the new figure carefully and developed a formula for the working out of a one-piece baseball cover by its use. They have already produced several of these covers for the benefit of small boys of San Antonio, and every one has been found perfectly satisfactory. Where the commercial ball manufacturers now use 232 stitches to sew their two-piece covers together, Miss Borden and Dr. Miller require only 114, or less than half the number.

Tilden Advocates Award of Major Tourney to the West

Tennis Champion Discusses Politics and Question of Distributing Plums — He Suggests Dates for Important Championships.

By William T. Tilden.

The annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis Association is due early in February and the time is ripe to consider certain problems, political and practical, that may arise. The national championship and the Davis Cup challenge and interzone final rounds are naturally of great importance to the whole tennis world.

The 1925 season found the national singles so late that many of our stars were compelled to forego this event.

The long lapse between the national doubles and the national singles, due to the two big Davis cup ties, was not good from the standpoint of the distant districts of the United States. It meant that they were compelled to keep their representatives in the East for nearly five weeks.

President John Mesereau recognized this weakness of schedule and has already taken steps to offer more closely knit championship dates. The main difficulty has been in the late start of the American zone Davis cup ties.

Suggestions for Dates.

It seems to me that if the European ties are played in late May, June and early July that the American zone should certainly end by Aug 1, so that the interzone final can be cleaned up before the national doubles are played. Last year found a great concentration of national championships and international matches at the stadium at Forest Hills, L. I. Both the men's and women's singles, the interzone Davis cup final, the East vs. West and the Davis cup trials were held there. This left very little for cities outside of New York.

It seems to me that the same city should not hold both the men's and women's singles.

Certainly it should not add to these the second biggest drawing card in intersectional play and also the annual intersectional meeting.

West Is Willing.

Why should not these plums be moved around the country a little? Why not aid tennis in Chicago by awarding at least one of the biggest events to the Western Association?

It seems to me as if the logical dates for the big events could quite easily be worked out about as follows:

Aug. 16—Women's national junior and boys' national.

Aug. 23—Interzone Davis cup final.

Aug. 30—National doubles.

Sept. 9-11—Davis cup challenge round.

September 13—National singles.

I understand on good authority that the women desire to leave the stadium for their championship and return to the Philadelphia Cricket Club where it was successful for so many years. I should think that this would be a wise move.

Move Junior Tourney.

The national junior championship has been held in Chicago with great success during the last two years. It seems time for it to swing East, possibly to Providence, yet it is so well handled by the Western Association that this point is open to debate.

The national doubles event is annually staged at Boston and there is no logical reason to change this coming season, although I think it should go to Chicago very soon. The Davis Cup challenge round is always a brilliant success at the Germantown Cricket Club in Philadelphia, and there is no cause to change this selection, while the national singles have three more years at the stadium under the agreement with the West side when the club put up the big concrete half bowl.

If any of the districts feel that they have constructive suggestions on schedule and awarding of the great drawing cards of tennis now is the time to make them. Write the Lawn Tennis Association and state your views.

Progressive at the Helm.

I have found our present executive a man who is always willing to listen to suggestions and ready to consider seriously the advisability of any change. There is more chance to do constructive reform work in the tennis body now than at any time for the past ten years.

There are burning issues, not intimately connected with the actual playing of the game but that are stumbling blocks to its progress that should also be taken up and adjusted. The constitution needs amending and in many places, almost rewriting.

Let us remove the dead wood that is holding us back and build an organization that is truly national in scope and one which accurately reflects the sentiments of the tennis players of the whole country.

Smith, With 138, Leads Golfers in Texas Tourney

Play, Interrupted Yesterday by Rain, Will Be Resumed Today.

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Jan. 16.—Rain flooded the Brackenridge Park municipal course here today, causing postponement of the Texas open tournament, before the field of golfers in quest of the $1500 prize got away on the final 36 holes of play.

Weather conditions permitting, the tournament will be completed tomorrow. Play will be delayed until Monday, however, should it be found impossible to use the links tomorrow.

MacDonald Smith, New York professional, will tee off on the final rounds at the head of the list, as the result of his low total of 138 for the first 36 holes.

MIXED DOUBLES TOURNEY AT WASHINGTON TONIGH

The Washington alleys will hold its third mixed doubles tourney of the season this afternoon and evening, with five squads rolling at 6, 8, 9, 10 and 11 o'clock. Manager Otto Stein Jr. announces a few openings left on all squads except the 8 o'clock, which is completely booked. The first two tournaments were successful, the first drawing an entry of 32 couples and the second 34.

The event, which is held every other Sunday, is rolled under the Chicago plan, whereby a contestant may roll more than one time by changing partners.

The entry fee is $2.20 per couple, with the five highest couples sharing in the prize fund.

R. Karls and Mrs. W. R. Smith captured the first event, while T. Jones and Mrs. O. C. Berghaus proved victorious two weeks ago.

The entries to date are as follows:

6 P. M.
Miss Collins and M. Roth.
Miss Keating and H. Mitchell.

Local Bowlers To Compete in Cicero Tourney

Six Teams to Make Trip for Windy City Event on Saturday.

Six St. Louis bowling teams will compete for honors in the Windy City tournament at Cicero, Ill., next Saturday and Sunday. The local pintopplers will strive for honors in the team event on a late Saturday squad, while they are scheduled to roll in doubles and singles Sunday afternoon.

One of the strongest fives to make the trip will be the Washington Five. This team will be composed of Roy Karls, Otto Stein Jr., Jim Wilson, Jerry Ameling and Ben Cohen, who today is regarded as the leading tenpinner in St. Louis. Cohen has rolled 700 totals in three circuits this season and has an average of better than 200 in the Greater St. Louis Individual. The other members of the five also are regarded as stars.

The other quintets to make the trip will be the Briggs Nash, Hermans, Schaefer Recreations, Armbrusters and Harry J. Thesens.

The lineups of the teams will be as follows:

Briggs—C. Sottrell, C. Briggs, H. Jennewein, J. Jennewein, and a member from one of the other fives.

Hermans—C. Herman, R. Lay, W. Brennan, G. Coibion, V. Williams and J. Smith.

Schaefer Recreations—F. J. Casson, E. Schaefer, P. Spencer, E. Grubb and H. Vierheller.

Armbrusters—O. Friendly, C. Tavener, H. Summers, C. Burtt, S. Heibert and H. Rebenschied.

Thesens—J. Brinkman, H. Thesen, L. Lynn, A. Greene, L. Heibel and F. Graessle.

While in Chicago, the St. Louis bowlers will complete arrangements for an intercity two-man match in which Dominick Devito and Hank Marino will oppose a local pair.

ST. LOUISANS NAMED ON EXECUTIVE BOARD OF NATIONAL TENNIS BODY

Joseph W. Ivy of Kansas City and C. Drummond Jones of St. Louis have been nominated to serve on the Executive Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, according to information just received at the headquarters of the Missouri Valley Tennis Association here.

The election of the committee members will take place in New York on Feb. 6.

Jones has been named as Missouri Valley sectional delegate to serve for two years. He has held this post for a number of seasons and is president of the Missouri Valley net body.

Ivy has been nominated as delegate-at-large for a term of one year. In addition to being first vice president of the Missouri Valley Tennis Association Ivy is presiding officer of the Rockhill Tennis Club, the leading tennis organization in Kansas City.

Rey Is Here for Sansone Contest

New Orleans Bantam Shows Well in Workout With Goldberg.

Essie Rey, New Orleans bantamweight, who will oppose Mike Sansone of this city in the feature 10-round bout of the Business Men's A. C. boxing show at the Armory, Tuesday night, reported in St. Louis Friday. He engaged in a light sparring workout with Eddie Goldberg.

In his initial workout, Rey displayed the speed and science of an experienced and well trained boxer. Considering his long record and the fact that he has faced such punchers as Amos "Kid" Carlin, Johnny Coulon, K. O. Brown, Frankie Mason, Pascal Colletti, Johnny Martin and Midget Mike O'Dowd, the Southern bantam is evidently a clever ring general. There are few marks of battle on his face and his ears are not cauliflowered.

Sansone is training hard for the match. Paul Steadman, local puncher, who will oppose Pete Pauley, Chicago featherweight, in the eight-round semi-windup, is serving as the local bantam's chief training partner.

Matchmaker Harry Cook added a midleweight event to his preliminary program when he signed Frank Burman of Cleveland, O., to box six rounds with Fred Hasson, a native St. Louisan. Hasson started his fistic career in this city, but has been boxing around New York for the past two years.

Hill to Meet Goodman.

Tuesday night's card will open with a four-round engagement between Bobby Hill and Danny Goodman, local welterweights. Hill recently quit the amateur game, in which he was recognized as Jack Horner's leading rival for district title honors in the lightweight class. Goodman has been boxing in California for the past two years.

Bowling Notes

Greenfields Set Record.

The Greenfield team established two Major City League records with a high single game of 1105 and three-game total of 3124. The five's other counts were 994 and 1025. This performance enabled the quintet to take three straight from the Champion Score Books. Ed Heuerman had a high single of 258 and high three of 690, while Ed Held has a 641 total, with a single of 257. Kleeburg totaled 630 and Muenninghaus 626.

The Witter Razz five totaled 3013 in taking three from the Dolly Vardons. As a result of the clean sweep, the Witters went back into first place, the Drink Whistles dropping two of three to the Congress Alleys. The Schaefer Recreations with games of 1077, 1000 and 905 took three from the Washington five. The Cabannes took two of three from the Sebastians, while the Rick-Chaplines won the odd from the David Jones.

J. Dierkes of the David Jones five had a 679 total.

Volz Gets 658 Total.

Volz starred in the weekly round of the Newspaper League with a 658 total, which included games of 204, 216 and 238. The 49th State five put over a high single of 922. The results: Andy Gumps 2, Pink Sheets 1; Green Sheets 2, W. I. L. 1; 49th State 2, K. S. D. 1; Mickey McGuires 3, Society 1. Morgan to Box Lamar.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 16.—Tod Morgan, who recently won the junior lightweight crown from Mike Ballerino, will have his first bout here since becoming champion when he meets Johnny Lamar, a clever young Mexican, at the Olympic Club, Feb. 2. It will be a 10-round bout to a decision, but over the stipulated championship poundage of 130 pounds.

Pikeway Track Squad Prepares For Busy Season

Prospects Brighter With Large Squad Working Under Coach Hennings.

Prospects are unusually bright for a successful season for Washington University track and field athletes. There is a larger squad on hand than in other years and with the new track in the field house nearing completion there will be more facilities than in the past for training the men.

Coach Tom Hennings has a formidable schedule for his athletes. The season will open Feb. 27 with the Illinois indoor meet, and close May 21 and 22 with the Missouri Valley Conference meet. The program also includes the Valley indoor meet at Ames, March 12 and 13. Other dates on the schedule are Kansas Relays at Lawrence, April 17; Drake Relays at Des Moines, April 23 and 24, and a dual meet with Oklahoma here May 9. A dual meet is scheduled tentatively with Vanderbilt at Nashville, May 15, and it is probable that a meet will be arranged with the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville.

Coach Hennings has six sprint men available. Last year the team was weak in the dashes. The men this year are Walter Maloney, former Central athlete, holder of the interscholastic 100-yard title; Stanford Block, Paul Harding, Waldo Edwards, Walter Freund and Don Warnock.

Arnold Willman, captain; Curry Carroll and Joe Hennessy are the quarter-milers, and Willman, Robert Smith and Ted Hukriede will run the half mile. Frank George, George Britton and Dave Savignac will devote their attention to the mile and two-mile runs.

Ed Threlkeld, Harry Hudson and John McCarroll will compete in the hurdles; Fred Hageman and Carl Ledbetter in the high jump, and Jack McDonald will bear the burden in the pole vault. Roy Schaberg is the only weight man on the squad at present, but Coach Hennings will call out some of the football huskies to strengthen this department.

ST. LOUIS AND EAST SIDE POLICE TEAMS IN REVOLVER TOURNEY

An intercity police revolver match has been arranged between Lieut. Bosch and C. V. Gregory, drillmasters of the St. Louis and East St. Louis Police Departments, respectively, to be held Sunday, Jan. 24, at the east side range, Broadway and Eighth streets.

Each department will be represented by its highest 10 marksmen, shooting deliberate fire at a 20-yard target, 10 shots each. The following Sunday a return match will be held at the Eighth District range in St. Louis.

The following members will represent East St. Louis: James Adamson, Joseph Smith, James Helms, Anton Helsky, Michael Boyle, Robert Sweeney, Joseph Keyenburg, Samuel Straus, Patrick Boyne, Andrew Prader and Anton Helske, who holds the high marksmanship medal in the East St. Louis department.

NEW WORLD'S RECORD FOR 40-MILE DOG RACE

By the Associated Press.

POLAND SPRINGS, Me., Jan. 16.—What was believed to be a world's record for a 40-mile dog race was established here today when Arthur Walden's team, headed by the veteran Chinook, won the Dog Derby of the New England Sled Club in the time of 4h 1m 55s. He covered the 21½ miles this morning in 2h 12m 25s.

The best time for this distance up to today was 4h 6m, made at the International Derby at Quebec in 1925.

NEW YORK GIVES NEGRO FIGHTER CHANCE AT THE TITLE

"Tiger" Flowers To Oppose Greb On February 26

Sanctioning of This Match Seems to Assure Dempsey-Wills Go.

CHAMPION NOT ALARMED

Record Indicates the "Tiger" Is Afflicted With a Very Glassy Jaw.

By John E. Wray.
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

At last a Negro is to get a real chance at a world's ring championship in the city of New York. Two or three decades ago little was thought of mingling the Caucasian and Ethiopian races in title fights. Negroes not only fought for titles but they held them. Joe Gans, George Dixon, Joe Wolcott and Peter Jackson are some of the dusky mitt wielders who defended or challenged for world's honors in the good old days.

But since the advent of the New York Boxing Commission the Ethiopian race has not prospered fistically. Hostility toward bringing together whites and blacks in any sort of encounter began with the ascendancy of Jack Johnson to the heavyweight throne and has never been dissipated.

In New York few mixed fights have been held and it is only of late years that the commission has consented to them. Once Harry Wills was matched with Dempsey; but the commission suffered from falling temperature of the feet and called it off.

But today it seems willing to renew negotiations. The first important fruit of the altered attitude of the commission is the Tiger Flowers-Harry Greb middleweight championship battle, which is now set for Feb. 26.

Match Sets a Precedent.

It is not so much, but it is something. It is a bonafide title event between a white champion and a colored challenger. It will establish a precedent that should make it impossible for the commission consistently to refuse to sanction a bout between Wills and Dempsey.

What Flowers will do with his chance is the merest conjecture. On its face he doesn't appear to be very formidable, although he seems to have made a tremendous hit in New York City.

He is a flashy fighter, always active and aggressive. He seldom clinches and always interests ringsiders, even his critics admit. He gives the toughest of them a hard fight, but he seems to be handicapped by a glass jaw. He has been knocked out several times; generally it happened when he was fighting men above the middleweight class.

Negro Is 30 Years Old.

Flowers is 30 years old and until two years ago was little known. Then he broke into new York, where most of the fighting is pulling and hauling. His open style and willingness caught on at once and he has been given plenty to do. Occasionally his time has been occupied in getting up from the floor, but, as with Georges Carpentier, who likewise was many times whipped, he never seems to lose his popularity.

Greb is a tough mug. He is one of the most difficult men to beat in the ring today at almost any weight above the middle limit. He can fight in three classes and be as poisonous as a tarantula. Rough, foul, game, relentless, master of more than one style, it seems unlikely that the first Negro to take a step toward restoring a black dynasty will be Flowers, at the expense of Greb.

It is impossible to figure Flowers defeating Greb, when such a safety-first fighter as Mike McTigue gained a verdict over the Negro.

He's In Again.

Georges Carpentier is with us once more. He has in tow Paolino, "the greatest heavyweight in the world," for whom he is seeking matches. That George sponsors him assures Paolino a fine kale-gathering visit.

Georges also is here to "fight if they want him to."

After viewing Georges on his last trip to the United States, we reached the conclusion that the fireside and slippers of retirement yawned for Georges.

But no. He wants Jack Delaney. Delaney, he says, is the "greatest lightheavyweight of them all." Not having seen Delaney, Georges' assertion is somewhat confounding. It ranks with another statement credited to him on his arrival—that Dempsey would utterly wreck Harry Wills if they met.

Whoever Georges fights should treat the grand, old, young man kindly. For, although Georges is only 32 in years, he started boxing at the age of 13; and all there is left of this flaming youth of other days is a highly good-looking cinder.

Trap Stars to Compete.

PINEHURST, N. C., Jan. 16.—The big midwinter handicap tournament has attracted the best field of trapshooters. Among well known stars who will compete are Mark Arie of Champaign, Ill.; Frank Troeh of Portland, Ore.; Martin McVoy of New York, Steve Cruthers of Philadelphia, who broke the world's record at Dayton with 437 straight hits, and many other old champions, national and sectional.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Jack Munro on Top.

THE rising generation will not recall the name Jack Munro, heavyweight fighter, and one of the "accidents" of the game.

A few days ago a holiday card was received from Munro, who today operates a fight stadium in Sydney, New South Wales.

A little over 23 years ago the pugilistic world was rocked by a near-seismic shock. An unknown miner named Munro, it was flashed throughout the country, had knocked World's Champion James J. Jeffries down and decisively defeated him in a four-round bout in what was billed as an "exhibition," in Butte, Mont.

On the crest of that achievement Munro marched for two years to fame and fortune. After being exhibited much and fighting a few hams in between times he finally was accorded the dignity of a championship match with Jeff, in 1904.

Exit "Fighter" Munro.

HE met Jeffries again in San Francisco and all the romance and pugilistic glamour was snuffed out of the Munro incident in two rounds. The Big Bear of the Cordilleras almost broke the crude miner into bits.

Munro, however, fought one great fight—that was in the World War—as a member of the Princess Pat regiment, and later with other units, after the Pats were all but wiped out in Belgium.

Unlike Fred Fulton, who gained his start by knocking down Jess Willard in an exhibition, Munro was game, but had no skill whatever. He caught Jeff off his guard and out of condition, and Publicity Agent Billy McCarney did the rest.

Some Taping.

A NEW ruling of the California Boxing Commission permits fighters to wrap 30 feet of soft material about each hand. For small hands, this means about 35 complete turns of the bandage about the boxer's mauley. Plus the padded glove the ensemble makes the hand more like a pillow than a fighting weapon.

Taping of that sort is not necessary. It indicates a lack of knowledge of the fine points of bandaging a fighter's hands. Protection is not found in the number of layers in which the hand is swathed, but in the system employed in binding the knuckles and metacarpal bones firmly in place.

In olden days, when they fought with skin-tight gloves and bare knuckles, fighters knew how to hit. They had less trouble with their hands than today, despite the padding employed now.

Help.

SOMETHING will have to be done to save St. Louis from mediocrity in the soccer world. At this writing there is a good probability that this city which won two national championship finals and tied a third, out of five times, will this year not win its way to the nationl cup final.

There is a strong probability that a Chicago or Detroit team will nose us out of the Western final. The success of the All-Scots and other visiting teams here this year proves either that our soccer standards are waning or that those of other Western cities are rising. Probably a little of each thought enters into the situation.

It may come to this next year: That instead of entering FOUR teams in the National cup eliminations, St. Louis managers may have to get together and enter only one eleven, a picked one containing the best of each position to be found in St. Louis.

In the meantime the source of supply for our professional teams, largely the Municipal League, is not developing players of sufficient proficiency to cope with the imported talent now flocking to this country.

WASHINGTON FIVE HAS NO VALLEY TITLE GAME UNTIL NEXT SEMESTER

Washington University's basketball squad is planning to avoid rusting in the interval between Valley title games. The Bears have no championship date until Feb. 6. Coach Don White, however, has planned practice all next week and a game with Coliseum Athletic Club five for next Saturday.

The team is now developing better team play. Should Wylie Cox, captain, be declared eligible for next semester's competition, the team will renew its title activities greatly encouraged and strengthened. The next valley game will be with Kansas Aggies.

Boycott of Miami Track Planned By Horsemen

Florida Officials Reserve Right to Set Amount of Purses.

By G. F. T. Ryall.
Of the New York World Sport Staff

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Just how far the boycott of the Miami Jockey Club meeting by the members of the Thoroughbred Horsemen's Association will go will be seen when the track at Hialeah Park opens its gates on Thursday.

It is the opinion that it will not go far, for while trainers are notoriously clannish, they seldom stick toward the attainment of a common end.

Following the ultimatum of Luke Cassidy, manager at Miami, that he would not be dictated to by any body of horsemen in the matter of purses and that those who did not want to race for $1000 could take their horses elsewhere, the association appealed to all horsemen, through advertisements in racing newspapers, to stay away from Miami.

Judging from recent accounts there will be no lack of horses at the meeting, for a number of the big New York stables, such as those of George D. Widener, trained by Jack Joyner; the R. L. Gerry and Marshall Field horses, trained by George Odom; the R. T. Wilson and W. J. Salmon horses, trained by Tom Healey; a division of the H. P. Whitney and Greentree Stables among others, in addition to giving that note of class so desired at winter resorts, will bring plenty of performers.

New Orleans Owners Doubtful.

To be sure the members of the association that are racing at the Fair Grounds at New Orleans will stay away; but all of them will not stay away when the purses are increased later in the meeting.

Luke Cassidy said to the writer, just before the holidays: "You know, the book is made up only for the first 10 days of the meeting, and from then on from week to week. We can easily increase the purses, if we see fit. But they're not going to tell me how to spend my money."

There is no doubt that there are many interests, some of them powerful, opposed to racing at Miami, and every effort to hinder that association will be made so long as there is no serious danger of a backfire that would sweep all forms of betting out of the State.

CENTURY BOAT CLUB WILL SEND TWO CREWS TO NATIONAL REGATTA

The Century Boat club will send a four-oared and an eight-oared crew to the national regatta, to be held at the Sesquicentennial to be held at Philadelphia during June. This was announced recently when it was stated that the club had 54 members, who had signed to try for places in the various boats this year.

A meeting of the directors of the club will be held Thursday night, when delegates to the Southwestern and Central States Rowing Associations will be selected.

STENROOS OF FINLAND WINS 5-MILE RUN

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Albi Stenroos of Finland easily won the five-mile run, the first of the outstanding events at the annual Fordham University indoor games here tonight. The Finn covered the distance in 25m 2 2-5s.

Stenroos led Karl Koski, Finnish-American A. C. runner, by 75 yards, with David Fagerland, another Finnish runner, third.

Earl Sande Tells of His Debut As Jockey at New Orleans Track

Had Leg Up on Liberator and Finished Second to Busy Joe, Ridden by Albert Johnson, in Race at the Fair Grounds on Jan. 5, 1918.

By Earl Sande.
Written in Collaboration With James R. Crowell.
(Copyright, 1926.)

When a chap has a definite objective in his life he will find each stage of his progress marked by events which in later years he will look back upon. In my experiencec there have been a number of these. One was my arrival in New Orleans in November, 1917.

In the early morning of a clear November day I made my way to the Fair Grounds Track. For the first time my eyes were resting upon a real race course. I strolled over to the stables and asked one of the rubbers if he thought there was a chance for me to get a job. He looked me over from head to foot and shook his head.

I next approached John Lowe, a trainer.

"What can you do?" Lowe asked.

"Gallop horses and ride," I told him.

"How much do you weigh?"

"Between 99 and 100 pounds."

A Try-Out Wins a Job.

My ace in the hole was a letter of introduction to Joseph B. Goodman, a well-known horseman and the trainer of a good winter stable. I had determined to try first to land a job without resorting to this, but when I saw how difficult it would be I went in search of Goodman. He read the note and instructed me to drop around the next morning. I was there early, and when Goodman arrived he was accompanied by Milo Shields, another trainer, whose contract rider was Eddie Martin.

Goodman put the usual questions to me. Did I know how to gallop horses—did I know how to work them? I assured him I could do both. Both he and Shields were eyeing me keenly while I spoke.

"I'll tell you what to do, Joe," said Mr. Shields. "I want to give Adeline L. a workout this morning. Let the kid breeze her for a quarter of a mile." A stable hand brought Adeline L. out to the track and I hopped into the saddle.

"Now work her between the three-quarter and half-mile posts," instructed Joe Goodman. But that stumped me.

"Mr. Goodman, they don't have eighth posts on the tracks where I've been riding. I don't know one post from another."

When I had been shown where they were I breezed Adeline L. between the three quarters and half posts.

"All right, Sande," Goodman called, "take the horse over to the barn. And then I want to see you."

He had good news for me. He told me he liked the way I handled Adeline L. and that he would sign me up to a contract. That same day the papers were signed by Goodman and myself and copies were sent to the Jockey Club for filing and to my parents for their signatures.

In the Goodman Colors.

The arrangement with Goodman provided for a flat salary of $20 a month and the usual winning and losing fee of $25 and $10.

While waiting for the contract to be returned by my parents, I put in my time exercising the Goodman horses and watching the methods of other jockeys. I went around observing everything I could and asking questions. In the mornings I would keep Dick Watts and Casey Jones, two former jockeys then attached to the Goodman stable, busy answering my inquiries. And in the afternoons I would spend a great deal of time at the starting gate studying the work of the best riders as they broke their mounts from the barrier and also the tactics they employed in rating and finishing.

More than a month passed before I was legally qualified to wear colors. It was on Jan. 5, 1918, that my name made its first appearance on the jockey board at the Fair Grounds track.

"I've got Liberator entered tomorrow," Goodman said, "and you're going to have the leg up. I've noticed that you know how to get him away from the barrier."

Held His Head High.

Liberator was a peculiar horse. He had a habit of carrying his head exertmely high, and if his rider took the least hold of the reins at the start he would commit that offense which the turf speaks of as "throwing his head in the air." It is a ruinous trick, since it means that the horse will lose much valuable ground before he recovers and is able to start running. In the morning workouts I found that this could be corrected by permitting the reins to dangle loosely.

Liberator broke winging and was up with the first division when we reached the stretch for home. I could feel that he was running easily. I clucked to Liberator, and in a few jumps he overhauled the pacemakers. We were then just outside a horse named Viley, belonging to John Phillips. But this was a costly move, for Viley had a habit of bearing out on the turns, and any horse on his right was in danger of being carried with him. It was my experience which made me ignorant of this.

Viley, true to form, bore out in this race and took Liberator and me with him. In the straightaway of the stretch we got clear of interference and started going again, but the best we could do was to finish second to the E. R. Bradley horse, Busy Joe, ridden by Albert Johnson.

"Earl, that was a neat job; I congratulate you," said Goodman, after the race.

"I never thought you'd finish in the money with him, Earl. It was all right; take my word for it."

And neither had the bookmakers thought I would finish in the money with Liberator. The odds against him were 20-8-4. They didn't regard Liberator so lightly, but they couldn't see me.

TAYLOR WANTS TITLE BOUT WITH ROSENBERG

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — Buying a chance at boxing titles seems to be a habit these days.

Tod Morgan took on Mike Ballerino for nothing in order to get a crack at the championship, and he won.

Sid Terris has offered Rocky Kansas $20,000 for a crack at his crown, but the Buffalo lad and his manager, Dan Rogers, are a smarter pair and will get all it is worth.

Now Eddie Long, manager of Bud Taylor, wants to pay Charley Rosenberg, bantam king, a certain sum to bring about a championship match, feeling certain that the Peoria boy can take the measure of the champion. Both are in the city and there is some prospect of them meeting here for the honor.

You Can't Smoke History

A fellow from Carolina wants to know where I get the idea that "Bull" Durham and George Washington come from the same state. He says, "Why don't you write and give the people the real History of 'Bull' Durham in its native State, South Carolina, that people would appreciate that more than these Bull Legends of yours."

Now thanks, Sir, for your good-natured suggestion. If I knew History I wouldn't be able to write "Bull" Durham Ads. I would be a College Professor, get everything right, and get nothing for it. Everything you suggested me telling the Public about when and where "Bull" Durham originated, has been told for 66 years by typical Advertising writers. That's the only thing the Company asked of me was "please don't tell again where it came from, or how." You see you didn't read their Ads, but you did read mine and remembered it, because it was wrong.

Writing Ads that will be remembered is a queer game. This is an Ad, not a History. I selected Ads over History on account of the pay. (American Tobacco Company's pay is as good as its tobacco). Where "Bull" Durham comes from or where it goes to is left for the starving Historian.

Will Rogers

P. S. You notice I named in this article the WRONG Carolina. That's so North Carolina will get sore because I named South Carolina, and South Carolina will get sore because I didn't name North Carolina. A true Southerner never forgets.

P. P. S. There will be another piece in this paper soon. Watch for it.

"The Bay of Naples is generally considered somewhat more beautiful than Sarasota Bay. Many times I have seen it and most of the other famous harbors of the world. I Am Building Another Winner in Which You May Share

John J. McGraw

Millions of people have come to associate my name with the building of winning combinations. For this, I am deeply appreciative. I have worked with might and main to build great baseball teams for those whose interests I served. And I have had more than the usual amount of success—for which I thank those I have chosen to work with me.

Today I am building something to last long after my ball teams are forgotten. I am building something to make the name of John J. McGraw stand for something permanently worthwhile. It is my hope that people in years to come will thank me for giving them the chance to find health, happiness and opportunity on the shores of matchless Sarasota Bay.

Here I am building a beautiful community, Pennant Park, to be enjoyed not by a few stockholders, but by a thousand or two people who have confidence in me. Some will find health and pleasure here. Many will share in its recreational and social features. Many others will find unusual profits here. This is my hope and plan, and I believe that I have covered every possibility which assures success. I believe that Pennant Park is the greatest winning combination I have ever managed.

All who know baseball, know how I took the New York Giants to city after city, searching for an ideal place to train. Finally I came to Sarasota. I fell in love with the place. More than that, my boys usually went North in better physical trim than other teams and succeeded in getting the "jump" in the big league race.

So I have come to share the belief that people in Sarasota live longer, live healthier, enjoy life more fully than the people of most any other city in the country.

The Winning Combination I Am Building For You

In building a winner the first step is to pick the right people. My first move was to associate with me Mr. A. S. Skinner of Sarasota. For several years I have been in a position to observe all the important developers in Florida, and Mr. Skinner is a winner. His judgment has been unerring, his ideas big, and his reputation most enviable. The finest type of citizens of Sarasota follow him implicitly. Follow a winner!

Mr. Skinner and I looked over proposition after proposition before we picked the site of Pennant Park. We consider it ideal from every angle. It stretches along beautiful Sarasota Bay, between Sarasota and Bradenton. It is high and dry. From every part of Pennant Park your eye travels over the sapphire-blue waters of the Bay. It is beautiful property, and we were able to buy it right—which means a great saving to all who buy homesites or make investments in Pennant Park.

This fact is the keystone of this winning combination. It explains why we have been able to set prices much lower than was expected. It partially explains why many people in Sarasota who never before bought lots in a real estate development have invested in Pennant Park.

The Final Factor Which Brings Success

I have always worked with people who know how to spend a dollar to make dollars. I have always been able to secure the confidence of men who had both vision and sufficient money to bring success.

Pennant Park is no exception to this rule. I and my associates have all the money required to carry on the huge development program already under way. Pennant Park will have wide boulevards with white lights and, of course, every city improvement and comfort. Beautiful palms and other tropical trees and plants will make Pennant Park a scene of southern splendor.

A magnificent Yacht Club will be a center of social activities and every owner in Pennant Park will be a life member.

I am building my organization the way I build ball teams. I get the best third baseman, or pitcher, I can buy. I fill every position with the best man I can secure. Likewise, in the creation of Pennant Park. The best landscape architect, the best sculptors, the best engineers, the best architects I can secure will make Pennant Park a beauty spot supreme.

My One Personal Whim

I will gratify one personal whim. In all other respects I will turn over the building of Pennant Park to the group of winners I have gathered together. But the principal thoroughfare will be known as Mathewson Avenue, so that Pennant Park will be a monument to my friend, the greatest pitcher of all time, "Christy" Mathewson.

Keeping Down the Overhead Expense

Pennant Park will not be loaded with unnecessary expense. We are not going to bring hundreds of people down here from all over creation and pay their expenses. We are not going to force buyers of lots in Pennant Park to pay for tons of fancy printing. We are going to put all that money into creating value, into building a magnificent development where you can enjoy life at its best, of profit from the increased values that have already started.

I think there are enough people who have confidence in me, and enough people who want to live on Sarasota Bay, to more than sell out every lot in Pennant Park. It doesn't need to be saddled with extra expense. Results to date indicate I am right. The property is selling rapidly. Hundreds of people are anxious to get in on the ground floor. You can be one of them. Pre-development prices are moderate—extremely moderate. When big-scale construction gets under way, values are sure to rise, and with them, prices.

Hundreds of people, many of them strangers to me, have asked me to choose a lot—or lots—for them. I will gladly do it for you. I promise no enormous profits but believe they will be made. I do promise that every claim made for the property can be substantiated, and every promised improvement will be an accomplished fact. I do promise a good honest run for your money, and many men have counted on that promise and have backed hundreds of thousands of dollars on my judgment. I would be glad to have you join them."

"Miss America" Sued for $5906.

By the Associated Press.

OAKLAND, Cal., Jan. 16.—Miss Fay Lamphier, chosen as "Miss America" at the recent Atlantic City beauty pageant, today was made defendant in a suit for $5906 damages filed by Louis B. Jacobs, her former manager and publicity representative. Jacobs alleged he signed a contract with Miss Lamphier on June 2, 1925, in which he was to receive one-half of her earnings as prize beauty after Sept. 12. He says he believes Miss Lamphier has made $10,000 since that time.

FORMER CONGRESSMAN BEGINS PRISON TERM

J. W. Langley, Sentenced to 2 Years for Liquor Plot, Now No. 21,516.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 16.—Prisoner No. 21,516, former Congressman John W. Langrey of Kentucky, tonight had served the first day of a two-year sentence in the Atlanta Federal penitentiary, imposed upon him for conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law.

Accompanied by Roy B. Williams, Chief United States Marshal for the Eastern District of Kentucky, the former Congressman arrived here early today. The brief formalities of "checking in" were quickly completed and Langley lost his identity behind a prison number and became one of the 3000 inmates of the gray-walled prison.

"I am going to do my best to make a good record," said the prisoner as the gates were closed on him, "and I have not given up hope of getting my situation cleared up before long."

Langley expressed the belief that in time he would be exonerated of the charges against him when all the facts in the case were known.

Mrs. Langley and the children will remain in Pikeville, Ky., during his incarceration here, he said.

With two other defendants, the former Congressman was convicted for conspiring to violate the prohibition act for the alleged removal of 1200 cases of whisky from the Belle of Anderson distillery near Lawrenceburg, Ky., about two years ago.

Indorses Mayor's Wabash Stand.

The Chamber of Commerce of University City has adopted a resolution commending Mayor Miller's stand in the controversy with the Wabash Railroad over the viaduct at Delmar boulevard and the Wabash tracks. The Mayor has vigorously attacked what he holds to be the railroad's obstructionism in the efforts made to solve the Delmar grade crossing menace.

State's Renascence In Decade Heralds Era of Cooperation

Unfavorable Reports on Census and Education Jarred Missouri Out of Provincial Isolation

By FLOYD C. SHOEMAKER,
Secretary of the State Historical Society of Missouri.

THE wave of State pride and public service which has swept Missouri the last decade is unparalleled in her history. It has raised the standards of education, brought forth a new era in road building, and given rebirth to water transportation. It has erected monuments and memorials. It has inaugurated a State park system, opened the most beautiful mountain playground in the Mississippi Valley, and reclaimed the alluvial soil of America's Valley of the Nile. It has built public homes, hospitals, and libraries. It has modified government and changed politics. It has given Kansas City her first popular devotion to culture and St. Louis her first hearty optimism since the '60s. It has preserved historic sites and given editor and reader a State historic consciousness. It has made inroads in breaking down provincialism of sections, country and city. A heterogeneous population has somehow become unified for the first time since the '40s. It is Missouri's decade of renascence.

The decade before, from 1905 to 1915, was one both of promise and disilusion. Despite new road laws and State aid, Missouri highways under local control remained dirt or mud according to season.

A low tax rate combined with decentralized assessment, legalistic equalization, and exclusive levy on tangible property, brought starvation to State institutions and bankruptcy to the State Treasury. Similar causes resulted in a low national ranking of the public schools.

But the most deeply felt revealment came with the publishing of the United States Census of 1910. For the first time in Missouri's history was blazoned a decrease in rural population, with 71 counties showing losses, a net decrease of 92,220 through interstate migration, and a lowering of national rank from fifth to seventh place.

Independent Voter.

Yet there was much of hope surrounding this decade besides the promise of progress which comes to a people who frankly face disillusion.

For the first time since the rule of the Radicals in the '60s the independent voter appeared. Experts reported on taxation. The primary, initiative, and referendum were placed on the statute books. A public service law was enacted. Farmers listened tentatively to agricultural advisers. The people voted $3,500,000 in bonds for a new State Capitol, their initial venture in this kind of modern finance since the railroad and war debts of the '50s and '60s. Two normal schools, a State sanatorium, an industrial home for Negro girls, a poultry experiment station, and the third court of appeals were established.

Nearly a score of boards and commissions whose functions concerned examination and regulation were created. A birth and death registration law was approved after nearly a century of statehood. Commissions for the blind and for a children's code were appointed.

Some of these were pastel assets, yet they indicated an attitude of mind which confessed that many new conditions could not be solved with old convictions. The yeast and ferment of the spirit was permeating the State. The Missourian had begun to question himself.

The opening of the new decade was enigmatic. Missouri had come to the cross-roads and few would have prophesied her course. The people were proud of their National Guard of 5000 boys on the Mexican Border, which had been the first to give service to the nation in 1916. They basked in the reflected glory of their native son who was commanding there, Gen. John J. Pershing.

Progress on Capitol.

They read the reports of progress on their first great civic building, the new State Capitol, erected of native stone and marble. Its beauty of architecture and its honesty of construction made deep appeal.

Still, the people and their leaders were filled with doubts and misgivings. All was not well with the State. The bitter memory of the recent report of the Russell Sage Educational Foundation persisted despite protests and charges of inaccuracy.

With few defenders at home the report was circulated over the country and was deeply pondered over in Missouri. A State which

HOW FAR SHOULD PRESUMPTION OF INNOCENCE PROTECT THE ACCUSED?

Chancellor Hadley of Washington University Points Out That Under Present Court Rules a Jury Is Given the Impression That Prisoner Is an Aggrieved and Injured Person Rather Than One Who Has Been Charged by Law Officers and Grand Jury, After an Investigation, With Commission of a Crime.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

"YOU are instructed that the defendant is presumed to be innocent until he is proven guilty."

Everyone who has served on a jury in a criminal case, from chicken stealing to murder, has heard these words from the Judge on the bench. And everyone, juror or not, has heard, outside of courtrooms, this same idea of presumptive innocence expressed.

The idea has been expanded in the public mind to mean not only that the unconvicted person is presumed to be innocent, but that he is indeed innocent. Many suppose that the Constitution, Federal or State, says something about the matter. And one hears the question, not illogical if the premises are admitted:

"Why are the police allowed to lock up innocent people?"

Thus, the presumption of innocence, which started in the trial courtroom as a rule of evidence, is stretched to cover the period before a trial. Lately, there have been attempts to stretch it in the other direction, and to apply it to convicted persons appealing to a higher court.

Lawyers have argued that men are presumed to be innocent until their guilt is affirmed by a court of last resort, and that therefore they should have their freedom on bond until the final adjudgment. Vehement arguments to this effect have been heard since the Federal courts recently began locking up convicted men. Congress is to hear the same plea, in support of proposed legislation to curtail the powers of Federal Judges.

Survival of Antique Custom.

It happens, at this time, that the whole subject of criminal justice is being investigated. It happens also that a St. Louisan, Chancellor Herbert S. Hadley of Washington University, is a pioneer in the nation-wide movement for reform of criminal law, and is active in the work of the Missouri Association for Criminal Justice.

Chancellor Hadley, in his report prepared more than two years ago for the American Law Institute, and published in the Post-Dispatch in April, 1924, touched on the presumption of innocence. He termed it a survival of a rule established under conditions of law and government which have long since ceased to exist.

> "Today," he then wrote, "after the police, a Coroner's jury (if it is a homicide case), the examining magistrate, the prosecuting officer and a grand jury have declared on their oaths, after investigation, that a crime has been committed, and that they think the defendant is guilty—in such a case it is a contradiction in terms, almost an insult to intelligence, to assert, with the force and reiteration usual in a criminal trial, that the law presumes the defendant innocent.
> "If the law presumes him innocent, why do its representatives prosecute him? In a system founded on logic, no presumption should be indulged either way. This is the rule in France and other European countries, and was the rule of the Roman law."

At the meeting of the Association for Criminal Justice, in Jefferson City, Tuesday, Chancellor Hadley had the satisfaction of hearing his views indorsed by Chief Justice Blair of the Missouri Supreme Court, who said:

> Instead of a presumption of guilt from the fact that the charge has been preferred, we have gone to the other extreme, and innocence is presumed. Why should there be any presumption one way or the other? Is it not sufficient to require that the proof establish guilt of the accused beyond a reasonable doubt?

Indictment Not Evidence, but—

"When you come to think of it, it is unreasonable to say the accused person is presumed to be innocent, after the preliminary affidavit and investigation, and after a grand jury has returned an indictment. An indictment is not evidence of guilt, and the jury should be so told, but it seems ridiculous to tell the jury, and to permit adroit counsel to argue vehemently and at great length, that the accused is presumed to be innocent."

I asked former Gov. Hadley, after the Jefferson City meeting, to develop this theme further, and to discuss the subject, which he treated in his Jefferson City address, of the differences between the state courts and the Federal courts, as well as the courts of Great Britain.

"I was glad to hear Judge Blair's expression on the subject of presumptive innocence," Mr. Hadley replied. "It is another indication that our higher courts desire to do away with mere formalistic rules, and to make a criminal trial a judicial investigation of facts.

"In the lifetime of men now living, I believe, we will look back with wonder upon the glorification of formalism that has obtained in this country for the past 50 years.

"The force of this presumption of innocence, in the trying of cases, has tended naturally to grow from year to year, as it is built up in instructions requested by lawyers and granted by trial Judges. The higher courts pare down the instructions given for the state, but the instructions for the defense do not get whittled down, because appeals are not taken when the defendant wins.

"In the form in which it is often delivered, the instruction on presumptive innocence places the defendant before the jury as an aggrieved and injured party.

"Now the question is raised whether the presumption of innocence continues after a conviction, and while the case is before a bench of appellate Judges.

No Presumption After Verdict.

"I can find no warrant for holding that it does so continue. Whatever the presumption of innocence may have been before and during the trial, the presumption is destroyed when a jury, in a court of record, finds a verdict of guilt, and when a Judge approves the verdict and pronounces sentence. Thereafter, if there is any presumption, it is clearly one of guilt.

"It follows that, unless the Court is of the opinion that there has been some serious error, the interests of society would seem to require that the convicted person be not permitted to claim his freedom as an incident of his right of appeal.

"Otherwise, the trial and conviction are just an opening skirmish, and the verdict loses its effect in the public mind. Apparently the defendant has won, for he walks out just as if there had been no conviction.

"This subject has been discussed recently by an Italian jurist, Baron Garofalo. The Italians are dealing with these questions in a very thorough and interesting way. The Baron says: 'Is not the release of a convicted offender utterly opposed to reason and common sense? Such a system cannot be comprehended by the popular intelligence, least of all that of a Southern nation. A people with little foresight, little sensibility to that which is not present and immediate, cannot be impressed by the menace of an imprisonment which is not to take effect until after the lapse of an indefinite period—one or two years, or even more in the event of a new trial being ordered by the higher court. Remote menaces of this description may not be without influence upon people of a cold and calculating turn of mind. Up to a certain point they are understandable in the North, but in the South there must be penalties which are severe, prompt and specific enough to be vividly conceived.'

"Prof. Robert W. Millar of Northwestern University, quoting this utterance in a magazines article, said: 'It may be questioned whether the learned Baron has not made undue allowance for the people of the North. Certainly, in the United States with its mixed population, the necessity that punishment be capable of vivid conception is just as pressing as it is in Italy.'

Risky to Appeal in England.

"The so-called right of appeal is only a statutory regulation. It is not part of the due process of law for which the Constitution provides. One State, Kentucky, does not permit the release of prisoners on appeal bonds after conviction under any circumstances. Most states allow release on bond if the trial or appellate court thinks there is reasonable ground for appealing.

"In England, where no right of appeal existed in criminal cases before 1907, the person who appeals takes a chance of getting a heavier sentence, for the appellate court has the power to hear new evidence, and to increase, as well as to decrease, a sentence. Cases are not remanded to the trial courts for a new trial in England—the appellate court gives whatever new trial is deemed necessary."

This led to the subject of the English court rules, and the Federal court rules, as compared with those of the courts of Missouri and some other states. The most important difference, on which Chancellor Hadley has dwelt in previous discussions, and which he emphasized in his talk at Jefferson City, is the part taken by the Judges.

"In the English courts and in our Federal courts," he said, "the Judges are the dominating and directing influence in the conduct of the trial, and instruct the jury in reference to the facts, as well as in reference to the law. In three-fourths of our state courts, the Judges are mere moderators, and in some states, on questions of law, the court is only advisory to the jury.

"Trial by jury, in its constitutional meaning, is not trial by jury as it now exists in most of our state courts. The trial by jury which Blackstone, Coke and the English common law knew was that in which the jury had the assistance of the Judge.

"Of course this right to advise the jury as to the facts may be abused, as may any other authority of a Judge or other public official. This may have occurred in the Indianapolis trial. But an abuse of this authority is a subject of review by the appellate court, just as is any other unfair or incorrect action of the trial Judge."

Another point of difference on which Mr. Hadley dwelt was the fear of reversal, "hanging like a sword of Damocles over the heads of Judges and prosecutors," and causing them to resolve doubts in favor of the defendant, and to accept pleas of guilty to minor offenses rather than to take the chance of reversal after a trial.

Recalls but One Mistake.

"The Federal courts," he commented, "have suffered but little from this condition, since they have been disposed to make the law a terror to evil-doers, rather than to be obsessed by the fear that some innocent man will be convicted.

"It is possible, under any system, for an innocent person to be convicted, but in my experience as trial lawyer, prosecuting attorney, Attorney-General and Governor, having personal connection with nearly 3000 criminal trials or convictions, I knew of but one case where I was satisfied that such a thing had happened.

"That was the case of a Negro, convicted in a Southeast Missouri county of robbery, while I was Attorney-General. Marshal Fink of the Supreme Court, a Confederate veteran and a fine gentleman, who took the man in custody from the county authorities, talked with him, and made a report to me which caused an investigation of the case. We found that the robbery consisted of an attack on another Negro, who, this man believed, had taken money from his pocket while he was asleep on a train. All the train conductor saw, and all the jury heard about, was that the defendant had taken some money from the other man by force.

"I reported the matter to Gov. Folk, and as chief law officer of the State, recommended a pardon. The Governor concurred in this view and pardoned the man after he had been in the penitentiary a few days."

Other points of advantage which the English and Federal courts have, as agencies of justice, over the State courts, were: Higher standards for jurors; less difficulty in obtaining presence of witnesses; right of the Judge (in England only) to comment on failure of the defendant to testify; and the greater atmosphere of dignity and stern justice.

Some of the New England states, he said, have mutual treaties of extradition of witnesses. The smallness of the states, and the nearness of State boundaries to most towns, makes this especially necessary in New England, but it would be helpful in Western states also, he suggested. Other states have provided for taking of depositions in criminal cases.

Precedent in Ruling in 1894.

The Indianapolis case, to which Chancellor Hadley refers, in which the St. Louis and other conspirators in the Jack Daniel whisky "milking" case were convicted and sent to Leavenworth prison without the granting of appeal bonds, has been the chief cause of discussion of the question whether convicted men are entitled to such release.

As told in Friday's Post-Dispatch, a plea to the United States Supreme Court for the release of the Jack Daniel prisoners is being considered by lawyers, and a past Supreme Court decision has been mentioned as being favorable to them.

Lawyers familiar with Federal Court practice, who examined the statutes and records of decisions, have found that the Supreme Court did, in 1894, issue a writ of mandamus for the release on bond of a convicted man, to whom Judge Parker of the Western Arkansas district had denied such release. The majority opinion of the court, written by Justice Gray, said:

"The statutes of the United States have been framed upon the theory that a person accused of crime shall not, until he has been finally adjudged guilty in the court of last resort, be absolutely compelled to undergo imprisonment, but may be admitted to bail after conviction and pending a writ of error."

Justice Brewer, dissenting, said:

"I fail to appreciate the argument that, because Congress has made specific provision for bail in criminal cases before conviction, it is to be assumed that it intended that bail should likewise be allowed in all cases after conviction."

In recent years, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in three circuits, the Second, Seventh and Eighth, has denied pleas for bond for convicted men. All, in their decisions, have mentioned the 1894 Supreme Court decision, but have held that its use of the word "may" left them discretion in the matter, and that certain peculiar circumstances in the 1894 case made it inapplicable to the cases before them.

Decisions Denying Bail.

The Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, Chicago, in denying an appeal bond a few years ago, declared:

"Bail is allowed almost as a matter of course before conviction, largely because the presumption of innocence prevails, but the reason disappears after conviction and sentence, for then the burden is upon the convicted party to show error in the conviction. Granting bail after conviction is a matter of judicial discretion."

The Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, New York, in a similar case in 1923, quoted the foregoing decision with approval, and said of the Supreme Court's 1894 deci-

Presumption of Innocence of Persons Accused of Crime Is Not Universal Rule

THE presumption of innocence, as a rule of evidence, originated in the courts of England something less than 300 years ago. It does not exist in France, or other nations whose legal procedure is modeled on the old Roman civil law. It is not a matter of statute, but belongs to the unwritten, or common law.

The early English practice was to presume the guilt of the accused person, and the historic ordeals of trial by fire, trial by water and trial by battle represent the effort of accused persons to clear themselves of this presumption of guilt. The change from the presumption of guilt to that of innocence occurred, legal historians believe, not long before 1640, when the calling of witnesses for the defendant was first permitted.

Under decisions in a number of states, the accused person is entitled to an instruction to the jury, stating the presumption of his innocence; but the Missouri and Michigan Supreme Courts have held that this instruction may be omitted, if the jury has been instructed that, for conviction, guilt must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

"The presumption of innocence of a defendant," the Encyclopedia of Evidence says, "arises only on the trial, and for the purposes thereof; in other proceedings after indictment, the defendant is presumed to be guilty."

Legal historians mention, in connection with the presumption of innocence, the saying that it is better that the guilty should go free than that the innocent should be punished. The Roman Emperor Diocletian is said to have said, "Better that two guilty escape than that one innocent be punished." The first English jurist to whom a like saying is credited is Lord Hale, who in 1678 said, "Better that five guilty should escape than that one innocent be convicted and punished." Less than a century later, Sir William Blackstone gave the rule as being ten, instead of five, guilty persons, and in 1824 Justice Starke, in the United States, raised the number to 99, which has been taken to mean an indefinite number.

Says Monkeys Have Human Impulses but Do Not Mask Them

Dr. G. V. Hamilton, Who Had a Village of Animals, Declares They Show Same Emotions

By Mary Alden Hopkins.

"MONKEYS are human beings without their masks on.

"Men and women have been trained by the demands of civilization to cover their natural impulses with many layers of disguises till it is very difficult to detect the real individual under the cloaks, but a monkey acts on first impulse."

Dr. G. V. Hamilton, director of psychobiological research, Bureau of Social Hygiene, Inc., and author of a book, just off the press, entitled "An Introduction to Objective Psychopathology," can speak with authority on the ways of monkeys, for he maintained at Montecito, Cal., a monkey village with a population of 23, of all ages, both sexes, all sizes and many varieties.

"When I am puzzled by some neurotic patient who is worrying himself sick over some personal baffling situation," Dr. Hamilton told the writer, "I lean back in my office chair, shut my eyes and say to myself, 'How would my monkeys react to an analogous situation?'

"Immediately I see my monkey grove in California, with the monkeys swinging in the trees, busy in mock fights, flea hunts and lovemaking, playing tag along the tree limbs, chattering and hunting food, just as their natural impulses prompt them; then, switching back to my patient and the human race, I understand what the natural instinct of my patient must be and I get a clew to the struggle that is going on in the sick and weary spirit that has come to me for help—for the conflict between the desire to follow natural impulses and the desire to measure up to the standards of our social order is at the basis of many serious nervous illnesses. Unless the doctor understands primitive cravings he cannot show the patient how to substitute a related craving more in harmony with the demands of civilization.

"The study of monkeys is one of the best possible methods for a psychologist to learn the instinctive reactions of human beings. Any young scientist who wishes to make a valuable contribution to psychology can do so by spending years watching and noting down the reactive tendencies of primates. The study of monkeys is not without dignity and is of great assistance in understanding the human race."

Would Study Reactions to Fear.

Dr. Hamilton wishes neurologists to apply to the study of nervous diseases the simple experimental methods that have taught us so much about organic diseases. Doctors have watched the way the body reacts to typhoid, tuberculosis and other germs, and from the information thus gathered they have worked out ways of preventing and treating germ diseases.

Dr. Hamilton wishes psychologists to gather accurate and abundant data on the way animals, including man, usually react to emotional stimulations like fear, anger, love and disappointment, and also unusual ways of reacting. From this information would come clearer understanding of nervous and mental disease. Dr. Hamilton's study of monkey psychology is only one of several important experiments which he has conducted in objective psychopathology.

His monkey village was in a live oak grove in Montecito, Cal., in a mild climate very like that to which the Asiatic and African monkeys were accustomed. Part of the time they were at large, sometimes they were confined in a roomy laboratory yard, and other times under closer observation in a large cage.

"My monkeys soon became so accustomed to having me about," says Dr. Hamilton, "that they paid no attention to me except to coax for food and to come running to me when they were hurt. I studied their actions when they were free in the grove, when they were confined in the large laboratory yard and when they were caged. Their village was like any human village, with the inhabitants going about their own affairs, so that when I left their town to move to a human town and practice among human beings I did not feel that I had made any great change.

Stories About Monkeys.

"Monkeys are emotional, affectionate, restless and intensely curious. They are gregarious and cowardly and impulsive; they love attention; strut and boast and quarrel without any restraint at all. A doctor who likes monkeys is so used to these traits that they do not antagonize him when he meets

Hoover Squeals.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

MR. HOOVER'S sudden agitation over the British rubber monopoly and the hotly patriotic attitude of his once international mind are nothing if not laughable. His excoriation of the British policy is almost a perfect description of the high tariff policy of the administration of which he is a part.

"It is this intrusion of Governments into trading operations on a vast scale," he said, "that raises a host of new dangers, the inevitable aftermath of any such effort by political agencies to interfere with the normal process of supply and demand."

Ye gods, what have our tariff barons and their tools at Washington been doing if they have not interfered with the law of supply and demand? What lessons have our manufacturers and their lobbies taught the world if not the lessons of shameless greed and contempt for international good will?

While Europe the past few years, weakened and impoverished by war, has been struggling for bread to stay off starvation, has it received any sympathy from our tariff harpies and their servile majority in Congress? But when Great Britain employs her natural advantage to jack up the price of a raw material that goes into our flivvers, Mr. Hoover's indignation is something terrible to behold, and his international virtue is enough to crack the face of a brass monkey. He foresees grave ills as the consequence of raising barriers to the free flow of trade. As a matter of fact we are now only seeing the ills which have followed logically in the wake of our own example of arrant selfishness. Instead of playing the angel in this touching drama, we are the guy that threw the boomerang and lord, how we can squeal when it returns to slice our self-esteem!

RICHARD C. BLAND.

In the Cause of Justice.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT is, indeed, difficult to get the viewpoint of any man who would demand greater, or heavier, punishment for the Jack Daniel whisky ring.

Those men were not criminals in the ordinary sense of the word. They evaded the law as many taxpayers do. They broke the Volstead act, as millions do.

The Volstead act was an unjust, clandestine, even farcical law, foisted upon a thoughtless, trusting and, as usual, sleeping public. Is it not enough that those men are behind bars. They had a good dinner before they went and a few hand grips before they bade good-by to the light. Who would begrudge it? Away with the hard-hearts who would deprive them of this moiety of solace! Their punishment was too severe. They never put their hands in any man's pockets or attacked a woman going home alone at night, or misappropriated the funds of the old sailors' home. Yet the iron bolts are closed upon them and even one year would seem like 12.

I, for one, protest de profundis against this offense against justice. When will this Volstead act be modified or repealed and the temptation to drag honest men into seeming criminality be removed?

MRS. JOHN BEVERLY ROBINSON.

Future of the Democratic Party.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I HAVE just read your sad editorial entitled, "An Opportunity for the Democrats," in which you suggest that the Democratic minority in the Senate shall take the play away from the administration majority by demanding a prompt and generous debt settlement with France.

Permit an old Jeffersonian to say that there is just one opportunity for the Democrats ever again to control the Government, and that it involves nothing less than making the party once more genuinely democratic, and primarily and fundamentally American.

We must quit trying to imitate Don Quixote, tilting against European windmills, and resolve to attend strictly to our own American business from this time forward. If we can't learn this from the results of 1920 and 1924, we are too far gone to learn anything, and are unfit to be trusted with the public business.

We must refuse to help the Wall Street Republican administration take our country into the League of Nations World Court or any other European alliance that limits ever so little our absolute national independence.

We must demand the repeal of the prohibition amendment and assert the right of each state to determine whether it shall be dry, half-dry or wet.

We must recognize that the Wall Street interests which finance the League of Nations propaganda and the Anti-Saloon League are identical and that in both these interests are utterly un-American and un-Democratic.

Senator Reed of Missouri or Gov. Al Smith of New York could lead the Democratic party to a sweeping victory on this program in 1928.

FRANK PUTNAM.

A WRETCHED SPECTACLE.

The little band of Senate irreconcilables that are fighting America's participation in the World Court gave an exhibition on Friday which Vice President Dawes must have watched with grim satisfaction. Owing to the illness of Senator Borah who is leading the fight and to the fact that none of his followers had anything to say it looked as if the question would be put to a vote. If that happened the irreconcilables knew they were lost. Their plea for postponement was refused.

Senator Moses, acting commander in the absence of Borah, appealed to our Senator Reed to leap into the breach. For once Mr. Reed failed. For once his tongue was palsied. He was busy, he explained, getting data for a speech. Another verbal warrior must lead the charge. In his desperation Moses turned to Senator Cole Blease. That gallant warrior saved the day by reading Washington's Farewell Address, with cheap, offensive, irrelevant comments on the immunity of diplomats from our prohibition laws, for which the administration may find it expedient to apologize.

Vice President Dawes, as every one knows, has earned the contempt and wrath of the Senate by urging an amendment of its rules to abolish filibustering. That proposal, tactlessly presented in the first place and flamboyantly advocated, has not caught popular fancy. We believe it is a mischievous reform, with grave and sinister possibilities. Yet Dawes can never formulate so effective an argument against the filibuster as the Senate irreconcilables have now thrust in the country's face.

It was almost three years ago—Feb. 24, 1923—that Mr. Harding sent his message to the Senate recommending our adhesion to the protocol establishing the Court of International Justice. At the same time the Hughes reservations were published, specifically disavowing any legal relation or obligation to the League, and calculated to meet the objections anticipated from the professional anti-Leaguers in the Senate. Since then the question has been threshed out to the last straw. Mr. Coolidge at first cautiously accepted the policy as an inheritance but has subsequently made it an administrative measure. The Republican party in its Cleveland platform made a pledge of this, as did the Democrats in New York. Organizations civic, religious, educational and commercial have indorsed the proposal in urgent resolutions.

Everything of import that can be said on this question has been said. Senator Reed of Missouri seeking data for another speech may point some new barbs of satire, coin some new phrases of derision, entertain the gallery with a display of fresh pyrotechnics, but he will contribute nothing new in the way of knowledge to the subject.

In this three-year-old debate research has exhausted itself, public opinion has expressed itself and decency and fairness and national dignity demand decision.

Our irreconcilables flout these solemn considerations. They flout the American people. And in their extremity they have called upon that impossible blusterer, Blease, to defeat a great historical project.

It is a wretched spectacle which reveals the Senate at its intellectual and moral zero.

THE CASE OF HENRY VS. COW.

D. T. Simons of Fort Worth, Tex., secretary of the Texas Jersey Cattle Club, takes exception to the alleged statement by Henry Ford that "of all useless creatures, the cow is the most." Henry has said something of a future of synthetic milk and manufactured sirloin, and past marvels of science make one hesitate to dispute its future.

Still, you can't blame a Texan for resenting it. Texas was a cow country long before the flivver made parking places scarce in the great open spaces. The lowing herds wound slowly o'er the prairies, and gave the bad men something to do besides shoot up the settlements. The cattle industry endures, even after the longhorns have yielded to white-faced Herefords, and even the Jersey wins recognition in the Lone Star State. Not even a motor magnate may easily relegate to uselessness a beast that did so much in building an empire.

Nor does the case of the cow rest on Texas alone. Regardless of wails in Washington and the corn belt, there are agricultural communities with a degree of prosperity. In most of them dairying has a place, and grain crops fed to cattle usually yield a larger return than when sold as harvested.

Mr. Ford's sympathy for the farmer is well known. So many of them use his products that he should show appreciation. It is possible that he has helped the husbandman with cheap transportation and tractors within reach of the masses, but it is a little early for him to begin to banish the cow. Mankind may face a future of factory cream and handmade steaks, but the prospect isn't appealing to those in search of food.

MEXICO'S LAND LAW.

The Mexican Congress has passed a land bill which is disturbing our State Department. It is notorious, of course, that our State Department under Secretary Kellogg is easily alarmed. In this instance, however, uneasiness seems justified. This land bill is construed in Washington as having retroactive features which vest in the Mexican Government the power to confiscate the property of aliens in that country. Ambassador Sheffield, under instructions from the State Department, has filed a protest with Foreign Minister Saenz. The British Government is reported to have instructed its Minister to Mexico to file a protest also.

Ever since the adoption of the Carranza Constitution in 1917 Mexico has been flirting with confiscation. Article 27 of that Constitution boldly proclaimed the right to dispossess aliens of their property by law operating retroactively. Our Government had consistently and soundly protested such assumption of power by Mexico. It could not honorably do otherwise. Such power, in whatever legal verbiage it may be dressed, means confiscation. The sanction of such a policy by our Government would mean the introduction of theft into international relations as a respectable process.

Mexico, through Foreign Minister Saenz, attempts to justify the present act by saying that a foreigner in Mexico who thinks an injustice has been done him, can appeal to the courts. That is a weak, unsatisfactory explanation. It subjects the foreigner to the liability of having to defend his title to lawfully acquired property against the arbitrary claim or lien of the Government in the costly process of litigation.

It is simply unthinkable that the nations can ever agree to Mexico's confiscation proposition. At the same time Mexico's experience with foreign investors has been unhappy. That country has been grievously imposed upon and despoiled by ruthless adventurers. It is imperative for Mexico to conserve her land and natural resources and preserve her political institutions from the fatal clutch and influence of such looters and corruptionists. In that effort Mexico is entitled to the sympathetic co-operation of all nations, particularly the United States. It is peculiarly incumbent upon us to be patient, considerate and courteous in our relations with Mexico. Our State Department, under Secretary Kellogg, has failed at times in all these counts.

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN.

Rupert Hughes committed the unpardonable sin of speaking of George Washington as a man, and not as a god. He said that Washington was profane, irreligious, a card player, a distiller of whisky and very fond of dancing. These statements were made before what is described as a distinguished audience of Sons of the Revolution. Yet, though his auditors supposedly were men of superior intelligence and though Hughes has historical authority for his remarks, the meeting broke into an uproar and Hughes was openly rebuked for casting aspersion upon the morality of "the principal founding father."

We offer no defense for the conduct of Rupert Hughes. As a man long familiar with the American scene, he had every warning that any attempt to make a human being out of George Washington would bring down upon him the wrath of his fellow citizens, and especially the wrath of a body which makes a profession of deifying the revolutionary heroes. We think Hughes was fortunate in escaping from the hall without physical harm. He will not, however, escape with his reputation. He will henceforth be marked as a man who would upset what are called "our sacred traditions."

As a result of the web of sacrosanctity which imprisons the traditions of the United States, men may not seek to acquire or impart an intelligent understanding of them without insult and injury. School teachers can tell the truth about American history only with the assurance of instant dismissal. Serious students, in searching for intelligent and accurate discussions of the foundation of this Government, must plow laboriously through tons of sentimental and useless rubbish. And for a man to announce, even before a superior audience, the results of his researches into the real characters of the "founding fathers" is to court the treatment given to Rupert Hughes.

The process of ascribing to our ancestors a sanctity which the Greeks denied to their gods, which the Bible denies to its most lustrous heroes, not only falsifies history, but it also blinds us to some of its most important lessons. Children, finding American history deadly dull as it is taught in the schools, turn away to the refreshing exactness of mathematics and to the free fancifulness of literature. Grown-ups, accustomed to think of the founding fathers as stainless heroes, get no such inspiration from them as they would if they were shown in their true light, as a group of very human rebellious spirits fighting against an established order which was tyrannical and intolerable. The founding fathers were exactly the kind of men whose actions would cause them today to be insulted and ejected by distinguished audiences.

EX-CONGRESSMAN LANGLEY.

One of the latest arrivals at Atlanta is John W. Langley, serving a two-year sentence for conspiracy to violate the dry law. Langley was a member of Congress from Kentucky when the transaction for which he was convicted took place. He was still a member of Congress when the Supreme Court recently refused to review his case. He resigned before leaving Atlanta. May we make this comment on Langley's twisted fate: In Congress, he voted dry.

NO. 3.

And so, after questioning the vague Mr. Sargent and the truculent Col. Donovan, the Senate aluminum inquisitors reached Witness No. 3, Joseph E. Dunn. Who is Dunn, the man chosen by the Department of Justice to perform the actual work of gathering evidence in this very important case?

Dunn is employed as a special agent of the Department of Justice. Before joining the Government service, he worked as a clerk and cashier for private firms and in State offices in Maine. Though the job he was given, if it was to be done properly, demanded a keen acquaintance with a highly specialized branch of the law and with the complicated processes of big business, Dunn is neither a lawyer nor an accountant. By his own admission, three or four other men in the department were better equipped for antitrust investigation than he.

Dunn's testimony, wordy, indirect and uncertain, indicates how handicapped he was in grappling with the big aluminum problem. It reflects, as did that of his predecessors on the stand, the departmental torpor toward the aluminum investigation. Nowhere does the report of Dunn's testimony reveal zeal or industry in the prosecution of the case. On the contrary, he testified to long delays, periods of utter inaction, destruction of notes gathered on trips of investigation, and to the extraordinary disregard of the records of the Federal Trade Commission.

Senator Walsh has been very curious to know why, when the Federal Trade Commission's files bulged with documentary evidence of the illegal acts of the aluminum company, the Department of Justice should have embarked on an independent investigation. Attorney-General Sargent could not give a satisfactory explanation. Neither could Col. Donovan. And a satisfactory explanation could hardly be expected from Dunn, who is just a hired man in the office of that great palladium, the office of the national prosecutor.

DUCHESSES AND DUCHESSES.

Marguerite Martyn, in the Post-Dispatch, presented a close-up of the Duchess of Rutland and her daughter, Lady Diana Manners, rather at variance with the movie conception of English gentility. The striking thing about these two ladies is their downright honesty and lack of pretension. Lady Diana, as an actress in "The Miracle," and the Duchess, as a portrait sketcher, frankly admit working because they need the money. This frankness Miss Martyn found carried out in the simplicity of the Duchess' dress and manner. We fear those who must have their Duchesses done up in jeweled upholstery and emitting swank all over the place will have to stick to the films.

Excerpt from a news story of Naturalist William Beebe's illustrated lecture upon his voyage to the Galapagos Islands:

> Among the fish which Mr. Beebe depicted on the screen were ones with eyes almost as large as their bodies and others which appeared to have no eyes at all. One specimen carried an "electric globe" suspended over its head, either to light the way or to attract prey. Fish were shown laying "smoke screens," and others surrounded by a nebulous illumination. Another variety had "indicator lights" to denote the tribe to which it belonged. Some had head and tail lights, somewhat like an automobile.

From which we may guess that sea traffic is pretty much like land traffic and involves quite as many precautions.

Sir: Mr. Hoover, the national apologist and fixer for the administration at Washington, is being worked overtime and should have a rest. I admit that Mr. Hoover works very well upon the left-hand side of a question, where nothing much is required but a denial of the allegations and "threatening to lick the alligator."

Of course, Mr. Hoover never resorts to rough stuff like this.

But when coming to a frontal attack, like his rubber charge on England, I regret to say that he falls down rather badly.

The grievous mistake the Secretary makes in charging that England is monopolizing the rubber business, is that it makes such a large opening here at home for a combined movement all along the line on our own monopolies, the high cost of living and the tariff question in general.

Yes, Mr. Hoover has a little brain fag, else he would have never made this blunder.

Men who are at sea a great deal ought to have opportunities to think, and Admiral Fiske has an idea about the ease with which bandits get away in the thick of a big city by merely having an automobile waiting. The Admiral thinks there should be in every city a rule that when a given signal flashes all traffic must come to a complete stop. He imagines that this would enable the police to walk up to an automobile full of bandits and arrest them. We have not often been to sea nor for long at a time, but we can easily guess from a post on shore that there isn't anything to such a scheme as that. If traffic stopped, bandits would not be seriously put to it to get out of their machine and join the crowd on the sidewalk. They would likely be obliged for the suggestion.

HERBERT W. CANN.

Sir: In the Post-Dispatch of Dec. 2 you criticize President Markham of the Illinois Central Railroad because, when he opposed maintenance of waterways by taxpayers' subsidy to compete with railroads, which must construct and maintain their roadways, pay taxes, etc., he did not take into consideration the fact that railroads, especially the Illinois Central, received large gifts of public lands, subsidies from State, counties, townships, etc., when constructed in the 40's, 50's and 60's.

As I see it, the railroads owe the United States, the states, counties, townships, towns, etc., nothing for such grants of land or money because the construction of the roads conferred increased values on lands retained by the Federal states, county and private individuals, which more than repaid the donors for their grants.

Good lands in Illinois prior to the railroad era was worth say, $3 to $5 an acre. There was plenty of it to be taken up for less. Land had nominal rather than market value.

Along comes the railroad and says to land owners: "You have more land than you can use. It has merely nominal value. Give me so much of it, and I will build into your country and confer $15-an-acre actual value upon land which now possesses nominal value."

If you own 640 acres of land valued at $1200, and you know that you can give away 320 acres of it, value $960, to a railroad and that the 320 acres you retain will acquire an actual value of $4900, or four times as much as the original 640 acres was valued at nominally, won't you trade? And what does the party who confers quadruple the original total nominal value of your section upon your remaining half section owe you? Or do you owe him?

That is in general what railroads did for land values in the West, took part of the lands which had no real value and conferred actual values, increased 300 per cent over the original nominal values, upon what land they did not get.

Remember that the land owners had waterways with boats on them at the time.

Waterways may be useful when 200,000,000 people live in the Mississippi Valley, and heavy freight increases so that the railroads can't haul it, when valley freight traffic goes to the Gulf of Mexico, where it should go, but I doubt that waterways have much present value. They talk of developing a navigable channel in the Missouri River. Have we not got a 9-foot all-the-year-round channel from New Orleans to Cairo? What use is this adequate channel to cotton, wheat and corn growers along the river?

Martin Behrman, the perpetual Mayor of New Orleans, is dead. It has been said that politics assume an intensity in New Orleans not known anywhere else in the country, yet this man, who impressed one by his darkness, his shortness of stature, his ample girth and the fire burning in him, could be Mayor of New Orleans with one break in a reign of more than 20 years. He must have been the Al Smith of the South.

MISSISSIPPI.

NANNIE H. RICE in the American Mercury for January.

MISSISSIPPI is more conscious, possibly, of remaining in her pioneer condition than any other State in the Union. * * * There was a time when our pioneer blood was active, when we did things in the grand pioneer manner. The first charter granted for any purpose by the Mississippi territorial government in 1802 was to establish Jefferson College. The first college established —it is claimed in the world—for the higher education of women was Elizabeth College in Mississippi. Mississippi was the first State to give married women a legal right to their property—a law taken from the customs of the Chickasaw Nation. It was a Mississippian who was chiefly instrumental in establishing equal suffrage in Wyoming in the '60s, in reaction to the Negro rule he had left in Mississippi. Mississippi, the least settled of the Southeastern States, was left in a hopeless condition in the '60s. With South Carolina she suffered most from Negro and carpetbag misrule. Next to Virginia she had seen more of the conflicts of the Civil War than any other Southern State. It has therefore taken her longer than other states to repair her loss, to regain her stride of pioneer days, and to pioneer in new fields.

TWO LETTERS.

From the Minneapolis Journal.

HERE are two letters, both written in Oregon, that tell their own story. To one of the newspapers of that State, the Ranier Review, Walter M. Pierce, Governor of Oregon, wrote:

"I believe that the repeated and high-colored publication of the details of crime news has a bad effect upon the impressionable minds of our younger people."

Taking the Governor at his word, one cure for crime would be to have the newspapers let on that there is no crime. But while Gov. Pierce was tritely blaming publication of crime news for crime, Stanley Myers, District Attorney of Multnomah County, was writing this letter to a Justice of the Peace at Independence, Ore.:

"We had a man by the name of J. P. Miranda arrested in this county for the possession of a still. Before we could try him, the Governor sent him down a pardon, and Miranda had to plead guilty to get the pardon."

To the reader is left the task of judging whether the press or the Governor is most to blame for whatever excess of crime is making itself felt in Oregon.

Era of Co-operation Forecast for Missouri ranked seventh in population and wealth and was even reported as ranking thirty-second in education, was not properly functioning in the twentieth century.

Despite small appropriations compared with other states, Missouri was without money and had become indebted for the current expenses of her governmental operations. Without funds, how could rank be maintained, duty be done, and opportunity be seized?

Congress had passed that year its landmark Federal aid road law. Missouri needed roads but the Federal law required efficiency, centralization and co-operation. Missouri road making had little of these characteristics and Missouri had no money.

At the openng of the new decade the State also shared with the nation the great issues involved in American politics and European warfare in 1916. They cast the largest vote recorded in Missouri up to that time and elected a Governor by only 2000 plurality.

Decline of Isolation.

The year 1917 marked the decline of Missouri's individualism at home and her peculiar isolation in the nation. It is doubtful if Missouri ever before received as much favorable and widespread publicity. Excepting only the President, the eyes of the country were on a Missourian, the commander of the American Expeditionary Forces. And Crowder was another son of the State, and Coontz, Colby, Creel, Palmer, Russell, Stone, Taussig, Vrooman, while Clark, Francis, Houston, Long and Reed were hers by adoption and service. The names of these men were heralded over the land. Their home became good copy and Missouri profited in the exploitation. State pride was stimulated and became a joint possession. Missouri awakened.

In legislation the new birth bore its first fruits. Intelligent and co-operative effort was made to provide more adequate State revenue, the foremost problem pressing for solution. This was accomplished by tapping new sources of taxation instead of raising old rates. An income tax and a corporation franchise tax were enacted. The old collateral inheritance tax was abolished and a general inheritance tax was provided. A secured debt tax was approved, which was later declared invalid by the courts. A soft drink tax and a wholesale liquor license tax were passed.

From these sources of taxation the State revenue was greatly increased and the State Treasury was replenished. A law making optional a local tax levy for county hospitals was also passed.

Far-Reaching Tax Law.

One of the most far-reaching tax laws of the new period was that creating the State Tax Commission. Broad supervisory powers regarding assessment were vested in that body, as well as important duties relating to Government finance. Among the latter was developed an embryo state budget system. As a result of the commission's assessment duties, a closer approximation to equalization was obtained.

The increases in assessment due to equalization, law enforcement and growth of wealth were not so favorable to state as to county and locality, since the revenue rate for State purposes ,exclusive of pensions and bonuses, was gradually reduced from 15 cents in 1915-1917 to 5 cents in 1923-1926.

As a result of this reduction the State collected 24 per cent less money from its general property revenue tax in 1924 than it did in 1917, notwithstanding the rise in total assessed valuation from $1,902,905,910 in 1915 to $4,411,386,580 in 1924—an increase of 132 per cent.

The county and local rates were not so materially lowered and in many instances no reductions were made. It is from this latter viewpoint especially that the law creating the Tax Commission had a far-reaching influence on local schools, roads and improvements.

Still the year 1917 was not ended. World War necessitated legal, extra legal, and voluntary co-operative activity in Missouri. A unity of consciousness was developed through speakers and editors, state and local committees, and the 156,232 Missourians in service.

Individualism gave place to co-operation in producing and financing. A common interest brought forth a unity which was paramount until the close of 1918, and which found expression along many lines down to the present.

Significant of one of the divergent lines of forward enterprise was that relating to water transportation. In 1918 service was inaugurated between St. Louis and New Orleans on the locally formed Mississippi-Warrior River Barge Line. The success of this effort and its surprising growth were factors in bringing about the recent auspicious movement for the improvement of the inland waterways in Missouri and the Mississippi Valley.

New Civic Pride.

Another example of progress was the Kansas City Memorial campaign of 1919, which in six days resulted in 86,000 persons subscribing $2,048,095 for the construction of one of the most remarkable memorials in America. Rivaling the monument was the spirit of the people themselves who, through their leaders, planned to erect an art and museum center of culture and inspiration.

Along even broader and more far-reaching lines was the action of St. Louis in 1923 in voting $87,000,000 for purely civic improvements. It stands as the largest bond issue ever adopted by an American city for such a purpose. A large part of the funds were to be used to develop a noteworthy memorial plaza serving as a municipal center.

The new civic pride of Kansas City and St. Louis permeated the State.

Improvements were made in scores of towns. Library buildings were erected. Better sanitation was provided through waterworks and sewers. Electric lights ceased to have a metropolitan halo. The Legislature in 1919 forwarded the erection of monuments and memorials by State aid. The highway department was reorganized and a Negro industrial commission was created. During the same year Missouri women were given the right to vote and a few weeks later the State adopted the Federal woman's suffrage amendment.

The foundation for progress laid in 1920 could hardly have been surpassed. The year itself, Missouri's centennial of statehood, was ominous in economic import. The after-war inflation boom was bursting. Farm product prices were declining. The banks were carrying heavy loans and the business world feared depression, perhaps a panic.

Road Bond Issue.

It was under such conditions that Missouri took her greatest single step forward in the November elections of 1920 on voting $60,000,000 in bonds for good roads.

At the same election the voters of the State authorized the levying of a general property tax for pensions for the blind and the issuing of $1,000,000 in bonds for creating a soldiers' settlement fund. The latter was afterward supplemented with a $15,000,000 bond issue for payment of a soldiers' bonus. Kansas City was permitted to frame a new charter. Road districts were authorized to vote increased taxes.

Missouri had definitely and finally left behind her the crossroads of indecision and had chosen the highway of progress.

Judged by its fruits of only five years and prophesying its future by what has been planned, the State's highway program as inaugurated in 1920 with the $60,000,000 bond issue stands out as the greatest effort along economic lines ever undertaken by the people of Missouri.

That program is the outstanding feature of Missouri's decade of renascence. From it has come social development, the linking together of north and south Missouri by permanent bridges, and the breaking down of sectional provincialism. It has hastened the unification of counties, cities and villages. It has made rural life more enjoyable and profitable.

And it has lifted from Missouri that almost unbearable stigma which had stamped her from coast to coast as a mud State.

Today Missouri has more than 4000 miles of hard surfaced road. On her State highway system 2500 miles have been completed.

1000 Miles a Year.

By the close of 1926 one-half of the 7640 miles in her State system will be hard surfaced and 1000 miles graded. During 1925 Missouri ranged third in road building. Her work is now progressing at the rate of 1000 miles a year.

Missouri's centennial year of admission into the Union, 1921, was noteworthy in other respects besides the Centennial Road law. A Statewide observance of her history was featured in book and pageant. In this the people found another bond in common. Their interest in it has not ceased as is seen in the high rank of second in membership in the nation held by her State historical society.

In 1921 a department of penal institutions was created to displace a number of separate boards. Pensions were granted the blind. A mortgage recording tax was passed but did not become effective. A State Finance Department was created. A county unit school district law was enacted but this together with a State department consolidation measure was later defeated through the referendum.

In 1925 the Legislature took cognizance of the fact that 40 per cent of Missouri's area, or 18,000,000 acres, was under forest. Provision was made for the appointment of a State Forester. Progress had been made toward a State park system and by 1925 Missouri had acquired eight State parks with an area of 25,000 acres.

Along with these developments were those relating to waterpower. Missouri's potential water power totaled 350,000 horsepower of which only 16,000 had been utilized. By 1925 permits already issued or applied for totaled 280,000 horsepower on the White, Osage, Gasconade, Black, Current and Eleven Points.

Progress in Education.

Finally, what about education? The problem was not solved this decade but the repeated efforts made brought such results as these.

The equalization of assessments together with wealth increase, materially raised property valuations for taxation purposes. The State as such did not profit from this but the local governmental divisions as the school township reaped greatly increased revenue. More bonds could be voted for buildings and equipment, and more taxes raised for maintenance. Better schools, better teachers and higher standards were seen.

In 1917 Missouri had 258 first-class high schools. In 1925 the number had nearly doubled, 562. In 1915 the high school enrollment was 49,708. In 1924 it was 98,094. In 1915 the high school graduates numbered 6801, in 1924 they totaled 14,849.

Despite the relatively small increase in the State's population, even the number of graduates in the eighth grade rose from 26,739 in 1915 to 33,940 in 1924, an increase of 27 per cent. The State Teachers' Association has reflected the new morale of the profession by ranking second in America in membership with a total of 21,000 members, or 90 per cent of the number of teachers in the State. Throughout the State public education felt the spirit of Missouri's decade of renascence.

Today relatively few districts are doing less than their duty as far as taxable wealth will permit. If the problem has not been entirely solved it has been due to the difficulty in meeting the peculiar conditions of relatively poor, populous rural districts.

The decade from 1916 to 1926 has marked a new era in Missouri. It was characterized by new effort, new accomplishment, and new spirit. It was a decade of renascence crowning Missouri's century of statehood.

Herrin Mayor Runs for Assembly.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HERRIN, Ill., Jan. 16.—Mayor Marshall D. McCormack today opened his campaign for Democratic Representative from the Fiftieth Senatorial District. He was elected Mayor of Herrin on an anti-Ku Klux Klan ticket after years of strife had cost the lives of 13 citizens. Factional strife recently has died out.

HOW FAR SHOULD PRESUMPTION OF INNOCENCE GO?

sion: "It has been construed to mean that the power to grant bail resides in the Judge, but the right to bail is addressed to the exercise of sound judicial discretion. * * * What ought to be weighed is the prospect of success in prosecuting his writ of error. In this case reasonable doubt does not exist, such as would call for the exercise of a sound discretion to admit to bail."

A very recent decision of this character was given by the Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit, St. Louis, in 1924, in the case of Tony Bernacco. Judges Stone and Kenyon, in denying Bernacco's release on an appeal bond, said:

"The Court is clear that the allowance to bail after conviction is not an absolute right, but entirely within the exercise of a sound judicial discretion. This was true at common law. This is the rule in the Federal courts."

Appeals Court Opinion.

At a conference of senior Judges of the Circuit Court of Appeals, at which Chief Justice Taft of the Supreme Court presided, recommendations to District Judges on the subject of bail after conviction were voted. These were sent to the District Judges over the signatures of Chief Justice Taft and the secretary of the conference. On the subject of bail after conviction, this recommendation was made:

"The right to bail before conviction is secured by the Constitution to those charged with violation of the criminal laws of the United States. Bail after conviction by a court or a Judge of first instance, or an intermediate court or a Judge thereof, is not a matter of constitutional right. The acts of Congress make provision for allowance of bail after conviction by courts and Judges to release the convicted defendant upon the exercise of their judicial discretion, having in mind the purpose of the Federal statutes not to subject to punishment anyone until he has been finally adjudged guilty in the court of last resort. But the judicial discretion of the Federal courts and Judges in granting or withholding bail after conviction should be exercised to discourage review sought, not with hope of new trial, but on frivolous grounds merely for delay. Application for bail should be made to the trial Judge in the first instance."

In the Jack Daniel case, the appeal is based on the issue of jurisdiction, the defense holding that the case should have been brought to trial in St. Louis, where the offense was chiefly committed, not in Indiana, where only intermediate and incidental acts of the conspiracy occurred.

AUSTRIAN FINANCIAL PLAN ENTERING ITS LAST PHASE

Ridding Country of Officials Main Obstacle in Path of Stabilization, Says Dr. Zimmermann.

By the Associated Press.

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia, Jan. 16.—The plan to place Austria's finances on a sound basis, the most remarkable experiment of the kind of the post-war epoch, now is entering on its last phase, declared Dr. Zimmermann, the League of Nation's financial high commissioner in Austria, during a lecture here today.

Since the first of January, Dr. Zimmermann declared, control over the revenues of the state had been decreased and finally would be discontinued in June. The plan had succeeded fully. Its aims were to end the issue of unsecured bank notes, stabilize currency and balance the budget, a loan guaranteed by the League of Nations supplying the deficiencies pending the attainment of the latter. Now currency was stable despite the economic crisis, and the budget had to be balanced by increasing revenues and restricting the export of capital.

The main obstacle that had to be contended with, Dr. Zimmermann went on, was the excessive number of officials in Austria. It was necessary to eliminate 100,000, but it had been possible to get rid of only 80,000. There were 250,000 unemployed living on state doles. Those persons who had lived for any length of time in Austria could not deny her undoubted capacity and future prospects, he said.

MASS FOR MARGHERITA TODAY

Italian Priest to Deliver Oration at St. Charles Borromeo.

A solemn requiem mass for the Queen mother, Margherita, of Italy, who died 10 days ago, will be observed at 10:30 a. m. today at St. Charles Borromeo Catholic Church, 2901 Locust street.

The funeral oration will be delivered by the Rev. Father Andrini of Florence, Italy, who is in America on a mission in behalf of the Italian war orphans. The Italian Consul will attend the mass and other consuls representing European countries have been invited to be present. The Rev. Father Spigardi, the pastor, and a representative of the archbishop will assist in the devotions. The altar will be specially decorated with flowers.

The New Name for Meramec Highlands and the 500-acre tract adjoining, together with names of prize winners in the "$500.00 in Gold Name Contest," will be announced in these columns next Sunday, January 24th.

The contest closed Friday, January 15th, but, owing to the fact that thousands throughout St. Louis and St. Louis County sent in letters offering names and reasons for their selections, extended time will be required by the Judges to give due consideration to each, making it impossible for them to reach a decision and to announce the winners before next Sunday.

At that time, in addition to the new name for a famous location which will replace that of "Meramec Highlands," plans for the development of this splendid estate will be announced. This property, on the Big Bend Road and the Meramec River, is the finest and most beautiful spot in all St. Louis County.

Says Monkeys Have Human Impulses Without Mask

them in his patients, and its is a great advantage to a patient to have a doctor who can't be shocked."

Listening to Dr. Hamilton's stories about monkeys, one is sure one could never behave that way oneself, but it does sound very much like the other fellow. Consider a story that shows a monkey reaction to fear. Two little monkeys, sitting on the ground under a tree, are amicably picking fleas out of each other's fur, happy in their benevolent industry, when the bully of the tribe lurches into sight, looking for trouble.

The little monkey who spies him first, strategically turns on his little comrade, chattering, mauling him and calling on the bully to help. The big monkey mixes in, and the two unite in persecuting the surprised little fellow who hasn't hurt anybody. By the time the victim has made his escape, the clever monkey is in right with the bully, to whom he has betrayed his friend.

"Monkeys are especially good subjects for study," says Dr. Hamilton, "because they are so clever at bluffing. A monkey can't stand the feeling of inferiority any more than a man can, and he is as skillful as a human being in persuading himself that he is a fine fellow, after all. If he is licked by a big monkey, he beats up a little one to soothe his wounded ego and to prove to himself and the tribe that he is a conquering hero. The tribe respects him for it.

Craving for a variety of stimulation is one of the most important traits common to monkeys and human beings.

Animals below monkeys show this trait not at all; the new mental quality appears abruptly in the primates. Many monkey activities have no bearing on food-getting, mating or social adjustment, and cannot be described except as search for a new stimulus. When a monkey is shut up and deprived of the opportunity for new enjoyments he mopes just as people do.

"The desire for variety of stimulation is one of the major cravings of both monkeys and humans," says Dr. Hamilton. "When I was making a survey of nervous illness in a section of the Mississippi Valley where there are many farmers, I found that during the winter and spring months, when the clay roads are impassable and the farm families cannot get about, the farmers, their wives and their adolescent children are likely to complain of morning weariness, inner tension, digestive troubles and, along with these physical symptoms, a vague longing for something they cannot define. 'I just seem to crave something—I don't exactly know what.'

Craving to Create.

"When the roads are again open, the farmer's health improves, in spite of the fact that this is the season in which he works long hours in the field. On Sundays, holidays and after harvest the family can go about. This tendency to seek variety of stimulation, so apparent in the behavior of monkeys and young children, is an important factor in the health of adults.

"Doctors pay attention to unsatisfied cravings when they are desires for clearly defined objects, but it has been my experience that not only country families but also women in all walks of life suffer a great deal when the vague craving for variety is thwarted, and that this thwarting is the cause of nervousness. An understanding physician can often see opportunities available to the patient which the patient has overlooked and rouse a revivifying enthusiasm for those stimulations.

"The craving to create is the outgrowth of the craving for varied stimulations.

"Although in monkeys and in most humans the craving for variety leads to nothing constructive, yet here and there we find it flowering into a craving to effect new constructions. Most people are content to copy, but some long to design. From this select group craving to make something new we get arts and inventions.

"Slight traces of this desire for new forms appeared among my monkeys. Skirrel, who was especially brainy, stole a hammer, nails, a toy saw and some bits of wood. He drove the nails point down into the wood and he sawed the wood. You may think I am making this up, but Prof. Yerkes of Yale took some photographs of him thus engaged, and the pictures came out in the Youth's Companion. The nail-driving and the wood-sawing were very slight indications, but they suggested a trend toward new constructions.

"Another incident with the same implication of constructive effort was the action of Nora, an orang-autang, who came to the village in the rainy season and suffered from the cold. I threw a pile of burlap into her cage, expecting her to burrow among the sacks. Not Nora! She folded and shaped a piece of burlap into a sort of a Grecian gown which she wore. Later on she did the same thing with an old coat that was given her.

"The reason that a prairie dog village of today differs in no essential from a prairie dog village of 10,000 years ago is that the prairie dogs lack the desire for variety of stimulation and its offshoot, the desire for new forms of construction. A human colony today is strikingly different from one of only a few generations ago. In a few human beings the craving to make new forms has been so keen that we have as the result of their efforts the hammer, the lever and the wheel, the motion picture, the radio and the gasoline engine. We have also drama, painting and opera.

The Poor Rich Children.

"The thwarting of this desire to effect new constructions is likely to result in a nervous breakdown if it is a very strong craving.

"The creative type of nervous patient has received less attention than so highly developed and socially important a being should have. These patients are usually found to have been distinguished in childhood by a tendency to make new things, invent new games and be early interested in specialization. When they reach early adult life they do not thrive under conditions which require daily repetition of stereotyped, routine occupations.

"The housewife whose domestic and social activities are the cut-and-dried order which has been determined for her by the traditions of past generations; the spinster who is required to adapt her life to the tastes and habits of her parents because she lives with them and is dependent upon them for support; the clerk with a family which ties him to an uncongenial job; the son who must carry on his father's business in its prosperous routine—all such persons, if they possess highly potent cravings for creative activities, are apt to be nervous invalids, unable to adjust themselves to conditions which seem very pleasant to outsiders.

"The children of the rich are especially likely to have their creative desires stifled by the family wealth and the authority of their ruling elders. In America in particular many fortunes have been won through the possession of this very trait of the desire to create new forms. The children and the grandchildren of the man who becomes fabulously wealthy through the exercise of this ability are likely to inherit his desire and his ability to strike off into new fields of endeavor, but the family will not let them. The sad result is that instead of giving us new inventions and new forms of art, these poor little rich children, thwarted in their desire to create, fall back on the primitive craving for varied stimulation.

"They carry back into this craving for variety their restless urge for novelty, and they who would have been happy striving for innovations that would set the race forward indulge themselves in foolish and even criminal escapades. Thees baffled geniuses strive to satisfy their restless spirits by scampering and chattering and monkeying about."

82 Years Old and as Good as a Youngster

"Seven or eight years ago I was a very sick man. Doctors said catarrh troubled stomach and bowels, affecting the liver and heart. For more than a year I wanted to die, but could not. Upon the advice of a friend I tried Mayr's. One dose will convince, and although 82 years old I now feel as good as a youngster." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Wolff-Wilson Drug Stores, Walgreen Drug Co. and druggists everywhere.

82 Years Old and as Good as a Youngster

"Seven or eight years ago I was a very sick man. Doctors said catarrh trouble of stomach and bowels, affecting the liver and heart. For more than a year I wanted to die, but could not. Upon the advice of a friend I tried Mayr's. One dose will convince, and although 82 years old I now feel as good as a youngster." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Wolff-Wilson Drug Stores, Walgreen Drug Co. and druggists everywhere.

Memoirs of William Jennings Bryan

How He Helped Shape U. S. Financial Policy As Adviser to Wilson

Proposal by Morgan Company for Support of Six-Power Loan to China Rejected—Question of Loans to Belligerents—Recasting Plan for Federal Reserve System.

By William Jennings Bryan.

Edited and Corrected by Mary Baird Bryan.

SOON after Wilson's administration began, word was received from the Morgan group, which was the American firm interested in the sixpower loan to China, asking that a date be set for the consideration of the loan. A day in March, 1913, was chosen, and on that day a committee including Mr. S. P. Davidson of J. Pierpont Morgan Co. and Mr. Willard Straight called at the State Department and presented their case. I called into the conference Counsel Anderson and First Assistant Secretary Huntington Wilson.

The position taken by the bankers was that they had interested themselves in this loan at the request of the Government and that they were not willing to continue their connection with the loan unless the request was renewed by this administration. During the conference, inquiry brought out four important facts. First, that no American financiers except those in this group could participate in the loan. Second, that the financiers interested in this loan expected to control future loans. Third, that the loan was to be secured by control of revenues. Fourth, that the six groups of financiers expected their Governments to furnish such support as might be necessary, even to the use of force, to compel China to live up to the stipulations of the loan contract.

Upheld by Wilson.

I REPORTED the conference to the President at a cabinet meeting and expressed the opinion that the loan was objectionable, first, because it gave the monopoly of this nation's interest in China's finances to a small group of American bankers to the exclusion of all other American financiers. Second, because it gave to the six groups interested in this loan a monopoly of China's financial affairs. Third, the security contemplated might interfere seriously with the political independence of China. Fourth, it linked our country with other countries and deprived it of any independence in dealing with China. The American group, being only one of six groups, could not have a controlling voice in matters connected with the connection of the loans, and this Government, being only one of six Goverments interested through representatives, could not have a controlling voice in determining methods to be employed in enforcing the loan.

The President and members of the Cabinet, after considering my report, reached the same conclusion, and the President issued a statement declining to ask the group to participate further in the loan. In the discussion of the subject before Cabinet meeting, it was suggested that the refusal to approve the loan should be accompanied by a strong declaration favorable to the extension of our commerce in the Orient, and the President's statement, issued in April, 1913, contains such a statement.

The refusal of the Government to encourage this loan strengthened this nation's position in China, the Chinese people being opposed to the loan because of the harshness of its terms and because they had not been able to receive more favorable terms.

Opposition to War Loans.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY LANSING and I discussed the possibility of other loans being negotiated if this plan was approved, by which the country would be divided up into groups, each group engaged in negotiating loans to the belligerent countries with which it sympathized. Before leaving the State Department that evening, I wrote a letter to the President, and a day or two later I conferred with him on the subject at the White House. He approved of the proposition not to loan to belligerents, and at my suggestion wrote out a sentence stating the Government's position very concisely and strongly, and this sentence I incorporated in an announcement which he asked me to make.

This, I believe, is the first time any great nation ever took this position. It had been discussed at peace congresses and I remember having supported the doctrine some six or seven years ago at a peace congress held in New York, but I am not sure that any convention or congress of any importance ever indorsed it. It may be regarded as setting a new standard—as establishing a new precedent, and this precedent, in my judgment, will be sooner or later followed by other nations.

Soon after the breaking out of war in Europe in August, 1914, Mr. Davidson of the J. Pierpont Morgan company telephoned the State Department to inquire what the attitude of the Government would be in regard to loans which he thought were intended for the French Government. I replied that I would confer with the President and would let him know.

I at once consulted Counselor Lansing and learned that precedents were all in favor of such loans, they not being regarded as a violation of neutrality. I said to him that I thought they violated the spirit of neutrality because money, being able to purchase all other contraband materials, was in effect the worst of contraband. He at once endorsed the position as sound in principle, even though not supported by precedent, and later came back to suggest an illustration which appealed to me as a very forcible one, namely, that as the Government discourages its citizens from enlisting in foreign armies and withdraws the protection of citizenship from them as long as they serve under another flag, it should discourage the money of this country from taking a part in foreign wars. It is another step in the direction of peace, for the inability of belligerent nations to secure foreign loans must exert a strong restraining influence upon them.

Forming the Currency Bill.

AFTER the discussion of a currency bill had gone on for some time and it was generally understood that the President favored the passage of a currency bill at this session, he invited me to the White House to confer on the subject.

He presented the plan then under consideration and expressed the hope that I would be able to support it.

The plan was substantially that embodied in the Owen-Glass bill, with two exceptions: First, that the emergency rates were to be issued by the regional reserve banks as bank notes are now issued; and second, that the central board of control was to be composed in part of representatives appointed by the banks, the Government's representatives being in the majority.

After hearing the proposed plan I advised against any attempt to pass such a bill at this session and against its introduction until after the tariff bill was signed. The reason was, as I stated to him that such a currency plan would be sure to arouse great opposition in the Democratic party and might jeopardize the passage of the tariff bill through the Senate, in which the party had a small margin and in which some senators were greatly opposed to free wool and free sugar.

I called his attention to the fact that our party had been committed by Jefferson and Jackson and by recent platforms to the doctrine that the issue of money is a function of government and should not be surrendered to banks, and that I was so committed to the doctrine that I could not consistently indorse the authorization of more bank notes and that to do so would forfeit the confidence of those who trusted me—this confidence being my only political asset, the loss of which would deprive me of any power to assist him.

I also pointed out my objection to a divided control and argued in favor of making the entire board of control appointive by the President, so that the government would have complete and undisputed authority over the issue of the government notes which, in my judgment, should be substituted for the contemplated bank notes.

After presenting my views as clearly and forcibly as I could, I assured him of my entire confidence in his desire to do what was best for the people, and of my deep regret that we could not view these two phases of the subject in the same light.

He shared in the regret and expressed a willingness to have me state my position, if, when the plan was finally ready, there were any parts of it which I could not indorse, and I assured him that if I felt compelled to dissent from any part of the plan I would accompany the dissent with an explicit statement of confidence in the disinterestedness of his intention and make my dissent as mild as conditions would permit.

In conversation with Secretary McAdoo and Private Secretary Tumulty I went over much the same ground and expressed my distress at not being able to agree with the President on these points and my fear that the plan under consideration would divide our party and make any currency reform impossible.

Differences Reconciled.

I did not confer with the President again until the bill was completed, but received from Tumulty some encouragement to hope that the bill in its final form might be satisfactory.

When I was again invited to the White House to confer on this subject, the President informed me that it had been found possible to substitute Federal reserve treasury notes for regional bank notes and to give the government entire control of the central governing board.

I was greatly relieved that the two difficulties which had seemed insurmountable had been removed.

I expressed the opinion that the bill in its final form would be acceptable to the party and, being acceptable, its introduction would no longer menace the tariff bill. I offered to give him any assistance in my power, and, with his approval, gave out an interview which was published on Monday morning—his message to Congress being delivered at noon of the same day. The manner in which he conducted the preparation of the currency bill is conclusive proof of the President's open-mindedness.

President Wilson felt it his duty to the public to urge a reform of the currency, and he took up the matter with the same conscientiousness that has characterized his work along other lines.

The first persons called into consultation were impressed with the idea that no currency reform was possible except along the lines proposed by financiers, and these financiers, viewing the subject from their own standpoint, naturally favored bank paper and a control in which the banks would participate.

When, however, the President had pursued his investigation far enough to learn of the deep-seated objection entertained by the rank and file of the Democratic party to any extension of the note-issuing privilege enjoyed by the banks, he at once threw the weight of his powerful influence on the side of Celebrate Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bildner of 4449 Norfolk avenue celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Sunday evening with a party at their home. They were married Jan. 8, 1876. Bildner is 73 years old and his wife 67. They have seven children and seven grandchildren.

Title for a King's Old Landlady.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Evidence has been received in Paris that King Rama VII, the new ruler of Siam, has not forgotten the days when he was a student at the Sorbonne. When the new King, formerly Prince Pradjadhipok, succeeded to the throne on the death of his brother, Rama VI, two months ago his old landlady in Paris, "Mother Andjielle," sent him a message of congratulation. King Rama replied by sending her a considerable gift of money and conferring on her a title of Siamese nobility. "Mother Andjielle' thus has become an "Escourance" and is entitled to take a place near the throne whenever she visits the capitol of Siam.

INQUEST IN HOUSEBOAT KILLING TOMORROW

One of Two Brothers Arrested After Three-Cornered Fight Has Skull Fracture.

Just who inflicted the blows that caused the death of John Miller, 52 years old, in a three-cornered fight in his houseboat at the foot of Lesperance street, and who fractured the skull of one of two brothers—the other two combatants—are questions which the Circuit Attorney and Coroner will take up tomorrow at the inquest into Miller's death.

The fight occurred Friday night in the inky-black darkness of the houseboat, its candle light having been extinguished early in the struggle, and the nearest coherent account is that of one of the brothers, George Stein, 31 years old, a laborer, who lived with his brother, Joseph, 25, in a houseboat next door.

Miller's body, the head and face beaten badly, was found about four feet outside the shanty door, by two women relatives who chanced to call. They summoned police of the Soulard Street Station. While the police were assembling the apparent instruments of violence—a blood-stained hatchet, flat-iron and a board about four feet long, with nails protruding at the end—George Stein made his appearance. His face was scratched and he was disheveled.

He told the police there had been a fight and then led them to the home of John C. Mahon at 2107 De Kalb street, where he pointed out his brother, Joseph, bleeding from a wound in the head, which later, at City Hospital, was pronounced as a fracture of the skull.

The brothers were placed under arrest, and at the station George Stein made a detailed statement of the circumstances, so far as he could recall. He related that the houseboat owned by himself and brother was destroyed by fire Thursday night. The brothers could not determine the origin of the fire, but they believed Miller knew something about it. So they left Mahon's house, where they were sojourning, to call on Miller.

"Joe went inside, while I waited outside," related Stein in his statement. "Then there was scuffling and something was thrown out the door. The light went out. I went inside and grabbed somebody. He didn't have a coat on, and I knew it was Miller. We fought around until somehow we all tumbled out the door. I grabbed a plank and hit somebody. I was dazed, but saw my brother bleeding, and helped to carry him away."

CHINCHILLA NEARLY EXTINCT IN MOUNTAINS OF PERU

Unless Protection Is Provided Hunting of Rodents for Fur Will Be Abandoned.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News.

LIMA, Peru, Dec. 20.—Sad news for women who have their hearts set on the acquisition of chinchilla wraps is that the chinchilla is in danger of extinction. Already the price of chinchilla fur is almost prohibitive. In a few more years, unless the rodent of the barron Andes is given adequate protection, his fur will bring the equivalent of a King's ransom.

However, with the decrease in the number of the little animals, the hunt for them becomes more determined. In the early days of the Spanish conquest of Peru and Bolivia chinchillas were found in the lowlands and on the plateaus. They were as common as rats along the few rivers in these two countries. The wives of the Spanish Viceroys discovered the beauty of the fur and the hunt of the animals began.

Old records show that in 1884 a German furrier in Chile exported 100,000 skins valued at 250,000 gold marks (about $62,500). In 1900 Northern Chile shipped over 2,000,000 pelts. Such wholesale killing caused the chinchilla practically to disappear from its old Chilean haunts and greatly reduced the number in Peru and Bolivia. Efforts to carry on chinchilla farming here, as silver fox farming is done in the United States, have not been successful.

PAINTERS' PAY MAY BE CAUSE OF NEW STRIKE

Union Members Voting on Demand for Increase of 20 Cents an Hour.

Another painters' strike is in prospect with the announcement yesterday that the five local unions making up the Painters' District Council are balloting on the proposition of a strike for increase in wages of 20 cents an hour. The present scale, forced on employers by a strike several years ago, is $1.30 cents an hour. The desired scale would be $1.50 an hour or $12 a day for eight hours work.

Two-thirds of the unions' membership must vote to strike and results of the vote will not be known until next week. Agreements now in effect provide that should the painters decide upon a strike they must give employers 90 days' notice before walking out. Union officials said yesterday that the proposition was boiled down to a present wage or strike alternative because they are sure employers will not grant the increase without a struggle.

A minor proposition which is being voted on provides for standardization of wages paid apprentice painters. These are now paid from $12 to $30 a week. Under the proposed rule they would be paid on a graduated scale during the three years apprenticeship varying from one-fifth to four-fifths of a journeyman's pay.

'LONE BLOND BANDIT' GIVEN 15-YEAR PRISON SENTENCE

Man Wanted in 20 Cities Admits He Committed 24 Holdups in 37 Days.

By the Associated Press.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 16.—Elmore L. Reynolds, known as the "lone blond bandit," and wanted in 20 cities for robberies and burglaries, was sentenced to 15 years in prison by County Judge Gillette here today. Reynolds pleaded guilty to first degree larceny and assault in the holdup and robbery of a taxicab driver here more than a month ago. He took the sentence calmly, saying "thank you, suh."

Reynolds, 28 years old, said he was born in Milwaukee, is married, and had passed most of his life in Albuquerque, N. M. When arrested here he was wanted for breaking out of jail at Wichita, Kan., and as soon as his arrest became generally known, the Rochester police received scores of requests that he be held for the authorities of various cities. He told police that before being placed in jail at Wichita, he had served sentences in prison camps of Florida and California.

In the 37 days between the time he left the Wichita jail and his arrest here, he said, he shot two men and successfully completed 24 holdups in cities between St. Louis, Mo., and Washington, D. C.

Turkish Traffic Cops in Gay Dress.

By the Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 16.—A new corps of brilliantly dressed traffic police is giving back to the streets of Constantinople the color lost with the passing of fez and turban. The crimson and [illegible] helmets of these officers and their batons of red and white stripes, which resemble sticks of peppermint candy, give promise that the new era is not to be entirely drab.

MANY TO PROTEST AGAINST CLOSING OF CENTRAL HIGH

Alumni to Join Students in Mass Meeting Announced for Wednesday Night at School.

JUDGE HAMILTON ACCEPTS LEADERSHIP

President Fahrenkrog Denies Intention of Discontinuing Sessions Permanently—Building Called Unsafe.

Alumni of Central High School have expressed considerable interest in the movement to protest against the possibility of the permanent closing of that institution, and Circuit Judge Hamilton, who has assumed the leadership, expects a large attendance at the mass meeting to be held Wednesday night at the school auditorium. The present building is considered unsafe for school use unless repaired, it was learned yesterday.

Students, alumni and faculty, as was told in the Post-Dispatch Friday, are alarmed at the prospect for Central, following a report on the condition of the building, which caused the Board of Education to order it temporarily closed and the pupils and teachers sent elsewhere. The impression has spread that the school might go out of existence. The students do not wish to be separated even temporarily, if it can be avoided.

H. F. Fahrenkrog, president of the board, broke official silence yesterday to say the board had no intention of discontinuing Central, but only wanted to repair or replace its building. Asked if he could offer definite assurance that pupils and teachers could return to Central as a unit, later, Fahrenkrog said: "I can't answer; that's up to the Superintendent."

Building Opened in 1893.

Superintendent of Instruction Maddox has said that those who were alarmed about Central's future were speculating. The institution is the first high school west of the Mississippi and is 73 years old. The present building, at Grand boulevard and Windsor place, was opened in 1893.

President Fahrenkrog said Building Commissioner Milligan had reported the building was unsafe, not fireproof, "and, in a way, hazardous." The board has not decided whether to undertake extensive alterations and repairs or to erect a new building on the same or another site, the president said. The only matter that has come before it officially is the order for the faculty and student body to vacate Feb. 1, the first-year pupils going to Yeatman High and the remainder going to the new Beaumont High. Distribution of the faculty has not been ordered.

Told that alumni and other friends of Central were asking why announcement of the building's condition and the order to vacate had come in the nature of a surprise, allowing less than three weeks to move out, Fahrenkrog said: "I'm trying to find out myself why this wasn't reported sooner. Commissioner Milligan said he had been carrying the burden of responsibility for that building long enough."

Long Considered Unsafe

Commissioner Milligan explained the condition of the building had been far from satisfactory, though not alarming, for several years, but said there had been no use taking it up with the board sooner because there had been no facilities for redistribution of high school pupils. Completion of Beaumont High, at Vandeventer and Natural Bridge avenues, he added, would make a shift of students possible.

Fahrenkrog said he thought the board would approve if Supt. Maddox submitted a plan to keep Central High pupils and teachers together in the present or a new building, but he did not think Central could be kept as a unit in the Beaumont building because Yeatman High is overcrowded and some of its pupils must be sent to Beaumont.

There has been no discussion in board meetings of the suggestion to erect a new board office building on the Central High site, Fahrenkrog declared, but members have talked this over individually. He didn't know of any discussion about selling this site for commercial purposes, of which there have been unexplained rumors. He thought the whole subject would be threshed out by the next board meeting, Jan. 25.

Students Start Protest.

Some other board members have expressed themselves similarly as being unaware of detailed plans for Central. Recommendations as to use of school buildings and distribution of students must come from the superintendent. Supt. Maddox has said he had to rearrange high school plans quickly after the report on the Central building was made.

Central alumni and others have expressed belief that "some one is passing the buck." Teachers were stunned by the unexpected order to move and are wondering how they can accomplish the task of packing the accumulated records and supplies of decades by Feb. 1.

Students started the protest movement, thinking of the school spirit they have achieved and of the frequent supremacy of their representatives in athletic and other contests. They readily induced alumni to take it up, in recollection of the institution's history. A permanent alumni organization may be formed. Pupils are discussing various ways of getting around their objections even to temporary disbanding, but the alumni have not reached consideration of this phase.

45 MINE VICTIMS BURIED

Ninety-One Bodies Recovered in Oklahoma.

By the Associated Press.

WILBURTON, Ok., Jan. 16.—Beneath leaden skies that threatened rain, the bodies of more than 45 of the more than 90 miners who lost their lives in an explosion at the Degnan-McConnel Mine No. 21, Wednesday, were laid to rest today in a country cemetery a short distance from the mine.

They were the last of the victims to be buried here. With 91 bodies recovered, rescue parties continued today the work of clearing up the debris in an effort to locate the bodies of from three to five men yet believed to be in the workings.

Schwab Expects Rise in Steel Price.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Charles W. Schwab, capitalist and chairman of the board of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, sailed today for Europe, forecasting a rise in the price of steel and continued improvement in that industry. Schwab said the price of steel was too low and should be $5 more a ton. Business for 1926 will surpass that of 1925, he believes. Schwab remarked he was only joking when he said recently that a man in the city wrote his speeches. "I prepare all my own speeches," he said.

CITIZENS CO-OPERATING WITH THE COMMUNITY COUNCIL

Sixty Needy Families Called to Attention of the Organization During Past Two Weeks.

Sixty needy families were called to the attention of the Family Department of the Community Council by citizens and organizations during the past two weeks, Dr. Louis Witt, chairman of the department, stated yesterday, to prove that the public is co-operating with charitable organization in scientific care of needy families.

"There was a time when individuals gave money, food or clothing to the needy family without any investigation or little question," he said. "Fortunately that time has nearly passed. When a family comes to the attention of a citizen today, he telephones one of the social organizations."

Earl's Daughter Sells Banjolele.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Lady Betty Fielding, youngest daughter of the Earl of Denbigh, has joined the ranks of the aristocrats who have "gone into trade" and is selling "banjoleles" at a shop in Bond street.

American Can Co. Not Involved.

The headline of a story published in the Home Edition of Saturday's Post-Dispatch announcing a verdict of $15,000 damages against the American Can Co. in a personal injury suti brought by a young woman, was erroneous. The company involved was the St. Louis Can Co., as the text of the article correctly related. Miss Helen Frank, 20 years old, of 914A Carroll street, obtained the judgment for loss of four fingers of the right hand while working at a punch press in the St. Louis Can Co. plant.

BOY, 10, TELLS OF BUYING LIQUOR

Disturbance in School Is Followed by Arrest of Bartender.

"I just went in and bought it," said 10-year-old John Springmeyer, son of George Springmeyer, of 1814 North Twenty-third street, to Police Captain Walton of the North Market Street Station, yesterday, in explanation of the purchase of a half pint of whisky from which he and 11-year-old Carl Jenkins drank, resulting in the Jenkins boy, a pupil at the Blair School, being sent to the City Hospital, suffering from acute alcoholism.

The boy's story, supplemented by that of the Jenkins boy, caused the poilce to raid a saloon at 2201 Madison street, yesterday, where they arrested Harry Hunt, 30, the bartender, after they had seized a pint of whisky. Hunt denied making the sale to either of the boys, who were held to be forwarded to the House of Detention.

Took $2 From Aunt's Purse.

The Jenkins boy was released yesterday from the City Hospital, where he had been held for 24 hours while recuperating from the effects of the liquor. He was sent there, as has been told, when he created a disturbance with another pupil, upon arriving at school Friday morning. He was taken to the principal's office and detained by the janitor, until the police summoned a hospital ambulance.

Upon being released from the hospital, Carl related what the police believed to be the most coherent of several conflicting stories. He said he had taken $2 from a purse belonging to an aunt, and met the Springmeyer boy, who is a pupil at St. Leo's School, Twenty-fifth and Mullanphy streets, in the vicinity of their homes.

Drank Liquor in Alley.

That was Friday morning John, he said, once before had partaken of some liquor. "I don't know which one of us thought of it first," Carl told a reporter for the Post-Dispatch yesterday. "I guess we both thought of it at once. Anyway, I gave John the money and he went to the saloon and brought back a half pint." The Springmeyer boy corroborated the story of the purchase.

"Then," continued Carl, "we went into an alley and met another boy we knew and we all drink some of it and threw the rest away."

Carl is red-headed, of alert appearance, and is a pupil in the fifth grade. He is the son of Mrs. Florence Jenkins, a widow, residing at 2242A Madison street. John also is bright in appearance, both boys being of average size for their age.

2000 RETAIL HARDWARE MEN MEET TOMORROW

Three-Day Annual Convention and Exhibition; Local Business Men on Program.

The Missouri Retail Hardware Dealers' Association, comprising more than 2000 retail dealers throughout the State, will open its three-day annual convention and exhibit tomorrow at the Hotel Statler. This association annually brings to St. Louis approximately 1500 retail hardware men, who make their purchases for the year at that time. It is estimated that the volume of business thus contracted amounts to nearly $3,600,000.

Among the addresses listed are: "Better Business Methods," by Harry A. Riehl, manager of the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis; "Salesmanship from the Retailer's Standpoint," by Edgar Gengenbach, sales manager of Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney; "A Successful Retailer," by E. W. Hughes of Butler Brothers; "Getting a Stock Turn," by Eugene L Johnson, assistant secretary, Shapleigh Hardware Co.; "The Business Outlook," by Paul J. Stokes, head of the Research Bureau of National Retail Hardware Dealers' Association, and "Making It Pay," by Harold V. Bervig of Indianapolis.

The entire sixteenth floor of the hotel will be occupied by an exhibit of every article found in the hardware store.

Old Remedy Relieves Kidney Trouble

A Grateful User Tells of His Thankfulness for Warner's

Wonderful results have been obtained in combating kidney trouble by following certain rules of diet and the use of Warner's Compound (formerly Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy) a preparation on the market nearly 50 years.

A grateful user writes: "Your medicine is a miracle to me. My weight was reduced from 157 to 114 pounds when I left the hospital in despair. I began to use Warner's Compound and at once commenced to improve. Now everyone is saying to me that I look better than ever. Every word I have written is true and I can prove it by hundreds who knew of my condition."

Warner's Compound is made from herbs and has been sold for nearly 50 years, a true indication of its worth. Get a bottle today.

CHAUFFEURS SEEK EFFICIENCY

Domestic Drivers Will Hear Safety Council Secretary Tomorrow.

Girard C. Vernum, secretary-manager of the St. Louis Safety Council, will address the Better Chauffeurs' and Garagemen's Bureau, an organization composed largely of domestic chauffeurs in St. Louis, at a meeting tomorrow night at the temporary headquarters of the organization, at 4321 Garfield avenue.

Al Hudson, a Negro, president of the organization, said it has about 240 members. It is open to any licensed private chauffeur. The purpose of the organization primarily is to reduce automobile accidents and to teach the chauffeurs greater familiarity with the automobiles they drive. An erroneous report has been circulated that the organization is a union, he declared.

GAMBLING WARRANTS IN SLOT MACHINE CASE

Managers and Employes of General Vending Machine Company Named.

Warrants charging "the setting up of a gambling device" were issued yesterday against Caesar Pollnow, 3817 McDonald avenue, manager of the Central Vending Machine Co. at 3124 California avenue, and his brother, Fred, his associate in the business. Two of their employes, Russell Eaton, 3115 Thomas avenue, and Raymond J. Lee, 2832 Accomac avenue, also are charged with the same offense.

The four men were among 27 arrested in the new police campaign against slot machines. Twenty-three others were required to appear at the Circuit Attorney's office Friday and were later booked at Police Headquarters on similar charges. Numbered among them were saloon keepers, restaurant and pool hall proprietors who had permitted the Central Vending Machine Co. to install its device in their places of business. They all pleaded that the police had told them the machines were legal.

That any such statements were made by police officers was denied at headquarters yesterday. Detectives allege that the Central Vending Machine Co. refitted its machines which were banished in a previous campaign against gambling and put them out disguised as inoffensive "automatic salesmen" dispensing mints. According to police, this was a trick to escape the law. Detectives discovered hidden compartments in the backs of the machines into which the customers' winnings dropped. These compartments were guarded by a locked door and the proprietor of the place had the key.

BUILDING AND ENGINEERING CONTRACTS BREAK RECORDS

Compilation Shows Total $6,600,000,000 in U. S. Last Year; Construction Also Gains.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Building and engineering contracts in the United States during 1925 surpassed all previous records, a compilation by F. W. Dodge Corporation estimating the total conservatively at $6,600,000,000, shows. Not only was the volume larger beyond all precedent, but it continued at a record-breaking rate up to the end of December, the report stated, contracts in 36 states for that month amounting to $510,868,400, the highest December figure ever recorded.

Total construction in 36 states, exclusive of Texas and the far Western states, was computed at $5,821,068,400, an increase of 30 per cent over 1924 which was a record year. The estimated year's total for the entire country showed a 26 per cent increase over 1924.

Building for residential purposes led other construction with $2,671,818,000, or 44 per cent of the total; public works and utilities $885,732,000; commercial buildings $835,673,000; industrial and electric power plants, $462,741,200, and educational buildings $413,203,700. The most spectacular increase was 98 per cent in social and recreational buildings, amounting to $243,326,300 in 1925.

PRIZE FOR BEST-DRESSED CLOTHIER AT CONVENTION

Missouri Association Also Will Have Style Show During Meeting Here, Feb. 3-5.

The Missouri Retail Clothiers' and Furnishers' Association has announced the offer of a prize of $20 for the best-dressed member attending the Association's seventeenth annual convention at Hotel Statler, Feb. 3 to 5. The object is to bring out a large attendance exhibiting the choicest selections of the merchants' stocks. Another feature of the convention will be a style show, to be held during a banquet, Feb. 4, in the Statler ballroom.

Capt. Robert E. Lee, an honorary member of the association, will deliver the address of welcome. There will be talks on credits and "Making Service Pay," and Harry W. Riehl, manager of the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis, will speak on "All Wool and a Yard Wide." Several joint sessions will be held with the Men's Apparel Club, composed of traveling salesmen for clothing manufacturers.

LONDON'S 'CLASSIC' BEAUTIES

Of 50 at Least a Dozen Are American Girls.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 16.——There are many more beautiful women in England today than in Victorian times, and one reason is the number of American beauties who have married British titles. The authority for this statement is the court photographer, whose opinion is almost universally respected. He says that the new styles of hair dressing, the shingle and bob, have nothing to do with it.

"I would say that there are at least 50 'classic' beauties in London society today," he said, "and at least a dozen of these are American girls married to Englishmen. Twenty years ago there were only two or three women in London who could be called beautiful. Today one sees hundreds of women who, although not exactly beauties, are pretty. Women nowadays have more character, and character frequently means beauty acording to modern standards."

LOG OF ROUTE 2, AIR LINE HIGHWAY TO KANSAS CITY

All-Weather Road Across Missouri Permits Making Faster Time in Auto Than by Train.

By RICHARD G. BAUMHOFF.

Where Daniel Boone blazed saddle trails before Missouri had left the Spanish dominion, where later gold seekers trekked for California with their banjos on their knees, where horse rigs used to bounce over the ruts, and where for years motorists have struggled with mud and rocks, the State at last has built a fine highway which automobiles can follow with ease and speed.

It is State highway No. 2, the air line from St. Louis to Kansas City. Eight days ago the last detour was eliminated and an increasingly heavy-traffic now can cross Missouri with the knowledge that no stretch of mud or rough going will stop it.

Of its 265.5 miles of length, 189.1 miles now are concrete, and the rest has been made passable.

A contract was let last Tuesday for 33 more miles of concrete, to eliminate the section through Fulton.

Many details about this important highway have been told in the daily news columns, but the Post-Dispatch now publishes the following log of the route:

00.0—Leave Union Station, follow Locust-Lindell, Union, Page, Ferguson avenue.

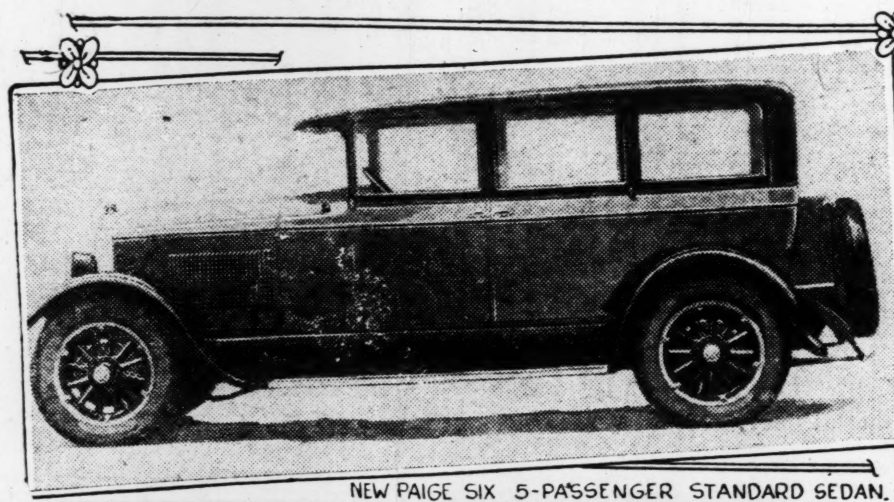
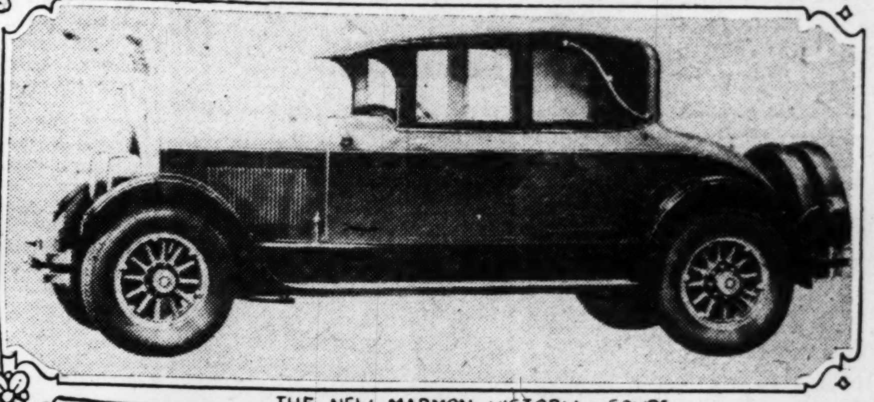
Automotive Development as Seen at New York Show

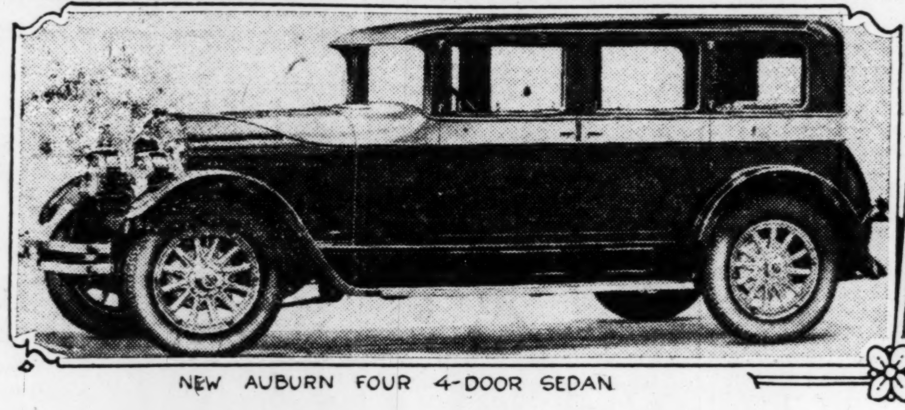
New Cars and Trends of the Industry, as Disclosed at Annual Exhibition, Discussed by an Authority on Automobile Design.



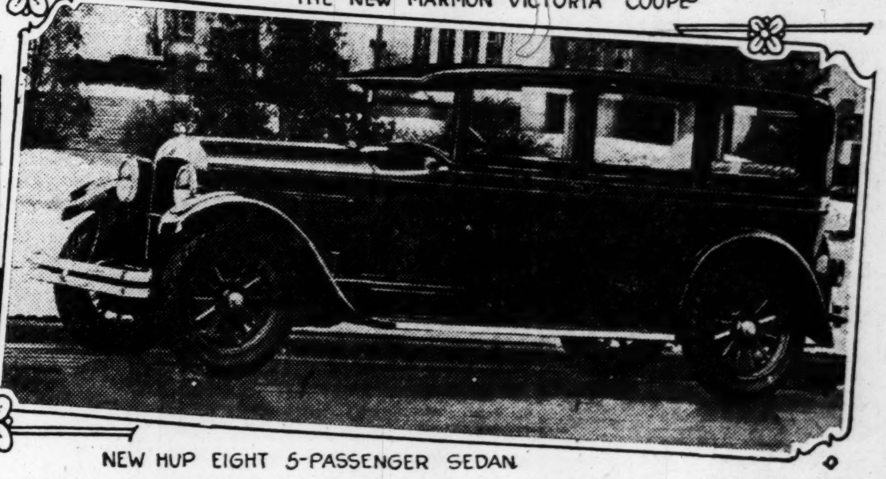
NEW PAIGE SIX 5-PASSENGER STANDARD SEDAN.



THE NEW MARMON VICTORIA COUPE



NEW AUBURN FOUR 4-DOOR SEDAN



NEW HUP EIGHT 5-PASSENGER SEDAN

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—In spite of the more or less popular opinion that automobiles have attained as nearly as possible perfection in design and construction, each year the annual automobile show brings new models literally bristling with features contributing to better performance, comfort, safety and lower maintenance cost. In this respect the twenty-sixth annual automobile show is no exception.

Also the purchaser of a car today gets more for his money than ever before. The lower prices of cars do not mean that quality has been lowered also. The reverse is true. Car manufacturers have not skimped on materials. There actually is more metal, wood, rubber and fabric in today's motor vehicles than in those of former days.

Cars and Engines Larger.

Many car makers have increased the wheelbase length of their models, thus making possible longer bodies. Frames have been made heavier to support larger power plants. A study of the engines in the 1926 cars shows that bores, strokes, and sometimes both, have been generally increased. This was done to better performance, that is, acceleration, hill climbing, sustained high road speeds, particularly in the closed models. All of this means added weight, and while this weight does not hinder the performance of the vehicles it does make for sturdier chassis and motor vehicles as a whole.

No doubt the great strides made by enclosed models in recent years, together with almost universal adoption of balloon tires, has been the chief factor in increasing engine power of the 1926 cars. In the past it has been taken for granted that an open model would be superior to an enclosed model in general performance and sustained road speed.

The advent of the enclosed car, however, has changed the character of the drawings in the designing rooms of the motor car builders, so what most designers are seeking is to incorporate so-called "open-car performance" in closed models. It is noteworthy that many closed models today are fully capable of maintaining road speeds formerly possible only with open models. Naturally, to overcome the increased weight of a closed model, wind resistance and similar factors, engineers have been obliged to increase engine sizes.

A Case in Point.

Increasing the size of the cylinders of an engine bring with it other changes, so in the 1926 engines are larger, heavier crankshafts, larger bearings, more bearings and more adequate lubricating systems.

A typical example of the influence the closed car has had upon design is shown in the new Nash inclosed-car engine. This engine, instead of being to the requirements of the lightest car in the line, has been designed to power the heaviest model and to give that model life and performance hitherto found only in an open model. This engine develops approximately 25 per cent more power than the previous engine used in the Nash advanced six. It has 3 7-16-inch bore and 5-inch stroke, a seven-bearing crankshaft and four-bearing camshaft.

As is the case with other engines, Nash has made this engine practically immune from wear caused by foreign substances entering through the crankcase breather, carburetor air intake and other points.

Cleaners and Filters.

Oil filters, air cleaners and similar devices are growing in favor, and quite a number of car manufacturers have added such apparatus to their cars this year. While these have a direct bearing upon the engine performance in general, they have the further advantage of greatly prolonging the life of bearings, cylinders, piston rings, valve stems, cams, etc. All of this means reduced maintenance cost, and there is good reason to believe that the cars of 1926 should greatly outlast their predecessors.

Frames Made Thicker.

One must pore over the chassis at the show to appreciate fully some of the tendencies in design and construction. The casual observer may not be impressed very much with the frame of the present-day car, but close inspection reveals that in the majority of cases manufacturers are using much stronger and stiffer frames. Heretofore a frame stock 5-32 inch thick was considered quite heavy and was found only in the larger cars. Today this is light compared to that used in some of the eight-in-line models of moderate price. For example, Auburn uses frame material 7-32 inch thick in its eight-cylinder model.

Frames have been greatly stiffened by tubular cross-members and also by four-point suspension of the power plant in numerous instances. In fact, quite a few manufacturers, especially those building eight-in-line models, have gone back to the four-point suspension system for the power plant in place of the conventional three-point system. In some instances it was found that the use of balloon tires caused a peculiar vibration of the radiator and front part of the hood, but by stiffening the front part of the frame with a power mounted at four points, this vibration has been overcome. There has been a wholesale tendency to make the front end of frames more rigid, which no doubt can be attributed to the general adoption of front-wheel brakes.

Some of the New Cars.

The new cars are replete with innovations. It is the first time an American car maker has shown a car with a worm-driven rear axle instead of the conventional bevel-gear type.

The maker referred to in this case is the Stutz Motor Car Co., which is showing for the first time its brand-new model incorporating an eight-in-line engine with overhead camshaft, entirely new internal expanding hydraulic four-wheel brakes and a chassis in which the bearings are periodically lubricated from the engine.

Another car making its appearance for the first time is the Chrysler Imperial, a larger and higher-priced six-cylinder car, equipped with a 90 h. p. engine and capable of doing 80 m. p. h. Then there is the Pontiac, latest of the General Motors offerings, which sells at $825 for both coach and coupe. Willys-Knight has a new "70," a companion to the larger sleeve-valve six. Paige has a new and smaller six-cylinder line. A brand-new four-cylinder car is exhibited by Auburn, and the Flint Junior, a light six-cylinder model, has been added to the present line of the Flint Motor Co. Velie is showing a new sedan, the windshield of which has a very pronounced slope, to insure better vision and to cut down wind resistance, indicating once more the trend on the part of manufacturers to get open-car performance with enclosed models. Hup shows a larger eight-in-line.

Rubber Mountings.

Judging from the exhibits at the show this year, there is reason to believe that rubber will play a vastly more important role in the cars to come than that of functioning as tires. Several car manufacturers are using rubber shock insulators for mounting their springs and in the new Chrysler Imperial the power plant also rests on rubber blocks held in place by metal housings. Eliminating metal to metal contact in this way, naturally means greater comfort for occupants of the car as well as individually insulating the units themselves, prolonging their life.

Where the metallic shackle is still used to hang springs, lubrication of the pins has been made simpler in many cases by a lubricating system whereby oil is fed from a central reservoir to all of the bearing surfaces by depressing a pedal.

The 1926 cars are by far the best looking the industry has turned out. With the longer wheelbases adopted by many makers, the bodies have been lengthened, giving a better proportion to the windows in the case of closed models and more rakish appearance to open cars. Two-tone color combinations are the rule, and the biggest advance so far as finish of cars is concerned, is the general adoption of pyroxylin base or lacquer.

The all-steel body is gaining in popularity and has much to recommend it. For one thing, it reduces considerably the front door and windshield pillars making vision for the driver much better. From a production standpoint, the all-steel body has many less parts. Also such things as upholstery and body fittings can be handled as separate assemblies and fastened to the all-steel body by buttons in much the same manner as buttoning a glove. Lugs and slots in the body are provided for attaching cushions and upholstery, eliminating much of the hand-fitting which must be done on a composite wood and steel body wherein the upholstery, head lining material, etc., must be tacked.

The brand new models are, of course, the outstanding attractions at the show and include the Stutz, Pontiac, Chrysler "Imperial," Willys-Knight "70" and the four-cylinder Auburn.

From a spectacular standpoint the stream-lined Rickenbacker "Super Sport," a 90-mile an hour job, with a 100 horsepower engine, is the attraction.

The Pontiac is not essentially a small car from a power standpoint, as the engine is a six-cylinder with bore and stroke of .¼ by 3¾ inches, respectively. It peaks at 2400 revolutions a minute, and develops at this point 40 horsepower. The wheelbase is 110 inches.

Aside from the unusual relation between bore and stroke, the engine follows conventional practice, being of L-head design, three-bearing crankshaft and full pressure lubrication. Back of the engine, is a single plate clutch and three-speed gearset. all forming a unit power plan. Springs are semi-elliptic and wood wheels are standard. The latter carry tires 29x4.75 inches.

Duco finish is standard, the uppers of the two bodies being in black, while the body of the coupe is Arizona gray with red stripe, and that of the coupe is light sage green with similar stripe. Rear quarters of the coupe are in leather and fitted with top bows. The interior of the coach is gray corduroy, while this material and leath-

AUTO MEN WORRY OVER ROADS, NOT SATURATION POINT

Having Enough Surfaced Highways on Which to Run Cars Is Regarded as Vital Problem.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1926.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Automobile manufacturers are not worried over automobile sales reaching the saturation point. The motor car makers here for the automobile show and the World Transport Congress made it plain that they confidently expected plenty of persons who can and will buy automobiles in 1926. They are far more worried about the development of roads on which to run cars.

For every mile of concrete country highway built the past year, 577 automobiles were produced. The 577 cars cannot be parked on one mile of highway, let alone run on it. Automobile production is increasing at a higher rate than the building of paved roads, for in 1924 one mile of road was built for every 520 automobiles.

More than 20,200,000 motor vehicles were registered and in commission in the United States on Jan. 1. If these cars were placed in two lines on the 38,100 miles of concrete roads in the United States, each car would have only comfortable parking room. Consequently, automobile men are eagerly advocating building more roads. About 6400 miles of concrete highways were built in 1925, an increase of about 5 per cent as compared with the previous year. This is in contrast to an increase of nearly 16 per cent in automobile construction.

The New-Day JEWETT SIX
f. o. b. Detroit. Tax extra

What Jewett Means by a "New-Day" Car

It means a car with instant acceleration—a flashing "pick-up" that shoots you through traffic quick as thought.

But it means, also, equally quick "stopping"—the instant, unfailing, cushioned stop possible only with Paige-Hydraulic 4-wheel brakes.

It means, too, wider, freer, clearer vision than any former car has ever had—almost complete elimination of the deadly "blind spot."

It means an ease of steering and control that makes your car seem responsive more to your wish than to your touch.

It means an uncanny ability to slip into parking places unbelievably small.

It means a generous interior roominess—roomy comfort rivaling that of the biggest sedans.

And, it means, too, a quality Sedan, Paige built.

THERE have been speedy cars before this—economical cars — comfortable cars — easily steered cars—quickly accelerated cars—but until The New-Day Jewett there never was one car embodying every last one of these essential qualities! Three minutes after you take the wheel of this New-Day Jewett-Six—you'll know that Jewett, and only Jewett, has built such a truly new-day car!

HUDSON-ESSEX ENDS BEST YEAR

R. C. Frampton Reviews Consistent Gain in Sales in U. S. and Abroad.

Hudson-Essex has just completed the most successful year in its history. The quarter million mark in production was passed, which is said by Hudson officials to be the largest volume of six-cylinder cars ever made in a year by any manufacturer. Final figures, while not yet available, will run considerably over this total.

Not only have Hudson-Essex sales been sensationally good in the United States, says R. C. Frampton, head of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., but the demand for them in foreign countries is largely increased. In Great Britain, the Essex is widely spoken of as one of the year's most successful cars, with sales running far ahead of any other American six. In Canada, the growth of Hudson-Essex popularity has been much ahead even of the showing in the United States, while South America, Africa, Australia, Europe and the Orient have come strongly ahead.

Hudson-Essex dealers throughout our territory, which comprises a large part of Missouri and Illinois, found 1925 the most successful year they have known. Most of our dealers had increases over 1924 equalling the increase of Hudson-Essex sales in St. Louis and St. Louis County in the same period, which was approximately 100 per cent. Analyzing the record sales of the year, there is a plain indication that although the public regards the automobile with less wonderment than some years ago, this has been more than made up by a universal feeling that the automobile is an every day utility and necessity.

If you want to understand something about the automobile business ask the real estate dealer what chance there is for him to sell a home which is not equipped to house an automobile, or, in the better districts, two automobiles. I have been traveling around the city and I find that two-car garages are as common as one-car garages were a year or so ago, and whereas the one-car garage was an added feature then it is emphatically standard now. It is this fact that stood out in the exceptionally high sales in 1925 for Hudson-Essex.

The increased business which Hudson-Essex has enjoyed is, of course, one of the high spots of the year's records. Month after month Hudson-Essex sales have continued at an even pace—a consistently fast pace. It has had no new cars to introduce, and its sales appeals have been on the one point of great all-around value rather than on innovations. So, without spurts or slumps, it has maintained a consistent six-cylinder leadership.

This leadership is not important in itself, because the motorist does, and should, buy new cars on the basis of values in the car, not on the number of sales it makes. But when values and sales leadership fall together, and when the sentiment of a community swings so strongly in one direction as it has in this toward Hudson-Essex, that fact is interesting in guilding the choice of other buyers.

Comment on New Stutz.

The most interesting chassis is the Stutz vertical eight, and the most radical departure is, of course, its worm driven rear axle. The worm is under mounted and this allows of a much lower propellor shaft and consequent lower body floor. This permits Stutz bodies to be low and rakish, yet has not interfered with comfort of passengers. The height of the frame in the middle of the chassis is only 18 inches. The springs are very long, the rear being 62 inches and designed to co-ordinate with balloon tires, 32x6.20 inches.

The engine has a bore and stroke of 3 3-16 by 4½ inches with a piston displacement of 387.27 cubic inches. There are nine main bearings and the gas mixture is fed to the cylinders by means of a Zenith double-throat carburetor. The valves of this engine are in the head and operated by an overhead camshaft, the latter being driven by chain from the crankshaft. A maximum power output of 92 horsepower is developed by the engine at 3200 revolutions per minute. Compression ration is 4.8 to 1. Connecting rods in this engine are of duralumin alloy and the pistons are cast iron of a high steel content.

While the brakes on the new Stutz are hydraulically operated, they are quite different from the hydraulic brakes usually fitted. They are the new Timken type which require low operating pressure and have almost 360 degrees contact in the brake drums, which, by the way, are ribbed for cooling.

The frame is unusual in that it has a decided kick-up over the front axle, which materially helps to get a low seating arrangement. Furthermore, the power plant is mounted so the rear end is lower than the front, which gives a straight line drive in connection with the undermounted worm. Owing to the low center of gravity, the car is said to hold the road and turns remarkably at very high speeds. This performance, together with the breaking system, is the reason for the name "safety chassis" for the new Stutz.

The Stutz bodies are beautiful though conventional, but in connection with the new chassis present a different aspect. The overall height, for example, is only 70 inches and the seat level when the car is on the road is about 30 inches above the ground. All body types are priced at $2995.

New Chrysler Six.

Chrysler's larger and more powerful model, called the "Imperial" has a six-cylinder engine, 3½ by 5 inches, developing 92 horsepower at 3000 revolutions per minute. The general design of the chassis does not depart from the company's present six-cylinder model. Six body styles are offered, consisting of a roadster, phaeton and sedan on a 120-inch wheelbase, and a coupe, seven-passenger sedan and Berline on a 127-inch wheelbase chassis.

The engine has a seven-bearing crankshaft. A novel feature in use of Invar metal struts between piston pin bosses and the shell of the aluminum alloy piston. The use of Invar allows a close piston fit.

New Willys-Knight Six.

Following in many respects the general design of the Willys-Knight "66" sleeve valve six, introduced about a year ago, the new model "70" Willys-Knight, a smaller companion model, is fitted with a six-cylinder engine of 2 15-16 inch bore and 4⅜-inch stroke. Prices of this car were announced at the opening of the show, these being, $1295 for the touring and $1495 for the sedan. These two models comprise the line. The wheelbase is 113½-inches and six-ply balloon tires, 30 by 5.25, are fitted.

There is little difference in the brake systems of models "70" and "66," and brakes, shoes and equalizers are interchangeable. Inside the front drums are two cast aluminum shoes, anchored at the top. Operating rollers are placed in the wedge shaped spaces formed by the curved ends of the shoes and when the brakes are applied these rollers are drawn toward the center of the axle, forcing the shoes against the drum.

Smaller Paige Six.

A new and smaller six-cylinder Paige made its debut at the show. The car represents a conventional Paige-Jewett practice, and is offered in five body styles on a 125-inch wheelbase chassis. Four-wheel hydraulic brakes and balloon tires, 32 by 6, are standard. The engine is L-head, 4¼ by 5 inches, and forms a unit with a single plate clutch and gearset. It develops 63 horsepower at 2800 revolutions per minute.

Auburn Has Only New Four.

The only four-cylinder making its bow at the show is the Auburn 4—44, a 120-inch wheelbase car powered, with the Lycoming engine having a 3⅝ bore and 5-inch stroke. The wheelbase is exceptionally long for a car of this type and the bodies are very roomy and comfortable. The frame of the Auburn 4—44 has seven cross members and the front axle has been built to withstand the extra stresses from front wheel brakes. Wood wheels are standard equipment, carrying tires 30 by 5.25.

The bodies have the same characteristics which have featured the Auburn line the past year. An outstanding type is a fabric-covered coupe. The frame work is of elm, ash and oak, covered with a padded fabric, the latter being lacq in colors to insure against fa and checking. The Auburn 4- sells for $1145 for the touring roadster, $1175 for the coupe $1195 for the sedan.

Always a Wise Investment
Now
Better than ever before

Dodge Brothers, Inc. have announced astonishingly low new prices.

They have announced important refinements in their product. Always building an exceptional car, they are now building better than ever.

Better in many ways—in beauty, comfort, driving vision, engine smoothness, snap, elasticity and getaway.

The simultaneous offering of lower prices and vital improvements is made possible by a gigantic expansion of buildings and equipment.

Ten million dollars so invested permit great savings through vastly increased volume and efficiency.

Part of these savings goes into further betterment of the car. The other part goes directly back to the buyer—in the form of a price reduction that staggered the industry.

Those who chose Dodge Brothers Motor Car in the past invested their money wisely.

Today they invest more wisely than ever before.

CHANDLER SIX SEMI-STOCK CAR DOES 115 M. P. H.

Gear Ratio of 2 1-2 to 1 Used—American and Possibly World's Record for Modified Standard Model Claimed.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 16.—A semistock Chandler 6-cylinder car has just been driven by Norman Etges a mile on Roger's Dry Lake, this State, in 31.1 seconds, or at the rate of 115.3 miles an hour. This unquestionably is a semistock car speed record for America, and is believed to surpass anything that has been done in Europe by a modified standard chassis. The previous record over the Roger's Dry Lake course was 111.8 miles per hour.

Los Angeles newspapermen supervised and timed the Chandler's record-making run.

It was formally stated that no changes had been made in the pistons, connecting rods, crankshaft and other parts of the Pike's Peak engine, with 3½-inch bore and 5-inch stroke, which is the power plant of all Chandlers.

The principal changes made to gain such high speed were shortening the car's wheelbase to 108 inches, using a 2½-to-1 gear ratio, and installing a racing, stream-line body. The unusual power developed by the Chandler motor made use of so high a gear ratio possible, it was said, without the usual lightening of reciprocating parts in the engine.

As will be recalled, a Chandler car set an American record for 1000 miles by running the distance in 689 minutes, or at the rate of 87 miles per hour.

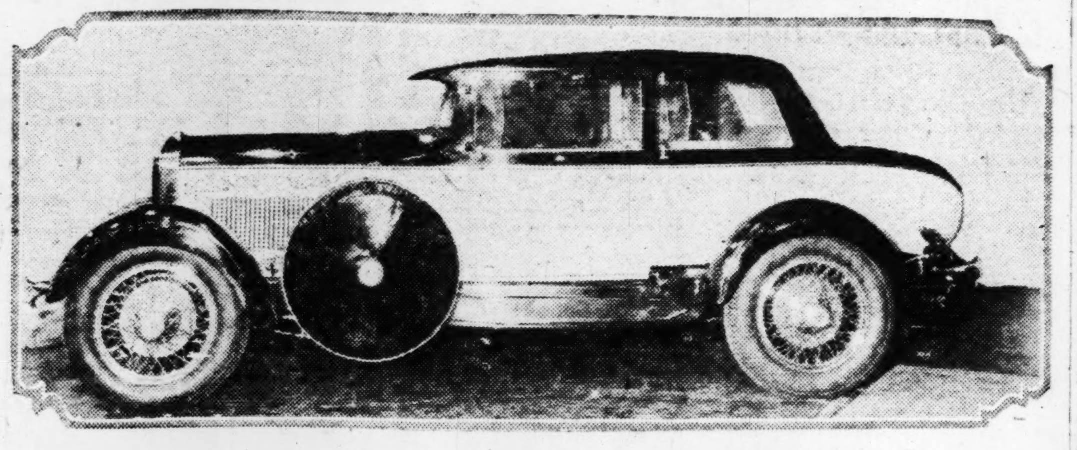
Sports Car Good for 90 M. P. H. Is Rickenbacker

Stream-Lined Coupe, Guaranteed to Make That Speed Over Measured Mile, to Be Standard Model—Uses Stock Vertical Eight Engine Tuned to Develop 100 H. P.

By JIM LANCE.



The new stream-lined Rickenbacker eight "super sports" coupe, which has a guaranteed speed of 90 miles an hour.

The first definite step taken in this country to market such "super sports" models, guaranteed to make high speed, as are popular in Europe, was the display at the New York Automobile Show of a stream-lined Rickenbacker vertical eight sport coupe. This car, which caused a real sensation, is announced as a standard four-passenger model which will be sold with a positive guarantee that it will develop 100 horsepower and will travel at least 90 miles an hour.

Engine Develops 107 H. P.

This car was driven by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, vice president of the Rickenbacker organization, at the rate of 95 miles an hour on its first trial. It was the fastest stock model at the show, and was listed at $5000.

The engine in this sports model is the regular Rickenbacker vertical eight, with 3¼-inch bore and 4¾-inch stroke, which for regular models is "choked down" in intake and exhaust ports, valve lift and carburetion to 80 horse power. For the sports coupe the engine has been "opened up."

A special camshaft has been installed to give quicker and higher valve opening. Two carburetors have been fitted, so that the cylinders can take a full supply of gasoline vapor when the throttle is opened wide. With these changes the eight-cylinder Rickenbacker engine is said to develop 107 horse power. A 3½ to 1 gear ratio has been installed.

The body has been beautifully stream-lined, made narrow and brought to a rounded point in the rear. Headlight stanchions, bumper, drag link and other parts that create wind resistance also have been stream-lined. The underside of the car is completely enclosed. The front fenders are attached to the brake carriers, and turn with the wheels. There are no running boards or steps.

The interior of the body resembles the cockpit of an airplane, and there are all sorts of instruments on the dash.

95 M. P. H. With Touring Body.

For the first trial of the new job, an open touring body was used. Capt. Rickenbacker drove and, with four passengers, the car covered a measured mile in 38 seconds flat, or 95 miles an hour. The stream-lined body, Rickenbacker estimates, adds at least 10 miles an hour to the car's speed as compared with an ordinary body.

The entire car is made in the Rickenbacker shops. Its front and rear bumpers are of laminated mahogany, brass-bound and with wood inlay ornamentation. Windows are of "shatterless" glass.

Rickenbacker said in New York that this car will be standard model in every way, a regular addition to the Rickenbacker line. A factory statement says that the speed guarantee will not be of "speedometer miles," but will be a positive warranty that the car will do at least 90 m. p. h. over a measured mile on a level road.

"Any car of this type actually will do 100 m. p. h., with the stream-lined body," he declared. "So we can guarantee 90 and have a wide margin to go on."

"This car," Rickenbacker said, "is a glimpse into the future, a forecast of what will be, rather than a popular type to fill an eager demand. While we do not expect to build a great number of these 'super-sports' this year, it is a standard model, built from our 'patent-applied-for' design.

"We do not expect, nor do we recommend, the average person to buy this model as a utility car. As our roads are today, a car of such speed is suitable only for the expert driver, who has opportunity and space to open it up on occasion and wants the feeling that he has extreme speed at his command.

"Frankly, it is a costly toy. The first one was designed for a man of wealth who loves hair-raising speed. Such demand as there may be for such a car will doubtless come from men of similar wealth and tastes. While younger men will covet such a car, it is a question whether their fathers will, or should, gratify the desire.

"But the car of tomorrow will be so nearly like this car that it will be almost a replica in design and speed. Any maker who tries to meet the demand for a four-passenger coupe that can make the speeds possible when super-highways run between the principal cities will find it almost impossible to vary from this master design.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBING RECORD IS CLAIMED FOR STAR FOUR

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 16.—A new stock model speed record up the 11-mile grade of Mount Diablo, Cal., is claimed for a Star four. Driven by William Weeks and observed and timed by Oakland newspapermen, the Star made the grade in 23 minutes 4 1-5 seconds, which is said to be a minute and 15 seconds faster than the best previous record by a stock model.

ST. LOUIS-KANSAS CITY BUS LINE RUNNING ON ROUTE NO. 2

A bus line, using 18-passenger Studebaker motor coaches, is operating from St. Louis to Kansas City over the newly opened State highway No. 2. A bus leaves each city at 8 a. m., and the run is being made in eight hours, with an hour's stop for luncheon. W. L. Hinton, manager of the Midwest Transit Co., which is operating the busses, said yesterday that in a short time an afternoon and night bus service between the two cities would be added.

The busses connect at Kansas City with a bus leaving daily at 8 a. m. for Denver. The Kansas City-Denver busses make the run in two days, the first night stop being at Ellis, Kan.

Packard Chassis Lubrication.

Improved chassis lubrication is the most noticeable change in the Packard chassis. By one operation a metered quantity of oil is delivered to all the chassis bearings. Pulling a plunger knob sends oil from the central source of supply to 45 chassis bearings.

General Motors' New Six is here!

GENERAL MOTORS now presents through its Oakland division the New Pontiac Six—the first six-cylinder car it has ever named and sponsored from the original design.

Representing the supreme embodiment of the corporation's almost limitless resources, this new Six is destined to compel a complete revision of existing ideas in motor car value.

The Pontiac Six is not another of the so-called "revolutionary" cars.

It is simply and solely a car of high quality developed to dominate a definite market . . and as such represents an achievement no less significant, no less unprecedented, no less epochal than the invention of the first six-cylinder engine.

In the Pontiac Six you are offered a new order of beauty—that grace of line and balanced proportion characteristic only of Fisher craftsmanship. You are offered precisely the enduring body construction that is used on cars selling for $2,000 or more, finished in rich Duco colors.

You are offered a roadability of extraordinary scope—exhilarating power for hills, refreshing agility in traffic, a maximum speed you will use only in emergencies.

Add to this new order of beauty and this performance of unprecedented brilliance, the equally important matter of accessory equipment, and the preponderance of Pontiac value becomes literally irresistible—

—for the Pontiac Six comes equipped with full balloon cords, nickeled radiator, Fisher VV windshield, automatic windshield cleaner, indirectly illuminated instrument panel, rear vision mirror, high-speed window regulators and other important essentials to pride of ownership.

The Pontiac Six is now on display in our salesrooms. Demonstrations may be arranged for. We not only invite you to see this newest creation of General Motors at the earliest possible moment—we urge you to come prepared for a new and unique experience—for here at last is the Six you have always wanted. . . . at a price so unexpectedly low that only General Motors could possibly achieve it.

All New Chandler Models Have the "One Shot" Lubrication System

New 20th Century 4-Door Sedan
$1590 formerly $1995
f. o. b. Cleveland

YOU can lubricate the new Chandler yourself without lifting a finger!

The new Chandler chassis has the great labor-saving, car-saving, money-saving advantages of the "One Shot" Lubrication System.

How It Works

With a mere press of your heel on a plunger—"One Shot" instantly lubricates the entire chassis. No work! No time lost! Nothing overlooked! No squeaks!

The chief Chandler of all the new Chandlers, in popular appeal, is the Twentieth Century Sedan—a rich, five-passenger, 4-door Sedan priced less than a 2-door coach.

Here is a brilliant example of closed car evolution—based, in the first place, on Chandler's conviction that most people favor a full-fledged, unabbreviated 4-door Sedan over any other closed car type.

On the perfected Chandler chassis is a body developed with studied care—with new subtleties of profile; lustrous Duco finish; broadcloth upholstery; clear-vision windshield; with many modern niceties of equipment.

It has of course Chandler's own big Pikes Peak Motor—a champion in power—smooth as powerful—quiet as smooth—super-sensitive to throttle—built for durability.

Quality Talks Price.

Other new models include the Metropolitan Sedan De Luxe, $1895 (formerly $2195); the Seven-Passenger Sedan, $1995 (formerly $2295); the Brougham, $1695 (formerly $2045); prices f. o. b. Cleveland. Compare quality with prices!

DRIVES 91-INCH RACER AT RATE OF 124 M. P. H.

Briton's Performance Indicates Very Fast Time by Little Cars on U. S. Bowls in 1926.

The British driver, E. A. D. Eldridge, who has been building two racers with the idea of entering them in the Indianapolis 500-mile race, has been getting constantly higher speed out of his 91½-cubic inch Anzani-engined special. As was reported in this automobile section at the time, he drove this car 117.18 miles per hour last fall on the Monthlery track, in France.

Now he has tuned the same car, which is fitted with supercharger, until the other day he drove it at the rate of 124.7 miles per hour for a lap on the Monthlery track. This speed should be equivalent to faster than 130 miles per hour on one of the American board speedways. He sent it 5 miles for an average of 121.5 miles per hour and made the same average for 10 miles. The fastest speed by a 122-inch racer in America last year was 142 miles per hour.

In these latest tests he was seeking records in a class for larger cars, and carried two heavy bars of steel, to increase weight.

In view of the fact that the Indianapolis race will be for cars of 91½-inch piston displacement, Eldridge's speed bears out the prophecies of Fred Duesenberg and Harry Miller, the American racing car designers, that the little racers will be nearly as fast the first year as the 122-inch cars used the last two years on the bowls.

CHRYSLER FOUR PRICES REDUCED

Reductions ranging from $50 to $110 on the Chrysler four have been made effective Jan. 9. They were made possible, the Chrysler factory states, by steadily increasing sales volume. The new factory list prices follow: Touring, $845; roadster, $890; coupe, $895; coach, $935; sedan, $995.

TAKES REO DEALERSHIP

Louis Reichman, 1228 St. Louis avenue, East St. Louis, has become a Reo six dealer. Reichman is returning to his old car, for he was a Reo dealer from 1912 to 1917.

TOTAL OF 410,000 DODGE CARS ORDERED FOR 1926 AT MEETING OF DEALERS

INDICATIONS of probable expansion of the motor car industry in 1926 were seen when 3000 dealers handling Dodge Brothers motor cars and Graham Brothers trucks signed agreements to handle approximately 410,000 motor cars this year. This is almost 100 per cent increase over the number of cars sold last year, which was about 220,000.

Due to the early date of the Dodge sales convention, this is the first big group of automotive dealers to give an indication of the 1926 demand.

"If our experience is any criterion of the general attitude of American motor car dealers, 1926 is going to see new records set in automotive sales," said Robert C. Graham, sales manager of Dodge Brothers. "At least half the dealers wanted more cars than we could supply."

Landau Model Gives Chevrolet Six Body Types

A NEW 5-passenger landau, exhibited at the New York show, gives Chevrolet six passenger car models, including also coupe, coach, sedan, roadster and touring car. The landau body, like other Chevrolets, is by Fisher. The coupe and landau are in the new Arizona gray Duco, with interior decorations and velour upholstery to match. The gray of the hood, body panels and disc wheels on the landau is set off against the black of the fenders and upper body by gold striping. The rear quarter, carrying the landau bars and windows, is leather covered.

The new finish of the coach is Bloomfield gray, while the sedan is in Algerian blue.

Complete equipment is carried on the closed line, including one-piece ventilating windshield, parking lamps, sun visor, automatic windshield wiper, dome light, silk roller shades and Ternstedt fittings.

Gun metal gray Duco finish is retained on the two popular open models, the touring and roadster. The rear compartment of the roadster body has been altered to permit of greatly increased luggage capacity. The compartment cover opens at the level of the car floor.

TINY CLUTCH IN NEW BRITISH RACING AUTO

Thomas Straight Eight Has Seat for Driver Only 5 Inches Above Ground.

An interesting supercharged straight eight, which is to be entered in several of the important European races, but is hardly likely to be seen in this country, is being built by J. G. Perry Thomas, one of the most famous of British drivers.

The bore of the cylinders is only 2.04 inches, while the stroke is only 3.46 inches. There are two overhead camshafts to operate the large valves. Everything about the engine, except bore, stroke and pistons, is relatively large and solid, so that engine speeds up to 6500 r. p. m. will be possible.

The clutch, which is only 3½ inches in diameter, is of the multi-disc type, and the gears are of extra large size.

The frame is completely underslung, and the driver's seat is supported by a cross member that is only 5 inches above the ground.

GARDNER EIGHT SETS NEW RECORD

Driving a stock Gardner eight-in-line sport sedan, "Bobbie" Darrell of Los Angeles recently clipped 51 minutes from the record for the 490-mile run from Los Angeles to Phoenix, Cal. Though the Gardner in which Darrell set his new mark of 10 hours and 20 minutes was a strictly stock model, with an extra gasoline tank, and Darrell drove at an average speed of 47.1 miles an hour for 10 consecutive hours, no mechanical repairs or adjustments were made during the run or as a result of it.

Co-operation by the Western Union Telegraph Co. permitted perfect timing of the Gardner from start to finish. Affidavits by official representatives of the Western Union show the time of the Gardner's departure from Los Angeles and its arrival in Phoenix. This was the first time that an enclosed car has been used in an attempt to lower the mark set in an open car some time ago.

A stock Gardner sedan was the only enclosed car to establish a cross-country record from New York to Los Angeles.

CHEVROLET

Improved!

a Type of Performance Never Before Obtained In Any Low Priced Car

Thousands have already driven the Improved Chevrolet.

They know its new smoothness, new stamina, new swiftness of acceleration. They know that in performance it completely dwarfs every Chevrolet achievement of the past and that it ranks as the finest Chevrolet in Chevrolet history.

And if you are one who has not yet been behind the wheel, you have more than a treat in store—you have yet to experience a type of performance never before offered in any low priced car.

A performance so effortless, so smooth, so powerful, so spirited that you will call it nothing short of a revelation!

Chevrolet's leadership has been based on giving quality at low cost. Now the Improved Chevrolet gives another reason for an even wider margin of leadership—performance the equal of which has heretofore been unattainable in the low price field.

True, the Improved Chevrolet is easier-riding. True, there is striking beauty in the new Duco finishes. True, Chevrolet prices are lower. But the one great and outstanding reason why you and every other motorist should drive this splendid car, is to experience the matchless performance it now introduces.

Drive where you will—and as long as you like, through traffic, through sand, through mud, over hills—and over mountains, if you please. Expect something really new, really worthwhile—something really unique—and you will not be disappointed.

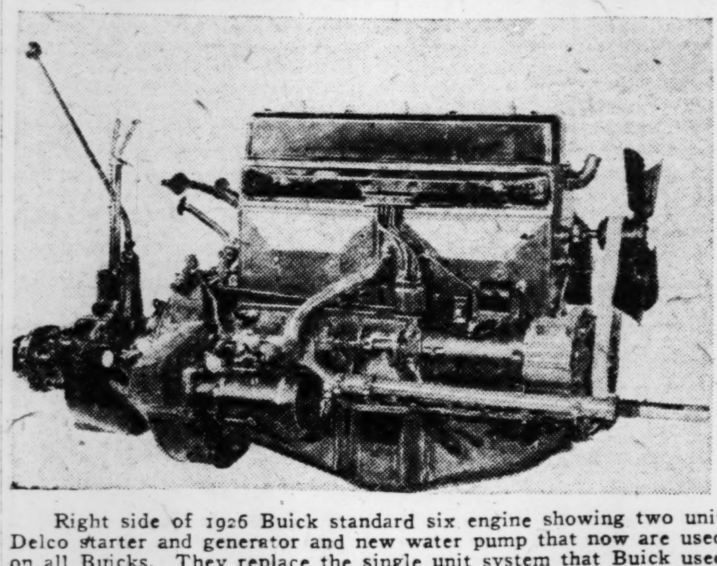
New Electric Units on Buick



Right side of 1926 Buick standard six engine showing two unit Delco starter and generator and new water pump that now are used on all Buicks. They replace the single unit system that Buick used for years. It has numerous advantages. This new starting mechanism preserves an advantage always built into Buick starters—positive engagement of the starter pinion with flywheel teeth before the starter switch is closed and the starting motor cranks the engine, preventing teeth being broken from the flywheel.

The increased cranking ability of the new system is shown by tests at 10 degrees above zero, showing the breakaway torque increased by 24 per cent and cranking speed by 30 per cent.

NEW OFFICERS INSTALLED BY ST. LOUIS TIRE DEALERS

THE newly elected officers of the Associated Tire Dealers of St. Louis were installed Tuesday night at a meeting and dinner dance held at Hotel Chase. Those installed were: President, Jesse G. Johnston; first vice president, C. Y. Quinn; second vice president, H. F. Schollmeyer; secretary, J. Delabar; treasurer, A. P. Woehrle; sergeant-at-arms, J. W. Kuemmerle; directors, A. A. Guenther, H. B. White, L. B. Wyner, L. Bowcott, E. L. Meyer, E. A. Colbeck and E. H. Steinman.

Addresses were made by Woehrle, the outgoing president who was given a Scottish Rite Masonic ring, and by Johnston, the incoming president, who discussed policies for the year to come. Capt. Robert E. Lee, manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, was toastmaster.

AUBURN AUTO FACTORY IN STRONG FINANCIAL POSITION

With $1,072,416 cash on hand, a surplus of $689,977 and net earnings of $468,054 from July 1, 1925, to Nov. 30, the Auburn Automobile Co., maker of Auburn cars, reports a very solid financial position. In the seven months previous to July 1, 1925, the company's earnings were so large that it paid a 100 per cent stock dividend in addition to regular dividends. Sales of cars have increased rapidly and steadily.

The company's capital stock of ,000 shares of $25 par value was quoted the past week at $53 on the Chicago Stock Exchange, or a total valuation of more than $3,000,000.

Land, buildings and equipment are carried at a valuation of $682,072, whereas their actual value is fully $1,500,000. A reserve of $136,662 for depreciation is carried.

AUBURN REPORTS ORDERS ON HAND TOTALING $6,590,000

A telegram to Joseph A. Schlecht, head of the Mound City Automobile Co., from Roy H. Faulkner, director of sales of the Auburn factory, states that a meeting of distributers Wednesday in New York was a great success. The telegram said also that orders at the factory for Auburn cars now total $6,590,000. The new low prices on the Auburn fours, sixes and eights, it said, assured the best year in 25 for Auburn. The dealer attendance at the New York show was 50 per cent larger than last year, and Auburn sold 35 cars at the show at retail in the first 4 days.

PRICES OF MOON AND DIANA AUTOMOBILES ARE REDUCED

Price cuts of $50 to $100 on Moon sixes and $100 to $300 on Diana eights were announced Friday by the Moon Motor Car Co. Moon prices now range from $1295 to $1595. The Diana price range now is from $1695 to 1995.

GOODRICH TIRE BRANCH MOVES TO NEW QUARTERS

The Goodrich Tire and Rubber Co. factory branch has moved from Locust boulevard and Garrison avenue to 806-08 Spruce street. The company's new quarters is a five-story building, in which it has housed its sales organization, warehouse and all its other departments in St. Louis. Chief reason for the move, said W. M. Stonestreet, branch manager, was to get the entire organization under one roof, convenient to the railroads.

TEVIS MOTOR CAR CO. EXPANDS ITS QUARTERS

THE Tevis Motor Car Co., authorized Ford dealer, has taken over the quarters at 3001 Locust boulevard vacated by the Goodrich Tire and Rubber Co., and now has the entire building at the northwest corner of Locust and Garrison avenue. With the extra space, the company now has 100 feet frontage on Locust and 147 feet on Garrison.

The building is being remodeled, so that the former Goodrich quarters will be used for showroom and offices and the space hitherto occupied by the Tevis Co. for an accessory and parts salesroom.

The rear of the first floor will be devoted to quick service and repairs. On the second floor will be the shop and a display room for used cars and trucks.

The president and owner of the Tevis Co. is Clarence H. Tevis, who formerly was retail sales manager of the local Ford branch, and has conducted his own Ford business for some 10 years.

ST. LOUIS FLINT CO. MOVES EAST ON LOCUST BOULEVARD

The St. Louis Flint Co., which has been distributing Flint cars from the "flatiron" building at Lindell cut-off, has moved to 3205 Locust boulevard, where it has showrooms and service department. It is showing the new Flint Junior six coach, which was first brought out at the New York automobile show. Models of the new Flint "60" and "80" lines also will be on display soon.

NEW OLDS MULTI-PURPOSE COUPE SHOWN IN ST. LOUIS

The new Olds multi-purpose coupe, which was exhibited at the New York Show, is being shown in St. Louis by the De Luxe Automobile Co., Olds distributer. It has a Fisher body, with landau irons at each side, and is in blue and black finish. A de luxe model of the same car also is shown.

TO PREVENT HEADLIGHT GLARE

The Kantglare deflector for automobile headlights, which J. M. Neskov, 3304 Locust boulevard, at the Lindell cut-off, is distributing, is being tested by an increasing number of motorists. Neskov also has sold the device, whose object is to do away with headlight glare, to a number of officials of St. Louis and nearby cities.

HEADS STAR CAR DEALERS

O. B. Riddle, head of the Riddle Motor Co., has been elected as president of the recently organized St. Louis Star Dealers' Association. Thomas Burgdorf of the Burgdorf Motor Co. is vice president. Frank Givens of the Givens Motor Sales Co., Ferguson, is secretary-treasurer.

TO DISTRIBUTE AIR CLEANER

The United air cleaner for automobiles, which is equipment on Chrysler, Jordan and Franklin cars, is to be distributed in St. Louis by the Automotive Engineering Co., 4549 Olive street, which also is Zenith carburetor distributer and service station.

ANOTHER BRANCH OPENED

The Fred Campbell Auto Supply Co., automotive wholesaler, has opened a branch in Decatur, Ill., with A. C. Ehrhard as manager. This is the firm's second branch, its first having been established at Terre Haute, Ind.

BUICK SALES INCREASED

In spite of lower prices, the Buick Motor Co. increased its volume of business in the past year by $25,000,000. A gain in sales of nearly 20 per cent was made. The value of the nearly 200,000 Buick cars marketed in 1925 was in excess of $275,000,000.

SALES GROW 384 PER CENT

A sales increase in 1925 of 296 over sales in 1924 is reported by the Cleveland Motor Sales Co. for St. Louis. Sales of Cleveland sixes increased 384 per cent over 1924 in the country territory, the distributer states.

NEW DUPONT-DUCO STATION

The Robertson-Bradford Motor Coach Co., distributor of Dupont-Duco in Missouri and Illinois, has appointed the Orthwein Motor Co., 3016 Locust boulevard, as an authorized Dupont-Duco auto refinishing station.

How the New Chrysler "Imperial" Six Performs

Car Runs "Smooth as Silk" in St. Louis Test —Writer Describes Thrills of Road Run.

By SPENCE.

Silken smooth power is an outstanding characteristic of the new Chrysler "Imperial" six. There is no car of this new Chrysler line in St. Louis that has been run far enough to be "broken in," as the "Imperial," for which sustained speeds up to 80 miles an hour and better are claimed, was first exhibited here only last Saturday. However, the writer went out in an "Imperial" roadster that had just been taken from a freight car and found it a startlingly fine performer, though the speed was held under 40 miles an hour to insure against injuring the car.

Drifting Along.

The spring suspension is remarkably easy. The "Imperial" rode the waves of Lindell boulevard as if they were mere cracks. Its acceleration also was remarkable for power and "snap." The phrase, "whispering smoothness," really can be applied to the engine operation. With the car drifting along at two miles an hour the engine's quiet, steady running was astonishing.

The car started at five miles an hour in high at the foot of Art Hill, in Forest Park, and climbed steadily in high at that speed to and over the top, while the writer walked beside it. The car's speed and hill-climbing possibilities so impressed the writer that he is eagerly waiting until a well "broken in" car is available for a real road test.

"Easy to Ride In."

Meanwhile, the following excerpts from a story about this new Chrysler appearing in the magazine, Automobile Topics," will give an idea of what the "Imperial" can do.

"Want to drive?" the driver asks. "You bet!" And you do.

"One of the men in the back leans over to look at the speedometer and then you notice that it is unbelievably over 60. You had merely meant to go as far as the point where it began to feel a little bit risky. Being a conservative with a profound respect for your own hide, you have made it a point for years to lift the right toe at the first tingle. You have obeyed that impulse at 45 miles an hour with some cars; with others at 30.

"But there is no kick from this car at 60, or even at 70, which you experimentally achieve.

"You take another reading at 73, but discover an intersecting road ahead and abandon the rash intention of going the limit. This thing must have a 'ceiling' somewhere, and you make a resolve, some day, to take one of these cars out and find it—put the button right down against the floor and hold it there, by ginger, till your blood freezes."

What's Newest in Motor Cars

New Paige Six Takes Place in Medium Priced Class

A WHOLLY new 6-cylinder Paige car, which will be a companion to the "New Day" Jewett, was exhibited at the New York show. The new Paige, which will be much lower priced than the present Paige, will appear at all the automobile shows. It probably will be in production by Feb. 10, according to H. Caude Merry, manager of the Wilson Motor Car Co., and will be shown in St. Louis soon thereafter.

The sedan on the new Paige chassis, it is said, will be the lowest priced car of that type on so long a wheelbase—125 inches. In addition to the sedan, there will be four body styles, including two seven-passenger enclosed jobs.

The distinctive Paige radiator and hood are retained in the new line.

The engine is an L-head 6-cylinder type, with 3¼-inch bore and 5-inch stroke, developing 63 horsepower at 2800 r. p. m. The crankshaft is 2⅝ inches in diameter. Oiling is force feed. The cooling system is thermostatically controlled. Clutch is single plate type requiring no adjustment. Front end drive is by automatically adjusting silent chain.

An air cleaner, double filament headlight bulbs, and a coincidental lock are among special features.

Hydraulic four-wheel brakes and balloon tires are standard. The brake drums are 14 inches in diameter. The emergency brake operates on a drum behind the transmission.

Springs are semi-elliptic, the front being 38 inches long, the rear 58 inches.

The frame is seven inches deep, with strongly braced cross members.

While the chassis design does not depart from standard practice, it embodies the experience of Paige-Detroit Co. engineers with the Jewett and Paige cars. So the new car has plenty of speed, unusual performance on the hills and in traffic, and beauty of line.

Kentucky to Vote on Road Bonds.

Gov. Fields, in his message to the Kentucky Legislature, recommended a $50,000,000 bond issue for good roads, to be voted on at the November election.

Hup Eight Made Larger, More Powerful

WITH a more powerful engine and longer wheelbase, the Hup eight appeared at the New York automobile show in five entirely new bodies, including five and seven passenger touring cars designed for running with tops down; coupe with rumble seat; five-passenger sedan, and berline sedan having a partition between rear and front seats.

The car's wheelbase has been lengthened by 6¾ inches to 125 inches. The bore of the engine has been enlarged by an eighth of an inch, so that the bore is three inches, while the stroke is 4¾ inches.

While the larger engine has not notably increased the speed of the car, a remarkable improvement in hill-climbing ability and rate of acceleration has resulted. The weight of the car has been increased by slightly over 100 pounds.

Valves have not been changed but the lift has been increased. The inside diameter of the intake manifold, which now has an equalizing tube, is larger and the diameter of the carburetor venturi has been increased.

The Lanchester vibration dampener is retained. To provide better combustion, the location of the spark plugs have been changed so that they are directly over the inlet valves.

One of the important changes is adoption of the Delco ignition system. Starter and generator are Auto-Lite.

Although the clutch is substantially as used previously, the plate diameter has been increased. The rear axle ratio remains 4.9 to 1, but the axle has been strengthened and the pinion is overhung instead of straddle mounted. Ring gear and pinion are bigger, bearing sizes have been increased and the splined ends of the axle shafts, which are molybdenum steel, are larger.

The general appearance of the bodies does not depart from the lines of former models. Most of the extra length has been given to the rear compartment, although the windshield is farther back, giving longer cowl lines and a more sweeping effect. The appearance of the radiator has been improved by a scroll effect on the shell.

Pontiac Six Motor Clean Cut

New Pontiac Six Being Displayed Now in St. Louis

The new Pontiac six car is being shown in St. Louis today by the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., which will distribute it with the Oakland six. An elaborate window display features the head of "Pontiac, Chief of the Sixes," in outline, and a real Indian and wigwam as the center of interest. A flood lighting effect in red adds to the attractiveness of the window.

In the showroom of the firm is an exhibit of the coach and coupe models of the Pontiac, which is the long awaited General Motors-built line. Both models are priced at $825 at the factory. Because of the price of the Pontiac and the "mystery" advertising of it, the Mississippi Valley Motor Co. is preparing to handle large crowds.

The Pontiac, which was fully described in the Post-Dispatch automobile section last Sunday, has a 36-horsepower engine of 3¼-inch bore and 3¾-inch strike, with heavy crankshaft and extra wide bearings, honed cylinders, an extra oil ring, and a 4.08-to-1 gear ratio. Its front springs are 36 inches, its rear springs 54 inches long. Its wheelbase is 110 inches, and the bodies are Fisher built.

The new Oakland four-passenger roadster also is on display today.

WITH its roof only 64 inches above the ground, a custom-built sport coupe was the feature among 25 Franklin models exhibited at the New York show and at salons. This coupe is finished in light cream varnish with black striping and black upper body. This is Franklin's silver jubilee year, and the twenty-fourth year it has exhibited its air-cooled cars.

There was much interest at the show in the copper radiation improvement on air-cooling which is now incorporated in Franklin cars. Interest was stimulated by recent adoption of the air-cooling principle for airplane motors.

New Heavy Duty White Dump Truck.

A NEW heavy-duty model 52-D White dump truck, built along the general lines of the model 45-D, is announced. The new truck has an auxiliary transmission affording the equivalent of five speeds, giving extra low-gear pulling power for hill climbing and getting out of holes or mire; a new dumping mechanism and tapered dump body; an improved and patented oil system, and the exclusive White double-reduction gear drive.

Larger Engine And New Model For 1926 Velie Line

INCREASED speed, power and acceleration for Velie sixes are insured by a new engine just introduced by the Velie Motors Corporation and installed in the 1926 models displayed at the New York show.

Another feature of the new Velie line is a 5-passenger enclosed model of novel appearance and custom-built finish. This new model has an extremely slanting windshield, which permits a smooth flowing line from radiator to roof, this effect being continued and accentuated by a rounding of the curves of the rear body. The car is extremely low hung and compact.

Elimination of reflections and lowered wind resistance—adding at least five miles to the speed of the car—are claimed for the windshield design. Annoyance of glaring headlights, it is said, is done away with by an adjustable visor of dark-hued plate glass, which lies close to the windshield for ordinary driving.

The body is finished in two tone, high luster lacquer in peacock blue and breast brown, with black mouldings and striping of light gray. Upholstery is of art weave whipcord, matching the finish of the car. Headlining and door panels are of the same material bound with coach lace. Handkerchief and glove pockets have been provided beneath the arm rests, and the vanity case is concealed in the back of the front seat. The rear and rear quarter windows have curtains of silk poplin, matching the headlining.

The new Velie engine is an advanced valve-in-head 6-cylinder type. The bore is 3 3-16 inches while the stroke has been increased from 4¼ to 4⅝ inches. A notable feature is the 92-pound crankshaft, which is 2¾ inches in diameter and has four integral counterweights. This shaft is so thick and heavy that it is said to eliminate torsional vibration at all speeds.

Pistons carry four rings. Valves have been increased in size.

Full pressure lubrication is provided to crankshaft, connecting rods, camshaft and accessory shaft bearings. Also to the valve rocker shaft and all parts of the valve mechanism.

New Records and New Prices!

Graham Brothers Truck sales for 1925 were the largest in their history.

The previous record breaking year was surpassed by 123 per cent.

Such healthy increases in demand require proportionate increases in production.

Graham Brothers four factories are now equipped for larger output than ever before.

They are therefore able to give truck buyers the benefit of still further savings—

Savings that are now passed along in the form of another substantial price reduction—the third such reduction in eight months!

Dodge's Son Shows Rotary Valve 8 Engine

AN eight-cylinder rotary valve engine, which is declared by John Duval Dodge, son of the late president of Dodge Brothers, Inc., to be the power plant for the new automobile that he plans to build, was exhibited at the Hotel Pennsylvania during the New York show. Dodge asserts that his car will be sold at a low price, that his engine will be mounted on chassis for the Detroit show, and that a complete car may be exhibited at the Chicago show.

The Dodge engine has 196.34 cubic inches piston displacement, and develops 72 horsepower at 3000 r. p. m. Dodge declares that this rotary valve motor, which does away with poppet valves, wastes 60 per cent less in friction than older engines, runs far more smoothly and quietly and is generally more economical. He also asserts that all obstacles to perfecting such an engine have been surmounted.

Detachable cylinder heads carry the rotary valve, which is revolved by a vertical shaft from the main crankshaft. The valve chamber is just above the domed compression chamber of the cylinders and runs the length of the head. Rectangular inlet and exhaust ports are cast vertically in the domed head to connect with the valve chamber.

The valve carries a central shaft. Mounted on this shaft and driven by it are split, expansible iron sleeves, each having an opening that registers with the opening port cut in the shaft itself. Each port opening is fitted with one of these expanding sleeves, and they are also furnished with a fiber split ring to prevent leakage. As the valve revolves, the inlet port registers with the inlet manifold, and with the vertical passage into the cylinder, which allows a charge to be drawn into the cylinder.

On the compression stroke, the lag back, formed by the opposed locations of the inlets on one side of the valve chamber and the exhausts on its other, allows the pressure to leak between the valve shaft and the expansible sleeve. This pressure expands the sleeve against the valve chamber, preventing leakage at the time of the explosion.

What's Newest in Motor Cars

Dodge's Son Shows Rotary Valve 8 Engine

AN eight-cylinder rotary valve engine, which is declared by John Duval Dodge, son of the late president of Dodge Brothers, Inc., to be the power plant for the new automobile that he plans to build, was exhibited at the Hotel Pennsylvania during the New York show. Dodge asserts that his car will be sold at a low price, that his engine will be mounted on chassis for the Detroit show, and that a complete car may be exhibited at the Chicago show.

The Dodge engine has 196.34 cubic inches piston displacement, and develops 72 horsepower at 3000 r. p. m. Dodge declares that this rotary valve motor, which does away with poppet valves, wastes 60 per cent less in friction than older engines, runs far more smoothly and quietly and is generally more economical. He also asserts that all obstacles to perfecting such an engine have been surmounted.

Detachable cylinder heads carry the rotary valve, which is revolved by a vertical shaft from the main crankshaft. The valve chamber is just above the domed compression chamber of the cylinders and runs the length of the head. Rectangular inlet and exhaust ports are cast vertically in the domed head to connect with the valve chamber.

The valve carries a central shaft. Mounted on this shaft and driven by it are split, expansible iron sleeves, each having an opening that registers with the opening port cut in the shaft itself. Each port opening is fitted with one of these expanding sleeves, and they are also furnished with a fiber split ring to prevent leakage. As the valve revolves, the inlet port registers with the inlet manifold, and with the vertical passage into the cylinder, which allows a charge to be drawn into the cylinder.

On the compression stroke, the lag back, formed by the opposed locations of the inlets on one side of the valve chamber and the exhausts on its other, allows the pressure to leak between the valve shaft and the expansible sleeve. This pressure expands the sleeve against the valve chamber, preventing leakage at the time of the explosion.

Air Cleaner And Engine Changes In Chevrolet Car

AN air cleaner anl numerous engine refinements are features of omprovements in the improved Chevrolet car which was exhibited at the New York show. The improvements were made in spite of a substantial price reduction and in spite of climbing tire prices announced a few days ago.

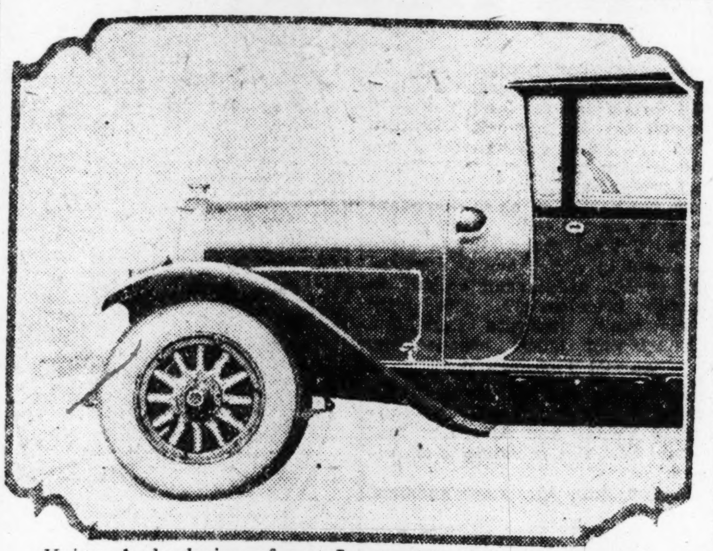
In addition to the air cleaner, changes in the Chevrolet include: Lighter pistons and pine, engine lubricating system of increased efficiency, special three-point motor suspension and redesigned motor head with larger cooling areas around the valves, all of which contribute materially toward smooth operation. The new car is well cushioned by long semielliptic springs of special design.

The new pistol assembly is about a half pound lighter, decreasing by about two pounds the total weight of moving parts in the cylinders. The piston is of the skeleton type, combining lightness with strength and large bearing surface.

Constant and complete lubrication is assured by the new oiling system which places the oil pump in the crank case, where it is primed the moment the engine starts. It is driven from the cam shaft by noiseless spiral gears. The new motor head, with its larger cooling area, increases efficiency and engine life. The generator now is driven from the crank shaft by a silent V-type belt which also operates the fan. The water pump has a new mounting with larger bearings.

Other improvements are: An air cleaner at the intake opening of the air heater, tension springs at the joints of the spark and throttle control rods, greater rigidity in the dash and an increase of a third in the braking area of the service brakes, which are operated by an improved type of mrake rod.

Unique Body on New Locomobile



Unique body design of new Locomobile "90" closed models. As will be noticed, the stream-line effect generally sought in motor cars is completely done away with, the line of the winshield posts being carried down to the frame. The "90," which has a 6-cylinder engine with 3⅞ bore and 5-inch stroke, is an addition to the Locomobile line.

New Auburn Four Is Massive Car

A strikingly massive, powerful, good-loking car is the new Auburn four, the standard four-door sedan of which is being shown in St. Louis by the Mound City Automobile Co. Auburn four coupes are expected the coming week, and in another two weeks roadsters on the four chassis should be seen here.

The Auburn four is designed and styled on the same distinctive lines as the Auburn six and straight eight.

Joseph A. Walde of the Mound City Co. and dealers who drove some of the new fours through from the factory say they were astonished by the power and smoothness of the five-bearing four-cylinder motor. They declare the car will hold its own on the hills with any automobile.

Prices on New Willys-Knight Six

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.

THE new "70" Willys-Knight six, which is to be a companion to the large Willys-Knight, is priced at $1495 for the sedan and $1295 for the touring car, according to announcement here.

Chrysler "80" Prices Are Set

The new Chrysler "Imperial" six prices range from $2645 to $3695 at the factory. Prices of this 80-mile-an-hour car are as follows: Touring car, $2645; roadster, $2885; coupe, $3195; five-passenger sedan, $3395; seven-passenger sedan, $3595; sedan-limousine, $3695.

Peerless Eight Made Into One of Fastest Stock Cars

EIGHTY full horsepower from an enlarged eight-cylinder "V"-type engine is claimed for a brand-new Peerless "equipoised eight" car, which was shown for the first time at the New York show with the statement that it is one of the fastest stock cars being manufactured and that "a 100-mile speedometer has been found necessary." The new car comes in roadster, five-passenger sedan, seven-passenger sedan and seven-passenger berline limousine.

The wheelbase has been increased from 128 to 133½ inches and the frame deepened from 7½ to 8 1-6 inches. The exhaust is in front of the engine, to prevent heating the floor boards. The top extends in front into a rain and sun visor. Disc wheels, hydraulic four-wheel brakes, balloon tires, stabilators and much other equipment are standard.

Special Motor for Nash Closed Cars

NASH introduced at the New York show an engine for inclosed cars, as well as a new four-door sedan at low cost on its advanced six chassis. With a bore of 3 7-16 inches and stroke of 5 inches, this new engine develops 25 per cent more power than the former engine, yet is said to give the same gasoline mileage. The Nash engine is completely incased, and is fitted with air cleaner and gasoline filter, while the crankcase breather is so located as to keep out dust. The new engine has a seven-bearing crankshaft and a four-bearing camshaft. It was to given open-car performance with closed models that this new Nash engine was designed.

The new advanced six sedan is in lilac gray with gold striping and black upper body and running gear. Doors are wider than customary in this type of car.

Engines of Both Cleveland 6 Lines Given More Power

CHANGES that increase power and steadiness, and also make the engines even more vibrationless than before, have been made in both the large and the light Cleveland six lines, which are being shown here by the Cleveland Motor Sales Co. The bore of the Cleveland 31 engine has been increased from 2⅞ to 3 inches, while the stroke remains 4¼ inches, the result being a decided improvement in acceleration and general performance, which always have been notably good. The diameter of the crankshaft has been increased to 2 3-16 inches.

While the engine of the large Cleveland remains virtually as before, the diameter of its crankshaft has been increased to 2 5-16 inches.

Revision of prices make the factory list level of the lighter Cleveland $945 to $1090, while the price range of the large Cleveland is $1145 to $1625. The smaller six 4-door sedan is priced at $1090 and the coupe at $1035. The large six four-door sedan is $1345 at factory.

Jordan Adds Victoria Model

TO the Playboy roadster and sedan models which have featured the new light "eight" Jordan has been added a new body type known as the victoria. This is of the two-door type with a seating capacity of four persons. Exterior finish is cactus gray with upholstery to match. As on the other two body styles, steel construction with steel pillars is employed. A seven-passenger sedan was displayed at the show on the larger "Great Line Eight" chassis.

Prices Cut on 7 Studebaker Models

REDUCTIONS of $100 each on seven models are announced by Studebaker. The models effected and the new prices are: Standard six sedan, wool trimmed, $1295; standard six sedan, mohair trimmed, $1395; big six five-passenger sedan, $1895; big six seven-passenger sedan, $2145; big six brougham, $2095; big six berline, $2225; big six club coupe, $1650.

The new prices result from savings effected through the Studebaker plants which have been kept going at capacity for the past year. Studebaker sales in 1925 exceeded 136,000 cars, an increase of 23 per cent over 1924.

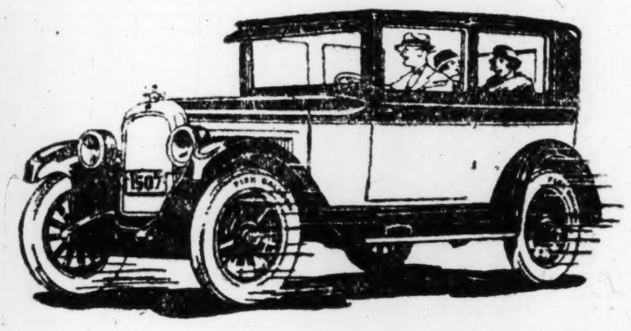
Ne w Reo Brakes Stir Interest

Reports from the New York Automobile Show are that the new Reos, which were first displayed in St. Louis last Sunday by the Kardell Motor Car Co. and its dealers, attracted much attention because of the change to standard gear shift and because of their newly designed safety control. The exclusive system of braking control featured on these new Reos is causing Reo engineers to make claims to another feat of automobile pioneering.

The new and improved Reo for 1926 provides standard gear shift and the simple braking system exactly the same as is to be found on other cars, plus an arrangement that means real driving comfort, rapid and safe progress in today's traffic, and a positive control which, according to Reo officials, results in actual "split-second braking."

Never before, say Reo engineers, has anyone produced a car providing standard gear shift and a braking control that provides the familiar handling of the standard control (service brake on foot pedal, hand lever and emergency) plus greatly increased speed and ease in setting the brakes.

The new Reo, they declare, provides a braking control no other car possesses and, in addition, has the type of standard controls found in all other cars.



This SIX challenges comparison

Side by side, with any Six within several hundred dollars of its price, this big, oversize, extra-powerful Overland Six Sedan will win your enthusiastic approval hands down! In beauty of color effect, in lustrous finish, in body lines, in room, in equipment . . . between this and other Sixes in the $1000 group there is no possible comparison. In performance it will out-pull, out-run, out-accelerate any car in its class you want to test against it.

WILLYS : OVERLAND : FINE : MOTOR : CARS

Orders from the BOSS!

If ever a popular-priced motor car was built-to-order to stand securely at the head of its class, that motor car is the new Cleveland Six for 1926!

In developing the 1926 models shown this year at the various Automobile Shows, Cleveland Six engineers worked strictly to the letter of a number of special instructions straight from headquarters.

Orders Were Carried Out

"Design bodies for the 1926 models that will over-appeal anything near the price in beauty, richness and comfort," it was ordered. The engineers promised they would . . . and they certainly did!

"Stop at nothing," it was ordered, "to give these models ample surplus power for leadership in traffic and easy mastery of all hills. Make Cleveland Six as unquestionably the leader of its class in power in 1926 as it was in 1925." The engineers promised they would . . . and they certainly did!

It Has "One Shot"

Similar orders were issued on the chassis, regarding ruggedness and balance—to include, of course, the famous Bowen-patented "One Shot" Lubrication System, which flushes every lubrication point in the entire chassis with fresh, clean lubricant the moment you press a plunger with your heel.

There were further orders about upholstery, fittings, tires, brakes, steering—orders concerning every little detail in structure and equipment.

And when the 1926 models were finally achieved, as per orders—and had passed a multiform series of tests with flying colors—deliberations turned to price. Costs were figured closely. Low prices were fixed.

Look at These Prices!

Now these models for 1926 are lined up for inspection. The new Model 31 Four-Door Sedan is priced $1090; the new Model 31 Coupe, $1035; the new Model 43 Special Sedan, $1345; the new Model 43 Special Coupe, $1225—just to name the leaders of the line.

See these cars. See how ably the Cleveland Six engineers have lived up to expectations and instructions. See the extra this, the extra that and the extra everything Cleveland Six gives for the money.

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

IN THE LABORATORY

In the last week tests were made of the Oriole five-tube receiver manufactured by the W-K Electric Co. of Kenosha, Wis. The hook-up is two stages of radio frequency regenerative detector and two stages of audio, with a special and ingenious control which makes volume adjustments without changing the tuning.

This set satisfactorily demonstrated its selectivity by separating distance stations on wavelengths only a few meters apart. Once the station is sharply tuned with the two main dials, the volume control brings the signals up to maximum strength. A startling feature of the test was loud speaker reception of CZE, City of Mexico, with the aerial disconnected and the ground connected to the aerial post. In this test there may have been some antenna pick-up from the light socket through the "B" battery eliminator which was in use. This was an Aero-B eliminator furnished for the test. It has two rectifier tubes and gives an abundant and smooth current supply. Also used in the test was the Teletone cabinet speaker, which reproduces with good volume and quality.

Twenty-One Foreign Stations to Broadcast In the Tests of International Week

By K. H. STARK,
Secretary and Chief Engineer,
F. A. D. Andrea, Inc.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The thrill of thrills for distance fans—that of getting foreign stations—will be shared by thousands of "listeners-in" during International Radio week, from Jan. 24 to 30.

To make it as convenient as possible for the average radio set owner to "listen-in" for the European and other foreign stations that will take part in the third annual transatlantic tests, I am going to give as much of the schedule for the week as is available at this time, with the call letters wave lengths, and power of the stations expected to participate in the broadcasting.

British Stations.

Here are the eight British stations that are expected to take part in the broadcasting tests:

Call.	Location.	Wave Length in Meters	Power In Watt
5WA	Cardiff, Wales.	353	1,500
210	London, Eng.	365	3,000
2ZY	Manchester, Eng.	378	1,500
5NO	Newcastle, Eng.	404	1,500
5SC	Glasgow, Scotland	422	1,500
5IT	Birmingham, Eng.	479	1,500
2BD	Aberdeen, Scotland	495	1,500
5XX	Daventry, Eng.	1600	25,000

It has been definitely announced 5XX, Daventry, England, the powerful station located about 80 miles northwest from London, will broadcast in the first test from 11 o'clock, Eastern standard time, to midnight, Sunday night, Jan. 24. Of course, this station will not be heard at all by the owners of ordinary radio receivers because it transmits on a high wave length of 1600 meters, for which it is necessary to have a special receiving apparatus.

The British stations will transmit Sunday, Jan. 24, and Tuesday, Jan. 26, and one other night during the week from 11 p. m. to midnight, Eastern standard time. During these hours and until Friday morning after midnight, Jan. 28, all American stations will remain silent.

Continental Stations.

Continental stations will broadcast Monday, Jan. 25, Wednesday, Jan. 27, and Thursday, Jan. 28, from 11 o'clock midnight, Eastern standard time.

While the complete list of stations on the Continent that will participate will not be known until the very last moment, here are some of the other continental stations that may take part in the tests:

Call	LOCATION.	Wave Length in Meters.	Power in Watts.
SBR	Brussels, Belgium	262	1,500
PTT	Toulouse, France	315	2,000
EAJ7	Madrid, Spain	373	6,000
OSLO	Oslo, Norway	382	1,000
IRO	Rome, Italy	425	1,500
FPTT	Paris, France	458	500
Berlin	Berlin, Germany	505	4,500
Breslau	Breslau, Germany	416	1,500
OKP	Prague, Czecho-Slovakia	513	5,000
ORV	Vienna, Austria	530	1,500
HB1	Geneva, Switzerland	800	1,500
HB2	Lausanne, Switzerland	850	600
AFT	Berlin, Germany	1,300	10,000
RDW	Moscow, Russia	1,450	12,000
OXE	Lyngby, Denmark	2,400	1,500

It will be noted that there are several stations listed above that ordinary receivers with a 200 to 550 meter wavelength range will not be able to hear on account of the higher wavelengths used.

A station for which many fans will "listen-in," will be EAJ7, the new Spanish broadcasting station at Madrid, which has accepted the invitation to take part in the tests.

Starting Sunday night, Jan. 24, at 10 o'clock, American stations will broadcast for one hour—10 o'clock to 11 o'clock, Eastern Standard time, during which period foreign radio fans will "listen in," reversing the tests. Those stations not participating in this country will remain quiet during the tests. Special programs are being arranged by a number of stations, and special events will be put on by the broadcasters. The term "American" includes Canadian, Mexican and Cuban broadcasting

An All-American Test.

A special series of tests for North and South America will be conducted Friday and Saturday, Jan. 29 and 30. The schedule is as follows:

Friday, Jan. 29. (Arrangement by time).

11 p. m. to 11:15 p. m., "Eastern Standard Time" stations will broadcast.

11:15 to 11:30 p. m. "Central Time" stations will broadcast.

11:30 p. m. to 11:45 p. m., "Mountain Time" stations will broadcast.

11:45 p. m. to 12 m. "Pacific Time" stations will broadcast.

Saturday, Jan. 30. (Arrangement by Geography.)

11 p. m. to 11:15 p. m. All Canadian stations will operate.

11:15 p. m. to 11:30 p. m. Stations in northern half of United States, north of Washington, D. C., will broadcast.

11:30 p. m. to 11:45 p. m., Stations in Southern half of United States south of Washington, D. C., will broadcast.

Outside of United States.

As Canadian broadcasting stations will, in general, take part in the test, it is not felt that it is necessary to list any of these stations generally known to all radio fans Here, however, are a few of the other broadcasting stations in this section of the world, yet outside of the United States and Canada, two of them much further away than any of the European Stations, whose transmission will also be included in the test schedule.

Call.	Location.	Wave L. in M.	Power in W.
CYB,	Mexico City, Mex.	275	500
CYA,	Mexico City, Mex.	300	500
CYX,	Mexico City, Mex.	325	500
CZE,	Mexico City, Mex.	350	500
LOX,	Buenos Aires, Argent.	375	500
OAX,	Lima, Peru	380	1500
PWX,	Havana, Cuba	400	500

It is pointed out by Radio Broadcast that the schedule for Canada, the United States, Mexico and Central and South America will "not only give American listeners a chance to hear stations in this country never heard before, because of the station operating on a frequency used by some nearby station, but this arrangement will also give overseas listeners a chance to pick up some American stations that are more distant from them than the stations almost on the edge of the Atlantic Seaboard."

For the average radio broadcast listener this opportunity to try for far-distant stations will prove most interesting, particularly since he will not have to sit up all night to the chagrin of the wife. While our brethren in continental Europe are working their broadcasting stations far into the early morning hours, we shall be "listening in" in comfort from 11 p. m. to 12 p. m. Eastern Standard time.

Stars on Tonight's Chain Program

CECILIA HANSEN, VIOLINIST

FLORENCE AUSTRAL DRAMATIC SOPRANO

The beautifully toned violin of Cecilia Hansen, which inspired the Russian armies during the World War as its talented owner played in their camps, will be broadcast to millions of American listeners-in when this Russian artist plays in the A. Atwater Kent radio concert tonight. The concert will be broadcast from Station WEAF, New York, through KSD and 13 other stations, beginning at 8:15 p. m., central time.

An added feature of the program will be the radio debut of Miss Florence Austral, the popular dramatic soprano of England, who arrived in the country only last month for a coast-to-coast concert tour of America.

Miss Hansen's radio recital will amount to the American public's triumph over bolshevik masters who tried to prevent Russia's artists from visiting other lands. Rebelling against this virtual imprisonment, the violinist and a few friends escaped one dark night, rowed a small boat across the stormy Baltic Sea tot Finland. She continued to the United States and already has taken out first citizenship papers.

The program for the joint recital will be as follows:

Aria, Elizabeth's Greeting, from "Tannhauser" ....Wagner
Miss Florence Austral.
a Poem ....Fibich
b Valse Bluette ....Drigo-Auer
Miss Cecilia Hansen.
a Dreary Steppe....Grotchaninoff
b The First Violet....Mendelssohn
c The Dawn.........Pearl Curran
Miss Florence Austral.
a Meditation, "Thais"....Massenet
b Caprice Viennois.......Kreisler
c Serenade. ....Arensky
Miss Cecilia Hansen.
Aria, Ritorna Vincitor from "Aida" ....Verdi
Miss Florence Austral.
a Humoresque ....Dvorak
b Ave Maria. ...Schubert-Wilhelmj
Miss Cecilia Hansen.
a Oh! Could I But Express in Song ....Malashkin
b Love's Quarrel. ....Cyril Scott
c eSa Rapture ....Eric Coates

Mr. Boris Zakharoff at the piano for Miss Hansen.

A Radio Fans' Paradise.

The operators of Station CKY, the Manitoba Telephone System, rent the use of their poles for the erection of aerials in instances where the poles are conveniently located. A small charge is made for rental, labor and inspection charges.

Construction of Cage Aerial.

The flat-top portion of a cage aerial is built around small wooden hoops about two feet in diameter, while the lead-in may be arranged around hoops about six inches in diameter.

NEW COPYRIGHT LAW IS UP TO CONGRESS

Measure Introduced in Senate Provides Sliding Scale According to Station Power.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—An amendment to the copyright law has been introduced in the Senate by Senator C. C. Dill, Washington, which would fix definite royalty payments to authors for the broadcasting of their compositions.

As introduced, the bill does not specify what the payments should be. Senator Dill said he preferred to have the committee which will consider the bill fix the rates rather than attempt to do so himself.

In substance, the bill provides that royalties must be paid to authors for the broadcasting of all copyright matter. The bill would make it necessary for the broadcasting stations to notify the author of the use of the music or other matters and to make payment therefor within 30 days.

Senator Dill's idea is that the royalty payment should depend on several different factors. One would be the power of the station, and another whether or not the station received compensation for broadcasting the matter for which royalties would be paid. The rate for a small station would, of course, be much less than that which a high power station would be required to pay.

FIVE ANNOUNCERS KEPT BUSY

The high-power station of WJZ will be operating almost continuously from 10 o'clock in the morning until midnight daily, according to the latest programs released from that station. The daily program provides that the women's hour starts at 10 in the morning, and while only scheduled for an hour, it is generally 11:30 before the period has been concluded.

A rest of an hour at this time is the longest period of inactivity during the day and at 12:30 the station starts on a 5½-hour transmission period which is unbroken until 6 o'clock. Another half-hour of silence and then at 6:30 the evening program is started, which continues until 11:30 or midnight.

Maintaining a schedule of this length and duration is an exceedingly difficult task and five announcers are kept on the staff to introduce the events. Two orchestras are used at noon to provide two hours of luncheon music. The obtaining of program material for 12 hours of the day is a task in itself, especially when it is noted that only on rare occasions does an artist or organization appear twice in one day, and generally not more than once a week.

COMPASS IN OFFICIAL USE

The United States Coast Guard has adopted for general service a new type of radio compass known as the Kolster compass. This compass has been used with success by the commercial steamship companies, and on account of its ruggedness and simplicity in operation is readily adaptable to our service, where compass bearings are to be taken by the deck officers.

The Coast Guard has 10 of these compasses, three of which are already installed on the first-class cruising cutters Mojave, Tampa and Seneca. The rest of the sets will be installed in due time aboard the other cutters. The first one was installed on the Mojave in 1922, and has proved itself very accurate and efficient, especially when the cutter was on seal patrol in the Bering Sea, where heavy fogs prevail during the summer months.

Balkite "B"—the only "B" eliminator that does not deteriorate with use

1. Balkite "B," supplying plate current from the light socket, is the only "B" eliminator that does not deteriorate with use and does not require replacements.
2. It is the cheapest source of "B" power supply in existence. It will outlive over 20 sets of "B" batteries. So far as we know, not one has ever worn out.
3. Over 50,000 Balkite "Bs" are giving satisfactory service in daily use on all types of receiving sets.
4. Balkite "B" has no bulbs. The rectifying unit is Balkite, an exclusive metal in use in over 400,000 Balkite Power Units.
5. It is absolutely silent in operation, and its constant even flow of "B" power gives a quality of reception impossible with any other device. It cannot burn out radio tubes.
6. It is tested and listed as standard by the Underwriters' Laboratories.
7. It will serve practically all 5 tubes and most 6 tube sets. It is absolutely guaranteed to give satisfaction.

PRICE $35 At your dealer's

BALKITE "B" II will serve any standard set. Specially adapted to sets of 6 tubes or more. Price $55.

LARKINITES TO TEST PUBLIC PREFERENCE

Entertainers, After Giving Varied Programs, Will Submit Types to Listeners.

In an effort to definitely learn the wishes of their radio audience, the "Larkinites," who broadcast a program consisting of vocal and instrumental music each Thursday evening from 8 to 8:30 through WEAF, WEEI, WGR, WOC, WFI, WWJ, WCAE, WCCO, WSAI, WTAG and KSD, will offer a program of different character on Thursday evenings, Jan. 14, 21 and 28.

On the evening of Jan. 14, the "Larkinites" will broadcast a vocal program from WEAF and this chain of stations to be presented by the male quartette of the group, the members of which are, Franklyn Bauer, first tenor; Lewis James, second tenor; Elliott Shaw, baritone, and Wilfred Glenn, basso.

The following week, the "Larkinites" instrumental group will play before the microphone in the studios of WEAF, their program being broadcast by the same chain of stations.

On Thursday evening, Jan. 28, these two groups will be combined and will furnish a program of the type previously offered by the "Larkinites." At this time the radio audience will be requested to designate which type of program they prefer, so that the sponsors of this weekly half hour of entertainment will be guided in their effort to please the greater majority of listeners-in.

HEAVY RADIO EXPORTS

As was forecast by the steadily increasing monthly exports of radio equipment, such products show the greatest increase registered by any electrical export class during the first 11 months of 1925. The total value of radio goods exported was $8,936,565, as compared with $4,950,746 during the same period of 1924, according to the Department of Commerce.

NEW COPYRIGHT LAW IS UP TO CONGRESS

Measure Introduced in Senate Provides Sliding Scale According to Station Power.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—An amendment to the copyright law has been introduced in the Senate by Senator C. C. Dill, Washington, which would fix definite royalty payments to authors for the broadcasting of their compositions.

As introduced, the bill does not specify what the payments should be. Senator Dill said he preferred to have the committee which will consider the bill fix the rates rather than attempt to do so himself.

In substance, the bill provides that royalties must be paid to authors for the broadcasting of all copyright matter. The bill would make it necessary for the broadcasting stations to notify the author of the use of the music or other matters and to make payment therefor within 30 days.

Senator Dill's idea is that the royalty payment should depend on several different factors. One would be the power of the station, and another whether or not the station received compensation for broadcasting the matter for which royalties would be paid. The rate for a small station would, of course, be much less than that which a high power station would be required to pay.

FIVE ANNOUNCERS KEPT BUSY

The high-power station of WJZ will be operating almost continuously from 10 o'clock in the morning until midnight daily, according to the latest programs released from that station. The daily program provides that the women's hour starts at 10 in the morning, and while only scheduled for an hour, it is generally 11:30 before the period has been concluded.

A rest of an hour at this time is the longest period of inactivity during the day and at 12:30 the station starts on a 5½-hour transmission period which is unbroken until 6 o'clock. Another half-hour of silence and then at 6:30 the evening program is started, which continues until 11:30 or midnight.

Maintaining a schedule of this length and duration is an exceedingly difficult task and five announcers are kept on the staff to introduce the events. Two orchestras are used at noon to provide two hours of luncheon music. The obtaining of program material for 12 hours of the day is a task in itself, especially when it is noted that only on rare occasions does an artist or organization appear twice in one day, and generally not more than once a week.

COMPASS IN OFFICIAL USE

The United States Coast Guard has adopted for general service a new type of radio compass known as the Kolster compass. This compass has been used with success by the commercial steamship companies, and on account of its ruggedness and simplicity in operation is readily adaptable to our service, where compass bearings are to be taken by the deck officers.

The Coast Guard has 10 of these compasses, three of which are already installed on the first-class cruising cutters Mojave, Tampa and Seneca. The rest of the sets will be installed in due time aboard the other cutters. The first one was installed on the Mojave in 1922, and has proved itself very accurate and efficient, especially when the cutter was on seal patrol in the Bering Sea, where heavy fogs prevail during the summer months.

SHORT WAVE CHAIN THROUGH 4 STATIONS

Westinghouse Relay System Requires No Wire Connection With Re-Broadcasting Stations.

PITTSUBRG, Pa., Jan. 16.—The success of KDKA's experiment with short wave relay apparatus in putting its daily evening concert on the air foreshadows a time when this method of transmission will be used generally for relaying programs from one station to another in Westinghouse's short wave relay system.

Instituted about one month ago, the short wave relay system, operating on 61 meters, has been used to transmit the regular evening concert, from 6:30 to 8 o'clock, to Westinghouse stations KYW, Chicago; WBZ, Springfield, Mass., and KFKX, Hastings, Neb. The same program also is broadcast on KDKA's regular wave length of 309 meters.

At the relay points the concert is re-broadcast, each station using its own particular wave length.

An important contribution to the reliability of these relays has been achieved through application of the Piezo crystal control, which removes the slight frequency shifts, previously the source of so much trouble.

As a result of the successful experiment music from Pittsburg at the several in-between stations goes on the air with as much volume and clarity as if it were being played directly at the relaying points.

A NEW AIR RECORD

Although the flight of the PN-2 came near ending tragically, a new distance record for radio communication from a plane in flight was established, according to the Navy Department. The navy report on the matter follows:

"Signals from the PN-9 were easily readable in San Francisco and vicinity during the first afternoon and the entire night of the flight. This reception on the Pacific Coast continued until three or four hours after the plane had picked up Hilo (NPH), so that the plane was actually in communication with both terminal stations simultaneously. The maximum distance was about 1200 miles, which is believed to constitute a record for direct communication from a plane in flight."

The tone of Stromberg-Carlson Receivers is tested scientifically in the laboratory. Each instrument must be able to reproduce, without distortion, every tonal vibration from the lowest C on the piano [32 vibrations per second] to the highest C [4096 vibrations per second.]

Stromberg-Carlson accoustic engineers guarantee the accuracy of Stromberg-Carlson tone. It is removed from all possibility of imagination, prejudice or relative hearing ability.

Fidelity of Tone

Musically cultured people prefer Stromberg-Carlson Receivers.

Those who appreciate fine violins, grand pianos, boxes at the opera and season tickets to concert courses know what well-played instruments sound like. They wish to appraise the playing of Hoffman, the singing of Homer, the technique of Seidel as accurately by radio as though seated before them.

They prefer a Stromberg-Carlson Receiver because of its faithful tone reproduction. This fidelity of tone is due in large measure to "Rejectivity," an exclusive Stromberg-Carlson feature, made possible by totally shielding each radio frequency circuit.

Any authorized dealer will gladly demonstrate the difference between tone which merely approximates broadcasting and tone which duplicates it —Stromberg-Carlson tone.

NEW STYLE ANTENNA TOWERS

There is nothing more sensitive to changes than radio. The styles in sets, tubes, aerials are constantly changing, and the same is true of antenna towers used in transmitting.

A new type of radio antenna towers is used by the Stewart-Warner station WBBM, located on the roof of the Broadmoor Hotel, Chicago, and said to be the first of this type to be erected in the Middle West. They are distinctive from the usual pyramid-shaped towers, being 26 inches square, built in lattice work of galvanized steel and set in a porcelain insulated base four feet square. The towers, which are also insulated throughout, have an additional support of three guide wires, which are broken every 10 feet with 8-inch porcelain insulators.

The new idea of the tower was first worked out by one of the largest commercial stations in Germany to eliminate the absorption of power generally found in large steel towers that have been used to support antennas. By using the new type of tower the broadcasting station finds it more nearly possible to deliver 100 per cent efficiency to their antenna. The new system, also, reduces the very undesirable side bands of transmission that the old type of tower caused. So successful has this type of tower proven with WBBM that some of the larger Eastern stations are including the new type in planning their new equipment.

Poor Results Due to Resin.

Much of the noise experienced in the operation of the home-built receiver is due to the lavish use of soldering flux. While this noise is laid down to run-down B batteries or static, it is rarely due to either. Particular attention should be paid to the soldering lugs on the telephone jacks, the leads to the tube and the leads to the grid condenser. The proper amount of flux to use is so small an amount that it looks like a thin coating of grease on the portion of the wire to be soldered. Excessive resin from solder can be removed by wiping with a soft cloth and alcohol.

MANY GOOD FEATURES ON KSD SCHEDULE

Post-Dispatch Orchestra, Symphony Artists and New York Programs in the Week's Offerings.

Station KSD will present Max Steindel in a dual role in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch Concert Orchestra program of tonight. Steindel will occupy his regular place as conductor in the first part of the program, and in the latter part he will take up the role of soloist, giving a short recital which promises to be one of the best offerings in the long list of notable broadcasting events at Station KSD.

Steindel is best known to both the American and European public as a 'cellist, having toured in that capacity since his fourth year and having played before royalty times without number, and in the principal cities of the world. One of the favorite stories which the young 'cellist's famous uncle, Bruno Steindel, tells of him is the utter disgust manifested by the child when, having distinguished honors in a solo performance with the Steindel String Quartet at Buckingham Palace in England, little Max was warmly embraced by Queen Victoria and given a lollipop from the stand at her elbow. To the juvenile artist Queen Victoria looked like any other nice old lady and he was not at all interested at that age in being kissed by any ladies, old or young.

In his recital tonight Steindel will be accompanied by the St. Louis pianist and violinist, Esmeralda Berry Mayes, and will play two movements from sonata No. 10 by Valentini, a special arrangement of the song, "Du bist wie eine Blume," by Schumann; "The Hunting Scene" by Popper, "Hymn to Ste. Cecilia" by Gonuod, and "Gypsy Dance" by Jeral. It has been said of this artist that there are few instrumentalists now before the public who can so completely satisfy even the most exacting music lovers and critics, and certainly Steindel is one of the few exceptions to the rule that a prophet is not without honor save in his own country, because no artist is more in demand for public performances in St. Louis than has Steindel been since joining the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra 10 years ago.

Post-Dispatch Orchestra Leader in Double Role

"Ready!" says Conductor Steindel to Soloist Steindel.

In the orchestral program which will precede the Steindel recital, Ermete Simonazzi, first oboe of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, will be the soloist, and will present a group which will include the "Abendlied" of Schumann. In this group Simonazzi will have the accompaniment of the string section of the orchestra. Selections from the "Prince of Pilsen" and the "Sleeping Beauty" waltz by Tschaikowsky will be among the interesting numbers of the program.

This concert will be followed immediately on Sunday night by the Atwater Kent Radio Hour, which on that occasion will present Florence Austral, soprano, and Cecilia Hansen, violinist.

Monday night Station KSD will broadcast one of the few request programs sent out by this station. This will be the "Fur Hour" and will be presented by Rader's Instrumental Quartet, which includes David Hochman, violinist, John Kiburz, flutist, Abraham Torgove, 'cellist, and Ben Guttmann, pianist. Mrs. John E. Stoker, soprano, popular St. Louis artist, will give a recital at 9 o'clock on the same evening. She will be assisted by Ruth Duggan, pianist, and Mrs. W. T. Bronaugh, pianist, and will give a program of ballads. Mrs. Stoker has been heard by KSD listeners on two previous occasions, and has greatly pleased the radio audience.

Thursday night the local interlude in the WEAF program will be a performance of the Rachmaninoff Concerto No. 1 in the KSD studio by Josephine Caradine Dixon and Esmeralda Berry Mayes, the latter playing the second piano. The "Commerce Hour" Friday night will be presented by John Halk, violinist of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and will immediately follow a song recital in the "Fur Hour" given by Elmer Lutz, tenor, who won one of the first scholarships presented by the Municipal Opera Association. At 8 o'clock the Ladies' Quartet of Chester, Illinois, will give a short program, to be followed by an address on "Conditions in China" by Julean Arnold, Commercial Attache of the American Embassy at Pekin, China.

At 9 o'clock the same evening the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Banking will give a program which will include choral numbers and solos. Every participant in this program is an employee of one of the St. Louis or East St. Louis banks, and the soloists are well known St. Louis church choir singers and concert artists. A. Lawton Gordon, pianist will direct the program. WEAF program broadcast through KSD will occupy Tuesday night, a portion of Wednesday night, and Thursday nights. On Saturday the program at the Grand Central Theater will be broadcast, to be followed by a portion of the program presented ata the Odeon by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

CUBA HAS NEW STATION

A new Cuban station, 7SR, at Elia, is now broadcasting every Tuesday and Thursday night at 8:30 o'clock, according to a report to the Department of Commerce. The station is licensed in the name of Salvador C. Rionda and uses 500 watts power. No definite wave length has been assigned, but the station has the authority to use any wave length between 200 and 360 meters. Listeners are requested to suggest a wave length that will not interfere with their local stations. Those hearing the station may cooperate by writing direct to Mr. Rionda.

Connect Phones to Plus Terminals.

When building a set, be sure to note to which side of the jacks you connect the plus terminal of the E battery. Then be just as sure to connect your phone cords to the plug so that the phone terminal marked with a colored thread will connect in the B battery plus in the jack. Both phones and loud speakers work much better connected correctly and the magnets do not lose their strength.

CALIFORNIA STATION WILL CO-OPERATE

Management of KHJ Announces That It Has Decided to Observe Silent Periods.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 16.—Radio Station KHJ of the Times-Mirror company of this city will join in the international radio broadcasting tests, Jan. 24 to 30, according to announcement by John S. Daggett of the station.

Not only will KHJ be silent in the hour from 8 to 9 Pacific time during this week so that local listeners may have the air clear to hear broadcasting from stations in England, Europe and far South America, but KHJ will participate in the North American d-x contest on Friday and Saturday of Radio week, Jan. 29 and 30.

In the North American contest on Friday, Jan. 29, KHJ will broadcast with other West coast stations from 8:25 to 9 p. m., while other district stations in the United States, Canda, Cuba and Mexico are silent, remaining silent in the first three-quarters of the hour to permit local listeners receiving programs from other North American stations who will transmit in 15-minute periods during this hour.

On Saturday, KHJ, in common with broadcasters in the southern half of the United States, will transmit special programs for the rest of North America in the 15-minute period from 8:30 to 8:45 p. m. Pacific time, being silent in the first half hour of the test period and the last quarter hour, when Cuban and Mexican stations will broadcast special programs for listeners in the North American continent.

NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

One of a number of interesting programs scheduled for the International Radio Week Period will be a concert to be heard from WEAF and other stations from 8:15 to 9:15 o'clock, when the New York Symphony Orchestra, with Walter Damrosch conducting, will broadcast on Jan. 24, the first day of the tests. While all overseas broadcasting stations are expected to be silent only in the hour from 9 to 10, it is felt that as this will be a Sunday night and between 2:15 and 3:15 a. m. Monday morning in England, the air will be fairly clear and thousands of British and continental listeners will be able to hear the greater portion of this program.

Uncle Jimmy Thompson, who has never yet been defeated in more than 100 fiddling contests, will appear over the 1000-watt transmitter of WSM, at Nashville, every Saturday night during this season. Uncle Jimmy, who is 82 years old, has been fiddling for over 60 years and was recently nominated by the people of the South as the greatest barn-dance fiddler of his time. Not only can Uncle Jimmy play any one of the 375 numbers in his repertoire, from memory, but he dances each one of them off as he plays.

The realistic sleigh bells which have announced the arrival of the "Clicquot Club Eskimos" at WEAF each week recently sent a New Jersey listener bounding out of the house to witness the snowfall which had so suddenly come. Sleigh bells to the contrary notwithstanding, the street was as clear as on a July evening and the mystery was not solved until the close of the "Eskimos" program, when the sleigh bells were heard again.

"Safety First," a three-act comedy by Sheldon Parmer, will be broadcast by the WOC players, under the direction of Richard W. Tripp, on Wednesday evening, Jan. 20, at 10 o'clock (central time) from the Chiropractic Foundation Head Station WOC at Davenport.

The majority of broacasting stations have been surprised at the intense interest reflected in the mail received from radio listeners indorsing dramatic radio presentations, and previous plays by the clever WOC group have been no exception to this general rule.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 16.—Radio Station KHJ of the Times-Mirror company of this city will join in the international radio broadcasting tests, Jan. 24 to 30, according to announcement by John S. Daggett of the station.

Not only will KHJ be silent in the hour from 8 to 9 Pacific time during this week so that local listeners may have the air clear to hear broadcasting from stations in England, Europe and far South America, but KHJ will participate in the North American d-x contest on Friday and Saturday of Radio week, Jan. 29 and 30.

In the North American contest on Friday, Jan. 29, KHJ will broadcast with other West coast stations from 8:25 to 9 p. m., while other district stations in the United States, Canda, Cuba and Mexico are silent, remaining silent in the first three-quarters of the hour to permit local listeners receiving programs from other North American stations who will transmit in 15-minute periods during this hour.

On Saturday, KHJ, in common with broadcasters in the southern half of the United States, will transmit special programs for the rest of North America in the 15-minute period from 8:30 to 8:45 p. m. Pacific time, being silent in the first half hour of the test period and the last quarter hour, when Cuban and Mexican stations will broadcast special programs for listeners in the North American continent.

NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

One of a number of interesting programs scheduled for the International Radio Week Period will be a concert to be heard from WEAF and other stations from 8:15 to 9:15 o'clock, when the New York Symphony Orchestra, with Walter Damrosch conducting, will broadcast on Jan. 24, the first day of the tests. While all overseas broadcasting stations are expected to be silent only in the hour from 9 to 10, it is felt that as this will be a Sunday night and between 2:15 and 3:15 a. m. Monday morning in England, the air will be fairly clear and thousands of British and continental listeners will be able to hear the greater portion of this program.

Uncle Jimmy Thompson, who has never yet been defeated in more than 100 fiddling contests, will appear over the 1000-watt transmitter of WSM, at Nashville, every Saturday night during this season. Uncle Jimmy, who is 82 years old, has been fiddling for over 60 years and was recently nominated by the people of the South as the greatest barn-dance fiddler of his time. Not only can Uncle Jimmy play any one of the 375 numbers in his repertoire, from memory, but he dances each one of them off as he plays.

The realistic sleigh bells which have announced the arrival of the "Clicquot Club Eskimos" at WEAF each week recently sent a New Jersey listener bounding out of the house to witness the snowfall which had so suddenly come. Sleigh bells to the contrary notwithstanding, the street was as clear as on a July evening and the mystery was not solved until the close of the "Eskimos" program, when the sleigh bells were heard again.

"Safety First," a three-act comedy by Sheldon Parmer, will be broadcast by the WOC players, under the direction of Richard W. Tripp, on Wednesday evening, Jan. 20, at 10 o'clock (central time) from the Chiropractic Foundation Head Station WOC at Davenport.

The majority of broacasting stations have been surprised at the intense interest reflected in the mail received from radio listeners indorsing dramatic radio presentations, and previous plays by the clever WOC group have been no exception to this general rule.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q. 1. What A and B battery voltage should I apply to the battery terminals of my 2-tube Harkness Reflex set? 2. I am using 199 type tubes; can both of these tubes be used as amplifier tubes? E. J.

A. Using the 199 tubes you will need 90 volts B battery and 3 volts A battery. The 199 type tube is a hard tube and can be used as both an amplifier and a detector.

Q. Please send me information regarding leading brands of six-tube receivers. L. H. B.

A. We cannot answer questions that ask for information regarding a certain make of set or part. Write to the various manufacturers listed on our radio advertising page for the information you desire.

Q. Is cotton-covered number 14 as good as enamel-covered number 14 when used as an aerial? A. C. A.

A. Yes, you will notice no difference in the strength of the signal received when using either the cotton covered or the enameled. However, the cotton-covered wire will corrode as soon as the weather rots off the cotton covering.

Q. Is there not some way I can charge my B batteries with my Western Electric Tungar charger? E. C. W.

A. No. A special charger is needed to supply a high enough voltage to charge the B batteries.

Q. What is the name and address of the radio inspector of this district? E. H.

A. The radio inspector for the ninth district is E. A. Beane, radio supervisor, Federal Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Q. Is there a radio station KBOO in Oklahoma? Also call of Calumet station and is there a station WOT in Chicago? R. C. S.

A. We have no record of a KBOO in Oklahoma, you probably heard KVOO at Oklahoma City. The call of the Calumet Baking Powder station is WQJ. There is no WOT in Chicago, but there is a WHT and a WOK there.

Q. Is it necessary to learn the code to get an amateur license even if you intend to operate only a phone station? H. J. B.

A. Yes, before a license is issued you must be able to receive the code at a speed of 12 words per minute.

Q. What is meant by a DX program? X. Y. Z.

A. A DX program is any program that is received from a great distance. DX in radio terminology means distance. DX is also relative. What might be good DX reception for a crystal set would not be considered good long distance reception on a five-tube set.

Q. Where can I obtain a license for a phone transmitter? C. P.

A. Apply to the Radio Supervisor, Federal Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

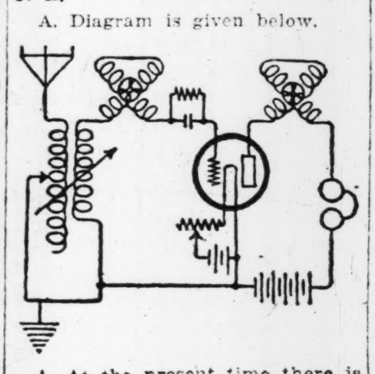
Q. Please advise me where I can buy a set of books on radio construction. R. L. W.

A. The McGraw-Hill Co., Inc., are publishers of several books on radio set building.

Q. To whom shall I report a case of interference to radio reception? We have been troubled since Jan. 1 with a noise that sounds like a spark transmitting set except that it is on all the time.

Q. Print hookup of two variometer, one variocoupler tuner.—J. B.

A. Diagram is given below.



A. At the present time there is nothing much that can be done about a case of radio interference unless you know its source. If you can definitely locate the interference as coming from, say a leaky insulator or bad transformer on a certain pole, it may be stopped by reporting the condition to the power company that owns the pole.

Q. Are the parts for the Acme reflex set still made and do you have the hookup? A. S.

A. For this information write to the Acme Apparatus Co., Cambridge, Mass.

Q. Give QRA of WVV and 2XAR. What is their wave length? F. S.

A. WVV is the radio station of the United States army post at Jefferson Barracks, Mo. It transmits on a wavelength of 1395 meters. 2XAR is the experimental call of the Radio Corporation of America at Boundbrook, N. J. 2XAR tests on various wavelengths.

Q. Where can I attend a class in radio instruction after school hours? W. S.

A. A class in radio instruction is given at Soldan High School from 7:30-9:30 on Monday and Wednesday evenings. This course is free of charge and is open to all residents of St. Louis.

Q. I have a two-circuit tuner that tunes down to 275 meters. How can I change this so that I can tune to 200 meters and still tune to 550 meters? W. K.

A. If, when tuned in to a station on a wavelength of 550 meters, your condenser setting is at a maximum capacity value, you will have to tap your coil at about 40 turns. Then, when you want to tune below 275 meters, shunt the condenser across the 40 turns and when tuning to 550 meters across the entire coil. If, however, the condenser is at only about 60 or 70 per cent maximum capacity when tuned to 550 meters, remove enough turns from the coil so that 550 meters tunes in at a maximum condenser setting. Then the coil will probably tune down to 200 meters.

Q. Where is station 6AW?—J. F.

A. We have no record of a station 6AW. You probably heard 6KW at Tuinucu, Cuba.

Q. Why can't I get stations on wavelengths over 300 meters on my Crosley Pup set?—R. E. G.

A. The Crosley Pup is designed to operate on wavelengths from 200 to 600 meters. Your aerial is not long enough. Increase it to 150 feet.

Q. What are the advantages of the different types of variable condensers?—A. T.

A. There are three kinds of variable condensers available: The straight-line frequency, straight-line wavelength and straight-line capacity. Each has different characteristics in that they provide straight-line curves when calibrated for the work for which they were designed. Straight-line frequency condensers are the best for use with the present congestion of broadcast stations on the lower end of the waveband. They will allow you to "spread out" the stations over the tuning dial fairly evenly, thus facilitating tuning.

Q. Give information regarding connecting a C battery in a two-stage audio frequency amplifier.—A. R.

A. When not using a C battery the grid return from the secondary of the audio frequency transformers is connected to the filament. To insert the C battery take the secondary grid return where it makes connection to the filament and conect it to the negative of the C battery. Connect the postive terminal of the C battery to the filament.

METALEAK

METALEAK
—the new Dubilier Resistance Unit

THE METALEAK—an accurate and constant resistance unit—involves an entirely new principle of manufacture.

An extremely thin coating of metal, possessing distinct properties of resistance, is deposited on a glass rod of thread-like proportions. This tiny glass rod is then hermetically sealed in a glass cartridge. Due to this filament, the Metaleak is absolutely noiseless in operation under all service conditions.

The Metaleak type is particularly adapted for use with the 640A Micadon in resistance coupled amplification, but it can be used in any grid mounting. In all standard values.

Guaranteed accurate within 15% of its rated value.

Health Questions Answered

By Dr. Lewis Baker and Associates

An Advertisement Informing the Public In a Common-sense Manner How to Distinguish the Simpler Ailments and Symptoms, and the Right Remedies for Treatment. Each Medicine Possesses the Highest Qualities for the Purpose Intended.

The primary cause of rheumatism is either faulty diet or faulty elimination or infection. Exposure to dampness, frequently is followed by acute symptoms of some form of the disease. The object in the treatment which I recommend for those afflicted with the sub-acute muscular, gouty and simpler forms of rheumatism is improvement in the digestive processes, increased liver, kidney and bowel activity to carry off the wastes of the body, with elements to dissolve and neutralize the tormenting substances which produce pain, stiffness, aches, etc.

I recommend Cardiol tablets, a non-secret formula, which should be taken several weeks or months, as the case may require.

As a quick relief for the acute and agonizing pains, I advise the use of five-grain Su-thol tablets, (pronounced "soothe-all"). These tablets contain no narcotic, habit-forming substance, and generally produce comfort, rest and sleep for the victim of pain.

Miss C. A. S. writes: "Week after week I read of so many being helped by your advice, which I am now seeking. I had an operation and fell off from 130 pounds to 96 pounds. Am pale, nervous, weak and don't sleep well or gain weight or strength, in spite of the fact I have taken different medicines prescribed for me.

Answer: I suggest that Cadomene tablets be taken as a tonic-invigorating aid for the blood and nerves.

A. L. R. writes: "For several years I had suffered with backache and pains in lower abdomen from kidney and bladder trouble. Began taking Balmwort tablets and now feel fine, except for a bronchial cough that nothing which I have tried, will relieve."

Answer: For obstinate bronchial cough so troublesome at this season, I advise essence Mentho-Laxene.

Mrs. E. H. R. asks: "I always enjoyed good health until after my baby was born. Since then my kidneys and bladder have given me trouble. Have dreadful backache; blinding headaches; have big puffs under my eyes and feel fleeting pains and frequently a very uneasy, nervous sensation."

Answer: I suggest that you obtain Balmwort tablets and take them as a tonic-diuretic.

Mrs. B. B. R. asks: "I am too fleshy by about 35 pounds. I suffer physically and mentally. Advise how I may reduce, please."

Answer: You should try the 5-grain Arbolone tablets which have been successful for so many in the past dozen years.

S. A. McL. asks: "Am 56 years old and have suffered with biliousness for many years. Can you help me?"

Answer: This condition wrecks the happiness of many. Constipation, fermentation and indigestion augment the condition. Headache, heartburn, palpitation, gas and bloating result. Pimples, (acne), boils, carbuncles and minor skin troubles often appear. Sulpherb tablets taken three to four times daily are advised, as their laxative, alterative action usually corrects the trouble.

Mrs. K. R. K. writes: "Please tell me if one can be made free from headaches and abdominal pains?"

Answer: I suggest 5-grain Suthol tablets (pronounced soothe-all). Many have reported utter freedom from customary pains after using them.

F. F. R. asks: "Will you please tell me of a treatment for excessive oily hair and dandruff very bad?"

Answer: Ask druggist for medicated Chex soap and use for shampoo, as per directions. There is nothing in my opinion so inexpensive and so thoroughly effective. Chex soap also destroys and prevents perspiration odors, foot odors, and is an exquisite beautifying complexion soap.

Answer to F. O. C.: To overcome constipation I advise Casca-Royal Pills as both pleasant and effective to a high degree.

Answer to D. B. E.: To avoid frequent colds and catarrh of the head, obtain triple strength Mentho-Laxene Salve. Full directions for use with each package.

NOTE: The letters and extracts following are only a few that are being published, each week, from the many thousands who have profited in health and comfort through reading and adopting the suggestions of Dr. Baker. They are voluntary, grateful expressions, indicating the high degree of service, rendered by Dr. Baker through the trustworthy medicines which he has so often advised during the past 16 years.

More complete information is offered the public in his great guide book, "Health and Beauty," sent to any address upon receipt of ten cents.

Address Dr. Lewis Baker, Medical Director, The Blackburn Products Co., 312 College Bldg., Dayton, Ohio.

The medicines mentioned can be procured of leading druggists throughout the United States.

LETTERS TO DR. BAKER

Sulpherb Restored Blood

HAYS, PA., Mr. Mel C. Schotting, writes: "Was troubled with headaches, boils and carbuncles for years. Had as high as 36 carbuncles in one year—all left scars. Had tried the most advertised blood medicines on the market without results. Then I took 4 boxes of Sulpherb tablets and seldom have a headache (bilious headache) and no more carbuncles or boils. My condition was so bad if I got a bruise on my finger it would turn into a felon, but now I am O. K."

Cadomene Quick Strength Maker

BLAIR STATION, PA., Mr. Mike Myers, writes: "I am going to tell you briefly what those wonderful Cadomene tablets did for me. I was all run down; I was weak; I couldn't sleep well. Had to force myself to eat. I took all kinds of medicines without relief. One day I read your advice about Cadomene tablets. I got one tube; after using I found quickly I was recovering and will always have them on hand."

Mentho-Laxene Stops Severe Cough

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Mrs. Roy Rentz, 304 S. Emerson Ave., writes: "My little girl had a severe whooping cough last June. Her cough was severe as when in the midst of the disease. Then Mentho-Laxene was recommended to us. The night of the second day after beginning its use, she slept through without coughing until 4 a. m. You can use my name in recommending, etc."

Balmwort Brought Comfort

SABOTTUS, Maine, James A. Libby, Box 52, writes: "I write you because of the wonderful relief the Balmworth tablets have given my wife. She had such severe pains in bladder region and her night's rest was disturbed. Her agony was such that the doctor had to inject morphine. We decided to try Balmwort tablets. She continues and today she is like a new woman as far as that trouble is concerned. She can sleep and does not have those stinging pains, etc.

FASCISM IS ALL RIGHT IN ITALY, NOT IN U. S.

St. Louis Italian Leaders Disclaim Sympathy With Movement in America.

The 5000 St. Louisans recently said by an Italian Fascist delegate to be Fascist sympathizers are in reality sympathetic to the movement only in Italy and are opposed to any importation of it into the United States, according to Joseph Freschi, president of the Ravarino and Freschi Importing and Manufacturing Co., and Claudio Delitala, editor of the Stampa Italiana, a St. Louis weekly published partly in Italian and partly in English. Both stated that Fascism was felt to be distinctly out of place on this continent.

"Giuseppe Carotti, I believe, attempted to form a Fascist nucleus here a year and a half ago with what success I do not know," Freschi said yesterday. "His statement, printed in the Post-Dispatch of Jan. 6, to the effect that I am a director of a St. Louis branch is untrue.

"I did allow him to use my name at the time, because I thought the organization to be intended merely as a social affair. I have attended no meetings and I have not attempted to make any converts. Indeed I was unaware that Carotti had done anything further in the matter. As a matter of fact, I am opposed, strongly opposed, to any attempt to make Fascism a political issue in America. It has done lots of good in Italy, but it doesn't belong here. And most of the more careful thinkers among the Italian-Americans are of my opinion."

Freschi displayed two letters. The first was an invitation to Freschi from an official Fascist organizer, inviting Freschi to form with three others the executive council for a St. Louis organization. The other was Freschi's reply assuring his correspondent of his sympathy, and refusing the proffered invitation.

"Fascism in this country would only be another excuse for aggravating the already severe discord between Italians in America and in Italy," he said, "and between various groups among the Italian-American themselves. And I say that, believing that it has been at the same time the one factor that has saved Italy from disruption since 1923.

"Charles Ravarino, whom Carotti named as one of the other directors, has had no more and no less to do with the organization than I have."

"Fascism is a purely Italian manifestation," Delitala said. "I, and the Stampa Italiana, favor it in Italy, and oppose firmly all attempts to introduce it into the United States. We in America can not allow outselves to indulge in European politics. The interests of Italy are not connected as far as we are concerned with the Government that may guide its destinies.

"Consequently I cannot approve of the establishment of Fascism abroad. I cannot understand why a man of the caliber of Mussolini has not conceived that their establishment is a mistake, since it helps neither the Italian nation nor those who have emigrated from Italy

"As a matter of fact, it makes the work of assimilation, already difficult enough, much more precarious, and much less quick and effective."

BRIAND WEARS $10 OVERCOAT

French Premier Worried Not at All by His Appearance.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—If there is one man in this "city of bon ton" who worries not at all about his personal appearance and sartorial turnout, it is the man of the hour, Premier Aristide Briand. His friends assert that the only time the Premier is correctly dressed is when he dons evening clothes, in which costume it is difficult to go wrong. However, it is pointed out that other French leaders, M. Painleve and M. Herriot, for instance, find it possible to make mistakes even in the wearing of a formal dress.

In his street clothes Premier Briand might be taken for a retired banker or an impecunious doctor. "How do you like this raglan," he asked some friends accompanying him on a channel packet which was taking him to England for a diplomatic conference. His companions, diplomatic attaches, maintained a diplomatic silence. But the Premier only grinned and added: "I bought it at a department store, ready-made, two years ago. It cost only 250 francs." In American money, the Premier's overcoat cost about $10.

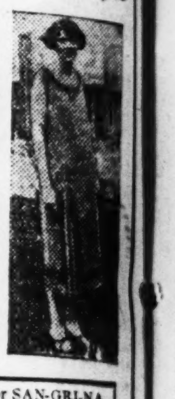
Fat Woman Loses 56 Lbs. with SAN-GRI-NA

French Prescription A Sensation Among Fat People



A RELIABLE AND WELL-KNOWN French Physician prescribes a formula which works wonders for reducing. He used it for years in Europe in private practice, and of late was persuaded to give it up to the general public. Physicians, druggists, nurses now recommend it for the most obstinate cases of obesity. It is a combination of harmless anti-fat ingredients which are put up in a small tablet called SAN-GRI-NA. SAN-GRI-NA, while being absorbed by the system, destroys all fat-forming elements, and safely does away with rolls of fat EVEN OF LONG STANDING, the reducing is gradual—does not leave one flabby or wrinkled, and is absolutely guaranteed not to have any ill effects; such reliable physicians as Dr. Rudolph, former Health Commissioner, exclusively uses SAN-GRI-NA in his private practice. Although SAN-GRI-NA is recommended by Doctors and Specialists for reducing, it has also been found a great help for high blood pressure, dizziness, puffing, tired feeling, and tones up the entire system.

"SAN-GRI-NA" is a great help to me. I have reduced 20 pounds since I first started to use it."—Mrs. Wm. Parker.

"I lost 8 pounds with one box of SAN-GRI-NA." —Mrs. Whiting, Springfield, Mass.

"I am very pleased with results. I have lost 14 pounds in 10 days."—Mrs. Hay, Vancouver.

"I have used two boxes of SAN-GRI-NA and I have lost 20 pounds."—Mrs. Dull, Oklahoma.

"When I first sent for SAN-GRI-NA I had been under the Doctor's care for heart trouble and high blood pressure. After I used SAN-GRI-NA for two weeks, I was so much relieved." —Mrs. Fonquerny.

Mrs. Koster, of Brooklyn, writes: "With SAN-GRI-NA in six weeks I lost 30 pounds of ugly fat, and after years of suffering I was relieved from heart trouble. I can now climb the stairs without puffing, and I have found a wonderful relief. You can use my letter, as well as my name, as I am grateful and wish to help as many of my sisters as I can."

SAN-GRI-NA is guaranteed absolutely harmless and positive to reduce you or money refunded. Sold at all good drug or department stores or you can send direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. C. On sale at any of Wolff-Wilson's, Enderle, Penn Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Stores, Kranson Bros., or Speckart Bros. Drug Stores.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

Woman Afraid to Eat Her Meals

"I was afraid to eat because I always had stomach trouble afterwards. Since taking Adlerika I can eat and feel fine." (Signed) Mrs. A. Howard.

Adlerika gives the system a REAL cleansing and brings out the old metabolic poisons which may have caused trouble for a long time. Just ONE spoonful relieves GAS and takes away that full, bloated feeling so that you can sleep at night without rolling from side to side. Even if your bowels move every day, Adlerika removes much additional poisonous matter which you never thought was in your system, and which caused sour stomach, nervousness, sleeplessness, headache, etc. Don't wait any longer, but let Adlerika give your stomach and bowels QUICK relief. BUSINESS OUTLOOK BRIGHT IN AUSTRIA

Commercial Attache at Vienna Says St. Louis Manufacturers Should Enter Market.

Austria, the former Hapsburg empire with 53,000,000 peoples, sliced to a nation of six millions by the treaty of St. Germaine, has performed a "come-back," in the American slang sense, according to H. Lawrence Groves, United States commercial attache at the embassy at Vienna.

Groves, representing the U. S. Department of Commerce, was in St. Louis yesterday to confer with St. Louis importers and exporters, asserted that the buying power of the Austrians is increasing steadily and that St. Louis manufacturers, particularly of shoes and certain lines of chemicals and dry goods, should share in this market. The currency, he said, has been stabilized on the value of the dollar, the kronen being quoted at .4.3 cents on the shilling par value of 20.3.

Vienna remains the financial capital of Central Europe, Groves told a reporter for the Post-Dispatch, and is therefore of special importance, regardless of the dwindling boundary lines of the former republic. He formerly was commercial attache at Prague, the capital of the Czecho-Slovak republic carved out of Austria.

Abundant Crops a Factor.

"Optimism over the business outlook in Austria," he said, "and in fact, throughout the succession states in Central Europe, seems more justified now than at any time since the war. Budget equilibrium of permanent character has been attained, commercial credit conditions in all of these countries are steadily improving and the purchasing power and living standards of a majority of the people are again slowly working upward. Abundant crops in the last harvest are an important factor in this readjustment.

"The low point in the severe depression, which prevailed in Austria last year, was passed early this year, and a gradual improvement in industrial production, as well as in domestic and foreign trade, is taking place. Unemployment in Austria is still a heavy burden to the country; its persistence in spite of better industrial activity is due primarily to the reorganization of industries on a more effective working basis. Unemployment in the other states in the Central European area is not an important problem.

Few Trade Restrictions.

"Trade restrictions of an artificial character, such as import and export licenses, contingents, and limitations in foreign trade transactions, have largely disappeared, although recently revived in Poland for the exchange market. Frequent alterations in customs, tariffs and regulations in the different Danube states have had a detrimental effect on the trade of these states; but recognition of the large measure of economic interdependence among them appears to be growing, and, it is to be hoped, will result in the establishment of tariffs of a mutually advantageous basis.

"Gradual return to more normal prosperity in the rich territory of the Great Danube Valley should not go on unheeded by American manufacturers and exporters who are interested in cultivating permanent American markets abroad. Fertile agricultural countries like Hungary and Jugo-Slovia must look abroad for the great bulk of their requirements in manufactured goods, while Austria and Czecho-Slovia, with their highly developed and extensive industries, absorb large quantities of raw materials and semimanufactures, as well as finished goods. Intelligent American salesmanship applied to these markets should yield profitable results."

SIGNS ON PARIS LAMP POSTS

Advertisements Must Be Artistic, Municipal Council Specifies.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Paris has decided to permit her lamp posts to be used for advertising purposes, but will not let them be disfigured. In voting to authorize the Prefect to sign a contract for 1000 posts to carry advertisements, the Municipal Council made the conditions that the signs must be "artistic," and must not be placed on streets which have special historical or sentimental associations.

The contractor must pay the city 400 francs (about $16) for each post he uses, and 50 per cent of his profits. Before final permission for using posts in any district is given, two committees, one on artistic values of the proposed "ads" and one on antiquarian standing of the streets affected, must be consulted. The Council itself will have the final word.

The French Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals hitherto has been allowed to paint a notice, "Be kind to animals," on Paris lamp posts, but these signs have been so small as to be hardly noticeable.

Church Acquires Luther Cottage.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 16.—A quaint peasant cottage at Eisleben, in which Martin Luther was born in 1483, has been transferred by the city to the Evangelical Church. The cottage is in a remarkable state of preservation. Though owned by the city of Eisleben, the Prussian Government has been appropriating funds for its upkeep since 1851. The church now assumes the responsibility of keeping the property. The City Council has voted to add the word "Lutherstadt" to the name "Eisleben."

NEW ITALIAN COPYRIGHT LAW

Provides 5 Per Cent Royalty for State After Term Expires.

Special Corespondence of the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News.

ROME, Dec. 27.—Italy's new copyright law is an absolute innovation in the prevailing copyright law of the world. The innovation consists in the abolition of the concept of public property and the creation of the concept of state property in copyrighted works after the expiration of the period of private ownership of works of literature or art. In other countries such works, after the copyright period, become public property in the sense that any one may publish or perform they without paying royalties to the author or his heirs. In Italy, hereafter, the State will receive a royalty of 5 per cent, which will be devoted to the maintenance and encouragement of national art.

At present the Italian Government contributes a considerable amount to artistic purposes. Under the new law probably much more will be provided by the State royalties. For example: After the Puccini rights to "La Boheme" expire the Chicago Civic Opera Company, when it presents the opera, will have to pay 5 per cent of its receipts to the Italian Ministry of Fine Arts. But the money will go toward the maintenance of Italian art collections, the funds for which are administered expertly and conscientiously.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 15c and 30c.

BAD BILIOUS SPELLS AND HEADACHE, TOO

"For about twenty years, now," says Mrs. D. M. Collins of Myers, S. C., "I have used Black-Draught at intervals when I would need a medicine to cleanse the liver. I have found that it was quick to relieve a torpid condition, which was my chief affliction.

"I have been troubled with bad spells of biliousness. Often I suffered with bad pains in the pit of my stomach and nearly always these would be accompanied by bad headaches. These spells come on me every so often.

"About twenty years ago a lady friend of mine read about Thedford's Black-Draught in a newspaper. She told me about it and I got some to try. I found it a very good reliable medicine for my trouble. It would cleanse my system of the poisons I was absorbing and would tone up my liver in a short time.

"We have used Black-Draught constantly in our home for the last twenty years and have always found it reliable. My husband always uses Black-Draught for constipation and bilious headache. We can recommend it as a good safe medicine, because it has always been dependable for us."

Thedford's Black-Draught is made of pure, medicinal roots and herbs, carefully prepared in modern, scientific laboratories and contains the full, unadulterated strength of the original ingredients.

If You Tire Easily—Beware of Chronic Fatigue

Thousands are victims of chronic fatigue—and do not know it.

If you tire with the slightest exertion, feel "all-in" at night, and wake up in the morning as weary as when you went to bed—if you are constantly troubled with weakness, dizziness, palpitation, poor appetite, nervousness, headaches, backache, etc. — nine chances out of ten the real cause is chronic fatigue.

Ordinary fatigue — the kind of "healthy tired" you feel after a good long hike in the open air, or any hard exertion—is normal. That's nothing to worry about. But chronic fatigue—the serious kind—comes from within. Your nerves, muscles, etc.—different parts of your body have become debilitated and cannot function properly.

To conquer chronic fatigue you must go to the real root of the trouble. Your tissues get their nourishment from the blood. And it is almost invariably when the blood is thin and pale, lacking in sufficient strength-giving organic-iron, that you become run-down, and are a victim of almost unconquerable weakness, lassitude and a generally washed-out state. This condition, if not corrected, may easily lead to serious trouble.

What you need is to strengthen your entire system by getting more organic iron into your blood. Don't take the mineral iron medicines used in the past, which many doctors now say do little good. Take organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which is like the organic iron in the blood, and like that in spinach and lentils. It is entirely different from the older mineral iron medicines — does not injure the teeth or upset the stomach. Furthermore, it is promptly assimilated into the blood and begins at once to revitalize worn-out organs, nerves and muscles, and gives you new strength and endurance.

Take Nuxated Iron for just two weeks and you'll be astonished how that tired, exhausted feeling simply vanishes, and how much stronger and better you feel in every way. Results are guaranteed or money refunded. At all good druggists.

To Men and Women Who Are Afflicted with Rectal Troubles

I wish to announce that Dr. J. M. Gaume has become associated with me in my practice, which is exclusively the treatment of Diseases of the Rectum, Piles, Fistula, Fissure, Ulcers of the rectum, Pruritus, Proctitis, etc. Dr. Gaume is a middle-aged man, wonderfully well versed in medicine and surgery. He graduated from a regular school of medicine twenty years ago. Has taken five post-graduate courses in Ambulant Proctology (Treatment of Diseases of the Rectum, while the patient proceeds with his daily vocation), and has made the treatment of rectal diseases his specialty the last twelve years.

I wish to say to my former and present patients, also to those who contemplate coming for treatment, that you will be greatly pleased and benefited by the added ability of Dr. Gaume to my large and fast-growing practice.

The eminent Dr. M. Ney Smith, whom I succeeded after his death, left a wonderfully fine reputation, attested by hundreds upon hundreds of cured patients, practically all of whom became his close, personal friends. Many I have met, many not. I have endeavored to maintain his practice and excellent reputation, which he established during a period of over 30 years in St. Louis, as nearly as possible on a par as I found it.

Since I took the office, I have enlarged the practice, having treated over 1900 cases, every one of whom was afflicted with rectal trouble. A few failed to finish treatment, but over 90% of the 1,900 have gone out well and happy after having suffered for years, or are well on the road to recovery today. I have many hundreds of letters such as I publish in this advertisement, and have been publishing in book, circular form, and in the newspapers. I wish to impress upon you that Dr. Gaume has hundreds of the same kind of letters that were written by his former patients.

In behalf of Dr. Gaume and myself, I pledge our honest, sincere efforts in your behalf, if you are now, or become in need of, a rectal specialist.

Dr. C. Matthew Coe.
St. Louis, Mo.

I am publishing letters written by Dr. Gaume's former patients, so that you may know and understand that Dr. Gaume is all that I represent him to you as being—able and competent.

Dr. C. Matthew Coe.

EQUIPMENT

Our equipment is the latest and most up-to-date known to the medical profession, for the treatment of rectal troubles. Examinations are made by the very latest methods, which enables us to diagnose your case scientifically and correctly, and tell you exactly what your condition is, and what we can do for you.

Do not Fear an Examination

By our gentle and kindly methods you will not be made to suffer. It will be well to mention this point when you talk to or write to our former patients. They will gladly tell you their experience.

LADIES
Do not Go on Suffering

We treat and cure many ladies—fully half as many as men. We have lady attendants always present, to give you any assistance you may wish while in our office, or under our care as a patient. Ladies come to us for treatment from great distances, and go home well and happy. If you wish, write and ask for some of our facsimile letters from former lady patients. We do not use the names of our lady patients in the newspapers.

The Confidence of Our Patients Is the Foundation of Our Success

You owe it to yourself to investigate us, our ability to cure you; and reliability. Also our business responsibility, by writing to our cured patients and business references. Then if you are satisfied, come. We will have your confidence, and you will have ours. We publish the following names and letters of former cured patients. Write to them or call upon them. If you are satisfied with the results, come and get cured. We number among our patients Ministers, Lawyers, Mechanics, Doctors, Farmers and Bankers. In fact people in every walk of life. Read the following names and letters.

Mr. J. B. Laird, a prominent farmer and stockman of New London, Mo., wrote the following letter. Every farmer who is afflicted and in need of a cure should write to him. He will truthfully tell you whether or not to invest the time and money necessary to get cured.

New London, Mo., August 19, 1925.
Dr. C. Matthew Coe, 501 Pine St., St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Doctor—I am writing this letter with heart-felt thanks to you for the cure you accomplished in my case.

I had suffered terrible pain for 15 years before I came to you to be cured of Internal Protruding Piles. While I was afflicted I could not look after my farm, now I do any kind of work and look after the farm as well as I ever did.

I would and do highly recommend Dr. Coe to anyone who is afflicted. Any sufferer who goes to Dr. Coe will derive more benefit for the time and money spent than he would to spend his time and money any other way. Yours truly,

J. B. Laird

Mr. Val E. Reis, a lumber merchant of Wood River, Ill., is one of many merchants who have been cured.

Wood River, Ill., October 26th, 1925.
C. Matthew Coe., M. D., 501 Pine St., St. Louis, Mo.:

Dear Friend and Doctor—It has been a year now since I have been treated by you for piles and fissures which caused me quite a little trouble and pain.

Your treatment is mild and causes very little pain.

I can most earnestly recommend my friends and any who are sick with rectal troubles to you. Sincerely yours,

Val. E. Reis

Mr. A. I. Steiner, a merchant of Fairfield, Ill., wrote the following letter. Any and every merchant who is afflicted can well afford to do as Mr. Steiner did. Write to him and be convinced.

Fairfield, Ill., August 21, 1925.
Dr. C. Matthew Coe, 501 Pine St., St. Louis, Mo.:

My Dear Dr. Coe—Words cannot express my warm feeling and gratitude towards you for the cure you effected me, after my having suffered for years with rectal troubles.

Your up-to-date methods and painless treatments should not be overlooked by anyone suffering from the same as I have.

If at any time I can be of service to you, or to anyone suffering from the same kind of ailment, I will be only too glad to recommend them to you, for I know it will be a cure for them.

Wishing you the best of health and success, I am, sincerely,

A. I. Steiner

Rev. Walz writes the following letter. If you are afflicted, his letter is more convincing to you, as to our ability to cure you, than all we could possibly write to you. Communicate with Rev. Walz. He will gladly answer your letter.

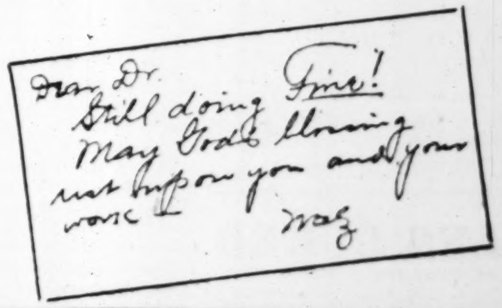
J. M. Gaume, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.:

My Dear Doctor—First may I tell you that I am still among the "cured." At times it seems as though it must be a dream, but I find it every day more "real." I cannot express the gratitude I feel. Am glad to know that Rev. Johnson has also found a cure. And am pleased to know the boys are being helped so much with their eye trouble. Fine!

Saturday evening I was in the office of Dr. L. A. Wells, and we talked about your ability of curing Piles. The Dr. became much interested, told me about his wife's suffering, and said he would write you a personal letter today. So perhaps even before you get this you will have a letter from him. I trust he will find it possible to send his wife to you, for I know the relief and cure would be a "God-send" to her.

With very best wishes, I am
Sincerely yours,

J. George Walz



Dear Dr.
Still doing Fine!
May God's blessing rest upon you and your work

A Sure Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

RUPTURE EXPERTS COMING

Demonstrate the Famous Rice Method Free to Callers at Hotel

If you are ruptured, your big opportunity has now arrived. If you would like to be free from the slavery of gouging, pinching, chafing trusses that make life a burden, then HERE and NOW is the time to act.

Experts in rupture cases, trained under the personal direction of W. S. Rice, of Adams, N. Y., the famous discoverer of the Rice Non-Surgical Rupture Method, will be at the Jefferson Hotel, St. Louis, Mo., from Monday morning Jan. 18, until Saturday evening, Jan. 23.

These experts are here to personally demonstrate to all ruptured people what the Rice Rupture Method can accomplish. You have, no doubt, heard and read much about this famous Method and the cures which thousands have reported from it. Now you have the chance to find out all about it, to have it demonstrated to you and to see what it can do in YOUR OWN case. Just call at the hotel and these experts will give you their personal attention, best advice and complete demonstration absolutely without charge.

Are you tired of that binding, hampering, uncomfortable truss? Would you like to be free of it forever? Then investigate this Rice Method and find out the possibilities it holds out. Surely a Method that could cause so many thousands of former rupture sufferers to report cures must be worthy of your full and complete investigation.

The Rice Method is different from anything else. It is modern, up-to-the-minute, abreast of the latest scientific developments. It is the one Method that you are not asked to take on faith alone—the one Method that is positively demonstrated to you, right on your own person, without any charge whatever. You do not spend a penny unless, after having a full and complete demonstration you decide that this is the Method for you. And you—you alone—are the sole judge of that.

In justice to yourself come in and see these experts. Remember, they will be here only six days, then your opportunity will be gone. Grasp it NOW. It may prove to be the wisest thing you ever did, and, anyway, it costs you nothing to find out.

Remember, come to the Jefferson Hotel any day from 9 to 12 forenoons, 2 to 5 afternoons, or 7 to 9 in the evening. The dates are from Monday morning, Jan. 18, until Saturday evening, Jan. 23.

Don't let this opportunity get away from you.

W. S. RICE, Adams, N. Y.

14 WOMEN IN ATHLETIC GROUP FOR 10 YEARS

Are Honor Members of Y. W. C. A. Gymnasium and "Keep Fit" by Exercise.

Gymnasium courses at the Y. W. C. A. include classes for women who have too much energy, and those who haven't enough, for women who are too fat and women who are too lean, and one for 14 women who, asserts the director, Miss Galena W. Stowell, are just right and have taken the winter "gym" work to keep in trim for their summer sports, for more than 10 years.

Once a week these graduate students meet for a brief workout in the gymnasium—a game of volley ball and a half-hour swim. It was a snappy game of volley ball they put up yesterday when a reporter for the Post-Dispatch was a spectator.

Every year they play a match against their husbands, and sometimes they win. Then the husbands treat. If the husbands win, the wives treat. Yesterday's exhibition showed little lack of the snap and precision that would be expected in a man's game. Neither did there seem any lack of the "fine, manly sportsmanship" that men talk much about and sometimes exhibit by throwing pop bottles at the umpire.

Where Man Cannot Equal.

If somebody "pulled a boner" everybody seemed inclined to laugh about it, including the offending member. In fact, the ony striking difference was the exclusive and appalling ability of women for free-for-all conversation, all tongues going at once, instead of one or two at a time, and a shrillness beyond the masculine in one shout in a close play—"Up on it! Up on it! OOOooooh!!"

Their calisthenics do not run to spectacular stunts, since that has been determined as undesirable for women's exercise. They do a great deal of "bends" and the like, which, Miss Stowell says, are of vastly more use in a regular "daily dozen" for keeping fit.

All 14 are athletic in the sense that they play golf and tennis, ride, swim and indulge in other sports in proper seasons the year round. This is their sixth year at the Y. W. C. A., but they had become a definite group several years before at a South Side turnverein. They still continue the practice of holding match games and competitions within the group outside of the class work.

Their Ages Range From 30 to 55.

Ages range from 30 to 55. Most of them deny that bobbed hair is any great advantage to a sportswoman. All but three have long hair. They do not noticeably resort to rouge. "They paint their cheeks from the inside out," Miss Stowell remarked.

GIRLS DROP MANNISH MODES

Foamy Flounces and Old-Fashioned "Quilting" in London Styles.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The modern girl is turning from mannish modes, if the new spring styles now displayed in London are a true indication. A reversion to the graceful gowns and foamy flounces of the Victorian era is the most noticeable trend. There will be fewer tweed suits and low-heeled shoes for women seen in London than in 1925, and in place of the severe tweeds, it is expected, the best dressed women will wear silk coats decorated with narrow taffeta flounces.

Old-fashioned "quilting" is to be used in hems of dresses and coats. Materials of flowered patterns and spotted muslins are already on view. For evening gowns there will be a free use of tulle chiffon and lace, while for garden parties and similar functions there will be shaded georgette frocks, tightly pleated. Lace is being used in greater measure, not only for frocks and draping effects, but also on millinery and as panels for silk stockings.

OLD GAIETY LIFTS SMOKE BAR

Historic London Theater Draws Line at Pipes, However.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—London theaters are abandoning the bar again against smoking. The latest to discard the prohibition is the famous old Gaiety, whose name is linked with the histories of several of the brightest luminaries of English theatrical history and whose choruses have produced many brides for the British nobility and aristocracy. This is the first time in its history that the Gaiety has permitted smoking, and even now it draws the line at pipes, which are allowed in many London playhouses. The Gaiety announces in large type on its programs that smoking must be confined to cigars and cigarettes. In many London theaters smoking is general with the audience, even women indulging freely.

By RICHARD L. STO

Music and Drama Critic of the

IN a recent communication to this ne Parks of Washington University mai justifiably repudiate a medieval story cause we object to its doctrine. Otherw like Papini, despise "Hamlet" because it is vengeful moral code.

The truth, of course, is that "Hamlet" is founded on its hero's enlightened resistance to murderous, vindictive usages; for this reason it persists not only as a poetic but as a civilized work of art. But there are no doubt instances in which the fiat of Prof. Parks will hold.

Beethoven and Tschaikowsky.

WE do not proclaim Beethoven a barbarian and nominate him as composer laureate of the International Optimists because, after exploring the nadir of tragedy in the Fifth Symphony, he gives it for "happy ending" a finale in C Major. Neither do we rail on Tschaikowsky because his reading of life in the "Pathetique" is unflinchingly pessimistic. Why do we accept both attitudes with impartial relish? Because, I think, we do not know which is right.

But there are cases outside the realm of the unascertainable in which a literate man can scarcely avoid taking a decided position. The "Dr. Faustus" of Christopher Marlowe is once more a convenient example. Having a taste for primitive chemistry and physics, this German doctor was accused of sorcery by his priestly enemies and condemned by them to everlasting hellfire. They were soon to menace Galileo with the dungeons of the Inquisition and roast Bruno at the stake for espousing the Copernican astronomy—a system now taught, as a matter of course, by every theological faculty extant.

Reason in Beauty.

IT was unluckily the sacerdotal point of view which Marlowe, though knowing better, adopted for his play. Probably it once had an appeal as an edifying homily against the blasphemous pursuit of secular knowledge—blasphemous because all possible science was believed to be contained in the Scriptures. Today, however, that pursuit has become honorable and righteous, with the result that "Dr. Faustus"—save for a few sublimities of verbal expression—has vanished from the general consciousness. Its doctrine has grown absurd and revolting to civilized men. The intellect will no longer accept it.

The tragedy has declined into that category which George Santayana so felicitously defined as "barbarous art," in contradistinction to "rational art." This philosopher of esthetics by no means felt himself obliged to accept as a masterpiece any work, however eminent its style, which seemed to him fundamentally illiterate or mad. Stupidity he regarded as no inconsiderable flaw in an epic or drama. The truly great work of art, for him, is not only beautiful but reasonable.

So that one may, while recognizing the music of Milton's verse, reject "Paradise Lost" because it celebrates an irrational cosmogony. But we may admire the equally majestic prosody of Aeschylus and Lucretius, and at the same time have the pleasure of doing homage to a sagacity which prevented them from being the dupes of a mythology less preposterous than Milton's.

"The Miracle" Not Medieval.

THE faults of "Dr. Faustus" are extenuated by Prof. Parks on the ground that it is a medieval legend, and he extends the same charity to "The Miracle." An identical plea was made a week ago in a Post-Dispatch editorial, which urged that the version of the fable now current at the Coliseum is steeped "with medieval views of life and the divine order." It so happens that both these assertions are ill-informed. Both do an injustice to a mellow and humane epoch.

The medieval conception of God was not that of a stern and unrelenting master, but of a kindly, indulgent and loving father. It was by no means true, prior to the dour concept of religion inflicted on the world by Calvin and Fra Savonarola, that, as Prof. Parks avers, "the nun's first step out of the convent leads, and must lead, to calamity." The flight of the nun could inevitably lead to catastrophe only after John Calvin. Before him there was a "good God." He still survives in the French phrase, "le bon Dieu," but scarcely anywhere else. Certainly not in "The Miracle." The nun, who commits one peccadillo and

"Doctrine" of Play May Rank Its Art as Sane or Barbarous

"Hamlet" a Rational Drama Because It Portrays Civilized Instincts in Revolt Against a Savage Code—Marlowe's Tragedy Fares Towards Oblivion Since Pursuit of Secular Knowledge Is No Longer Deemed Blasphemous.

By RICHARD L. STOKES,
Music and Drama Critic of the Post-Dispatch.

IN a recent communication to this newspaper, Prof. George B. Parks of Washington University maintained that we may not justifiably repudiate a medieval story, or any other story, because we object to its doctrine. Otherwise we must, he declared, like Papini, despise "Hamlet" because it is based on a bloody and revengeful moral code.

The truth, of course, is that "Hamlet" is founded on its hero's enlightened resistance to murderous, vindictive usages; for this reason it persists not only as a poetic but as a civilized work of art. But there are no doubt instances in which the fiat of Prof. Parks will hold.

"The Miracle" Not Medieval.

THE faults of "Dr. Faustus" are extenuated by Prof. Parks on the ground that it is a medieval legend, and he extends the same charity to "The Miracle." An identical plea was made a week ago in a Post-Dispatch editorial, which urged that the version of the fable now current at the Coliseum is steeped "with medieval views of life and the divine order." It so happens that both these assertions are ill-informed. Both do an injustice to a mellow and humane epoch.

The medieval conception of God was not that of a stern and unrelenting master, but of a kindly, indulgent and loving father. It was by no means true, prior to the dour concept of religion inflicted on the world by Calvin and Fra Savonorola, that, as Prof. Parks avers, "the nun's first step out of the convent leads, and must lead, to calamity." The flight of the nun could inevitably lead to catastrophe only after John Calvin. Before him there was a "good God." He still survives in the French phrase, "le bon Dieu," but scarcely anywhere else. Certainly not in "The Miracle." The nun, who commits one peccadillo and for the rest is merely a helpless victim, is crushed under an avalanche of the stones regarding which the founder of Christianity admonished us against the hypocrisy of casting a single one.

No Miracle Needed.

A GLANCE into the documentation of the pantomime discloses that only its first scene is in spirit medieval, and that the other seven represent accretions of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Even the final scene, while conforming outwardly to the legend, is corrupted at heart. The nun's collapse as a human individuality is strictly a modern touch, and one of fatal dramatic ineptitude, for thereby the miracle of divine grace for which the spectacle is named becomes totally superfluous. No prodigy is needed to reclaim the shattered and broken-spirited wretch who crawls back into the convent. Sin has been made for her so atrociously penal that only an idiot could fail to see that virtue is preferable.

In its pristine guise, the myth is recounted by St. Alphonsus Liguori. Here the nun's return to the convent is actuated not by defeat and repentance, but merely by curiosity. Learning by accident that, during her absence of 15 years, she is supposed also to have been leading the holiest of lives at the nunnery, she hastens thither to seek an explanation of the mystery, and discovers that her role has been miraculously filled by a statue of the Virgin Mary.

Not Hounded to Reform.

IN the Madonna's salutation there is no word of chastisement, and only the most delicately tactful allusion to the fugitive's wrongdoing. She may return if she likes, and is simply to err no more. So signal an example of lovingkindness melts the nun's heart, and of her own free will she re-enters the convent.

The vindictive sense of sin with which the legend has grown besotted appears to have entered it for the first time in the ballads of the middle-class English poetasters, John Davidson and Adelaide Ann Proctor. They absolutely could not comprehend how an offender might be forgiven without having first been dreadfully punished.

This cruel superstition was adopted bodily for "The Miracle." The incident of the Robber Count and the game of cards was appropriated, and brutalized in the taking, from Gottlieb Keller's "Die Sieben Legende." The disasters which throng the middle scenes are without exception not medieval in origin, but additions of the second decade of the twentieth century. The fact causes one to reflect sourly on our impudence in branding the medieval era as "the Dark Ages."

Altered on Tour.

IT is scarcely to be imagined that those eminent Christian dervishes, Messrs. Reinhardt, Volmoeller and Gest, are in the least concerned to vindicate the sanctity of the monastic system. More plausibly, they were warned by an alert pecuniary instinct that a segment of the public would not

'New Brooms' and 'Rose-Marie' Tonight

NEITHER of the entertainments opening tonight at the American and Shubert-Rialto theaters is precisely a stranger. "New Brooms" was played last November in stock at the Empress, and "Rose-Marie" spent three flourishing weeks in St. Louis last fall.

But "New Brooms" comes to the American with the original New York production and cast, and with the principal role in the hands of the playwright, Frank Craven, author of "Too Many Cooks," "Under Fire," "Seven Chances," "Going Up," "Spite Corner" and "The First Year."

Father and Son Clash.

THE latest offering from his pen takes up the age-old battle of father and son, the clash of generations. The father is a hardheaded broom manufacturer, and the son a dreamer. In desperation over his indolence, the father turns over his house and factory to the son, with full power of management for a year.

The son's motto has always been that open hand and heart control life. After six months of paying bills for sister, providing sport clothes and spending money for father and meeting the demands of the factory, the son becomes an improved edition of his father as a grouch.

Craven has the role of the son, Robert McWade that of the father, and Blyth Daly that of the girl in the case. In the company are Patricia O'Bryan, Jack Devereaux, Helen Weathersby, Frederick Graham, Isabel Baring, Charles Brokate, James Kearney, Isadore Marcil, George Wright Jr. and Edward Holland.

Thomas Conkey in the Cast.

THE same cast returns in "Rose Marie," except that Thomas Conkey of Municipal Theater popularity has succeeded to the chief male role. Maria Shamshon, Hungarian operatic soprano, will again be heard in the prima donna character. Remembered from the previous visit are Charles Sylber, Betty Byron, Arthur Cunningham, Sibylla Bowhan and H. Pierre White.

This romantic opera boasts an unusually brilliant musical score by Rudolf Friml and Herbert Stothar, the latter of whom comes from New York to direct tonight's performance. The site, in Western Canada, affords scope for unhackneyed costumes. The direction embodies more invention than a score of musical plays in general—such as 10 scenes instead of the stereotyped three acts, interludes taking place within draperies at the front of the stage, a murder scene done in pantomime, a habitual use of the orchestra to accompany the dialogue, and original chorus exploits in such numbers as "The Totem Pole."

Ziegfeld "Follies" Coming.

AT the Shubert-Rialto next week will be divulged "Aloma of the South Seas," a play of the "Bird of Paradise" type. For the week of Jan. 31 the American promises the twentieth edition of the Ziegfeld "Follies," with W. C. Fields, Ray and Johnny Dooley and Edna Leedom, and with decorations by Norman-Bel Geddes and Ben Ali Haggin.

'Aleko' a Boyish Indiscretion of Rachmaninoff

By SAMUEL CHOTZINOFF,
Music Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.

THE piece de resistance of the Moscow Art Theater Music Studio's new bill at the Jolson Theater this week was "Aleko," a youthful indiscretion of Sergei Rachmaninoff and Nemirovitch Dantchenko. This work had its first American production Monday night.

The evening's entertainment was grouped under the comprehensive title of "Love and Death," and "Aleko," presumably on account of the prestige of its composer, had first position on the program. It was grouped with two other one-acters—"The Fountain of Bakhchi-Sarai," with music by Arensky, and Gliere's "Cleopatra."

Composer Was Perturbed.

I HEAR Mr. Rachmaninoff was somewhat perturbed at the Moscow Theater's exhumation of one of his very earliest flights—he was 18 when he composed "Aleko"—and after hearing it played and sung I think he had adequate reason to be.

"Aleko" is really something to be lived down, though there were traces here and there of the sort of elastic melody that became the chief characteristic of his later work. But on the whole, the score is insipid and undistinguished, and as an accompaniment to dramatic action it lacked point and characterization.

For one without a knowledge of Russian it is difficult to judge the merits of the libretto. Mr. Dantchenko was 14 years older than Rachmaninoff when he pieced it together from one of Pushkin's narrative poems, and presumably knew his craft better than the com-

ALL-CHOPIN RECITAL IS LISTED BY PADEREWSKI

Former Premier of Poland Appears Thursday Evening at Odeon—Symphony Concerts Feature Sowerby's Suite, "From the Northland."

FORMER Prime Minister of Poland and still premier of the pianoforte, Ignace Jan Paderewski will appear in recital Thursday evening at the Odeon, presenting a program composed exclusively of works by his eminent countryman, Frederic Chopin. Conspicuous also during the week will be the first St. Louis performances, at the Symphony Orchestra's Friday and Saturday concerts, of Leo Sowerby's suite, "From the Northland."

During seven eventful years, Mr. Paderewski transferred his allegiance from music to patriotism, taking a principal part in the liberation of his country and the foundation of the Polish Republic, which he served as its first Premier. He was Poland's chief spokesman at Versailles and its first representative in the League of Nations.

"Quel Debacle!" said Clemenceau.

AT the peace conference, it is related, Clemenceau learned that the Polish delegate was a certain Ignace Jan Paderewski, and inquired whether by any possibility this personage might be the famous pianist. He was told that it was so. Struck by the spectacle of an artist fallen among politicians, the sardonic "Tiger" shook his head and muttered "Quel debacle!"

A calamity it would have been had Paderewski been irrevocably lost to art. But he returned to the piano in 1923, and on Feb. 1, 1924, played a recital at the Coliseum with all his former sorcery and a personal magnetism more sovereign than ever. His program for the present concert is announced as follows:

Fantasia, Op. 49; Four Preludes, Nos. 15, 16, 21 and 24; two Nocturnes, Op. 15; Sonata, Op. 35; Ballade, in F Minor; three Etudes, Nos. 12, 7 and 3, Op. 10; Scherzo in C-sharp Minor, Op. 39; Mazurka in F-sharp Minor, Op. 59; Polonaise in A Major, Op. 40, and Valse, Op. 42.

Homesick for North Woods.

IN the front rank of the young men seeking to establish America's voice in the chorus of modernists is Leo Sowerby, a native of Grand Rapids, Mich., a resident of Chicago, a Prix de Rome student and a composer whose 30 years have already achieved a considerable production. Among his recent works are "Syncopata" and "Monotony," written for Paul Whiteman's orchestra.

His suite, "From the Northland," pictures his nostalgia for the Northern woods which he roamed as a boy. It was written in Italy, while he was a student at the American Academy in Rome. Its first performance was in that city on May 27, 1924. Fritz Reiner and the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra introduced it to America, on March 20, 1925. Mr. Sowerby, during the last year of Max Zach's conductorship, appeared as soloist with the St. Louis orchestra, playing his own pianoforte concerto.

Beethoven's "Pastoral."

DIRECTOR GANZ will present his first reading of Beethoven's "Pastoral" symphony, the diverting tone-poem, "Till Eulenspiegel," by Richard Strauss, and two of Dvorak's Slavonic dances. There will be no soloist. The program follows:

Symphony in F Major, "Pastoral," No. 6, Op. 68..........Beethoven
- I. Allegro ma no troppo.
- II. Andante molto moto.
- III. Allegro.
- IV. Allegretto.

Tone-Poem, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," Op. 28....Strauss

Suite, "From the Northland"—Sowerby
- I. "Forest Voices."
- II. "Cascades."
- III. "Burst Rock Pool."
- IV. "The Shining Big Sea Water." (First time in St. Louis).

Two Slavonic Dances, Op. 46.Dvorak
- (a) No. 3, in A Major.
- (b) No. 1, in C Major.

Marjorie Dodge Sings Today.

A YOUNG Chicago soprano, Miss Marjorie Dodge, will be soloist at this afternoon's popular symphony concert at the Odeon, presenting "Depuis le jour," from "Louise," and "Wie nahte mir der Schlummer," from Weber's "Der Freischuetz." She created the leading feminine role in Patterson's opera, "The Echo," when it was produced last year at Portland, Ore., and has sung principal roles with the Los Angeles Civic Opera

"Seventeen" Suffers Final Blow--Now It's A Musical Comedy

Willie Baxter's a Dancing Man, Baby-Talk-Lady Is Jazz Pianist, and Jane Sings Drinking Song, With Highland Fling—"Down Streams" Starts Well, but "Goes Democratic" in Second Act—Four Ibsen Plays in February.

By ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.

THEY have taken the sorrows of William Sylvanus Baxter Jr., as related to an unfeeling world by Booth Tarkington, and submitted them to the crowning indignity of musical comedy. The song-and-dance version of the deathless "Seventeen" was vehemently performed Wednesday night at the Eltinge Theater under the title, "Hello, Lolo!"

Among those who attended its New York premiere, I, for one would be willing—nay, glad — to go again, if only I could have some assurance that Mr. Tarkington and Gregory Kelly would be in the audience. Their faces on that occasion—always agreeable portions of the American scene anyway — would, at "Hello Lolo!" be worth going miles to see.

A "Seventeen" with a pleasant young Willie Baxter who is at his best when dancing; a "Seventeen" with the Baby-Talk Lady acted by a celebrated jazz pianist, involving therefore the rather startling new custom of having a grand piano in Mr. Parcher's front yard; a "Seventeen" with a Genesis a la Jolson and a Clematis renamed Rin Tin Can instead, don't you see, of Rin Tin Tin. Above all a "Seventeen" with the incomparable role of Jane Baxter played by a plump, rough-voiced, open-faced, highly colored soubrette.

The Adult and the Cigar.

I SHOULD particularly like to see Mr. Tarkington's face at the moment when Jane Baxter sings a Scotch drinking song and dances a hearty approximation of a highland fling. It should be reported that this episode, which the old fogies who put on "Seventeen" originally never so much as thought of, made a great hit with the audience and was received with vociferous acclaim.

Then the laughter was nothing short of hysterical at another moment in the evening when a large and rather arrestingly adult actor pretended to get very sick from smoking a big black cigar. Ickle Boy Woollcott found both episodes a trifle trying. He may have been a minority of one.

A certain resentment at any tampering with such a masterpiece as the original portrait of Jane Baxter is not unbecoming. She is the most formidable feminine figure that has stalked into view since first Lady Macbeth cried: "Give me the dagger!"

I thought some of the tunes were seductive and I have no doubt that Dorothy Donnelly did a good job in preparing "Seventeen" for its reception into the world of musical comedy. But such roughhousing of a masterpiece as ensued at the Eltinge estranged my sympathies from their endeavor. I most enjoyed those parts of the program marked "Intermission," for "Tiptoes' is playing next at the Liberty.

A Good Play Gone Wrong.

WHEN a play has had the advantage of an experimental production by a Los Angeles stock company and a further trial flight on the fringe of New York, it may still lack certain elements expected of the Great American Play. But it seldom reaches us in the state of helpless chaos which marked a piece called "Down Stream" when it was submitted to this town Monday evening at the Forty-eighth Street Theater.

Its tendency to ride on rapidly in every direction, like the young man in the Leacock novel, did not manifest itself until the second act. Then a savorous and original comedy blew up and, in a phrase of the incomparable Dorothy Parker, suddenly went Democratic. This disaster came as something of a shock to those who had found in "Down Stream" the beginnings of an excellent and sturdy play.

A Roughhouse "Candida."

THE scene is aboard a tugboat, the play's central figure the wife of the tugboat's cook. Indeed "Down Stream" might be described as a rough-house "Candida" of the Ohio River. Its plot concerns the awakening of a shy, dreamy kid from Kentucky who ships on the Speedwell as a deckhand. It tells how Maisie, the cook's wife, whips up the manhood in the lad and then, for his own good, disgusts him with her and so packs him off to lead the good life in his own home town.

These two roles are played to the hilt by Roberta Arnold and a young newcomer named Rex Cherryman, seen here briefly once before in one of Miss Rambeau's fleeting experiments with dramatic art. By her present performance, Miss Arnold renews an old suspicion that she knows one or two secrets of the mystery of acting that are hidden from her sisters in the craft.

Newspaper Men Wrote It.

MR. CHERRYMAN, who seems to be young and untarnished and richly gifted, is hereby recommended to all playwrights with roles just waiting for fresh, not over-civilized Morgan Farleys. He speaks in this play with a Southern accent as sweet and syrupy as Massa Blackmer's, but inasmuch as he comes from up Michigan way, I assume he can take it or leave it alone.

"Down Stream" was written by Alexander C. Herman and Leslie P. Eichel, two newspaper men not previously identified with the drama. It was produced by Thomas Wilkes, the Crosby Gaige of the Pacific Coast. It is a good play gone wrong.

Four Ibsen Plays at Once.

EVER since the late Clyde Fitch bedazzled his contemporaries 20 years ago by having six plays of his running at one time in New York, many playwrights have toiled at their desks with that astounding record standing unconfessed in the back of their minds as a mark to shoot at.

When this season was new, it looked as if young Noel Coward of London would come nearest to it, with the hot breath of Michael Arlen making his neck uneasy. But after "The Vortex" was launched, Coward's brilliant "Hay Fever" was done to death in a side street before ever Jane Cowl could get to town with "Easy Virtue." After giving us "The Green Hat" and "These Charming People," Mr. Arlen decided to call it a season and went back to England.

The Fitch record, however, will be more nearly approached by another dramatist, and this challenge comes from the most unexpected quarter in all the world. Unless certain works now in rehearsal are abruptly abandoned, it looks as though the month of February would see four plays by Henrik Ibsen running in New York at one time. It would be my guess that this never happened before in the history of the English speaking theater.

A Cartoon of Futility.

AND if the spirit of the late William Winter is still capable of his old-time annoyance at the caprices of public taste, he will, I am sure, greet this phenomenon by turning in his grave. It is not a quarter of a century ago that Mr. Winter stood in the lobby of the old Manhattan Theater on the first night of Mrs. Fiske's production of "Hedda Gabler," audibly commenting on the hair-length, the bust-measure and the moral putrescence of the women who would so far forget themselves as to attend such foul balderdash.

Now, 23 years later, "Hedda Gabler" is in rehearsal and the central role is to be played by the first Hedda's cousin, that brilliant and eventful actress, Emily Stevens. There has been no production announced this season to which I have looked forward with greater interest than this one. There is only one other production even dimly contemplated to which I look forward with as much interest, and that is just an aspiration which may never work out at all.

In the back of George Tyler's mind there is the notion that in the spring he may be able to bring together for special matinees of "Ghosts" two stars at present under his management. He hopes (as I do) to see the role of Mrs. Alving played by Mrs. Fiske and

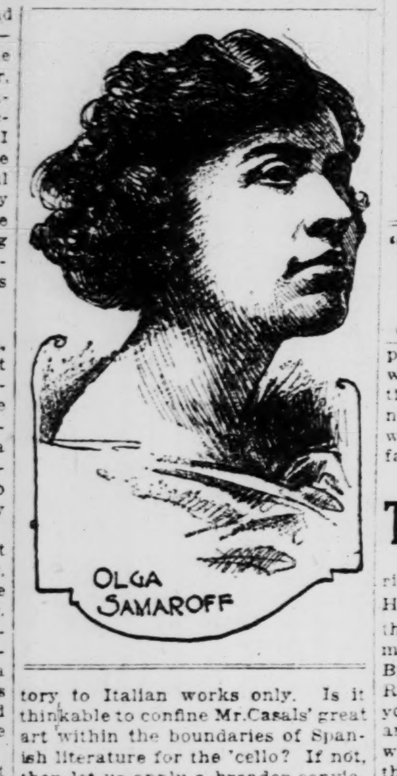
How Foreign Name Brought Tribulation Upon Olga Samaroff

A Native of Texas, She Was Declared by Critics to Play With Fire and Exaggerations Possible Only to a Russian.

By OLGA SAMAROFF.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.

IN his interview last week, Mr. Alfredo Casella had many interesting things to tell us on the subject of nationalism in creative musical art. The element of nationality also plays a part in the interpretative side of music, and my attention was forcibly called to this fact by personal experiences in my early career as a pianist.



OLGA SAMAROFF

Having—as Melba, Nordica and others had done before me—taken a foreign stage name on the advice of an experienced manager, wise in his generation (which generation was very reluctant to recognize artistry in an American), I soon found that, in spite of the most conscientious and truthful relation of facts sent out before my concert appearances, there were many who persisted in thinking me a Russian and in saddling upon me both the virtues and vices of my supposed nationality.

A Texas "Russian."

EVEN in musically wise Vienna, on the occasion of my debut there, a leading critic proclaimed that I had played the Tschaikowsky B flat minor concerto with a fire "which only a Slav could possess, but with exaggerations which displayed too chauvinistic an enthusiasm." Truly strange attributes in a Texan!

The same type of thing is apt to be said privately, if not publicly, of most artists. How often one heard it asserted at the time of Mr. Toscanini's unforgettable performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the Metropolitan Opera House some years ago that he was a great orchestra leader but "could not conduct Beethoven because he was an Italian!"

It seems to be a popular sport among the unthinking to pigeonhole both creative art and interpretative artists in little mental departments fitted out with labels composed of just such generalities. And nothing is a greater mistake.

ART ITSELF is much too subtle and complex to be treated in this manner, and artists are apt to prove unruly and perplexing occupants of labeled pigeonholes. For one thing, nothing in art is static. Even the most fundamental qualities in accepted creative art works seem to change somewhat as we look upon them with eyes or listen to them with ears influenced by the eternal development going on for better or for worse, both in us and in art itself.

Paderewski and Chopin.

THE interpretative artist who has been neatly tucked away in some pigeon hole labeled with a careful inventory of his qualifications and limitations has an inconvenient way of coming out a few years later so changed that nothing fits unless the label happens to have been of a prophetic character which proved to be correct, and such opinions are usually formed only among spirits of so much discernment that they would not be likely to indulge in labels at all.

It is undeniable that an artist of a given nationality can more easily, more instinctively and more quickly grasp and give forth music of his own race than artists who are not of that race. Paderewski's playing of a Chopin mazurka or Caruso's singing of an Italian operatic aria are good cases in point.

The Composer's Part.

BUT it seems to me that Casals' playing of a Haydn concerto or Stokowski's conducting of a Brahms symphony are equally strong proofs of my conviction that the really essential nationalism in music lies in the creative art work itself. It is part of its essence just as much as its musical construction, and if the interpreting artist has the musical, emotional and intellectual gifts necessary to give an adequate performance of a work in other ways the national quality of it will also come to life because it lies in the music itself.

The composer has, to a great extent at least, done the national work for the interpreter by the way in which he has written. I will admit that this theory seems to me to prove itself most convincingly in music and in artists of the highest type, from the point of view of developed art. The lower one goes in the scale, the more do national differences become apparent, because the gifts employed are narrower. Finally, we come to the soil, the music of folklore.

Birthplace Immaterial.

IMPORTANT as it is fundamentally, the executant of such music has a complete ignorance of other forms, which would preclude his accomplishing anything outside of his own music. The American Negro and the Hungarian peasant could scarcely, in the interpretation of their respective music, exchange roles with success. But they really cannot come under the head of artists of the type I am discussing.

The more highly gifted and deeply developed an artist is the broader becomes his imaginative and intellectual approach to music and, given the mastery of means which enables him successfully to solve the musical and technical problems of interpreting a work, there seems to be little reason why an artist of this type cannot get as near to the inner national spirit of a composer as any artist can—quite regardless of where he was born.

Concerts and Radio.

IN general, while one is glad to hear Mr. Toscanini conduct Respighi's "Pini di Roma," one would not like to limit his repertory to Italian works only. Is it thinkable to confine Mr. Casals' great art within the boundaries of Spanish literature for the 'cello? If not, then let us apply a broader conviction on this subject to our way of listening to artists and banish the prejudice which may be created by a wrong attitude toward nationalism in the interpretation of music.

Impelled by a perhaps naive idea that the most valuable function of a writer on music is to throw what light he or she can on the subject for the benefit of those interested in reading such articles, rather than to teach them what they should not enjoy—particularly after a performance is over—I should like to remind my readers that a musical performance is very like the radio. A crude analogy but one easily understood today. If the receiving apparatus is not tuned in, no message can reach it.

Preconceived Ideas.

THE greatest "static" which destroys communication in a musical performance is prejudice—a preconceived idea. That is my chief reason for being an enemy of criticism by comparison. If a preconceived idea stands between you and the performance it creates a thick atmosphere difficult for the artistic message to penetrate. The proverbial severity of professional musical criticism in New York has undoubtedly played an important part in upholding a high standard. It has been one of the things to make a New York success mean something worth while.

But if the layman is inspired by it to indulge freely in critical generalities without the knowledge or the experience to justify them, the proceeding is apt to result chiefly in disaster to his own capacity for enjoyment. "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing."

I once heard a lady coming from a symphony concert say: "That was a very poor concert. I quite agree with So-and-so (boldly misquoting an absent and defenseless critic) that Mr. X (mentioning the conductor of the concert) does not have what I would call a good German orchestration."

To which her male companion replied: "I don't know what the devil a German orchestration is, but I liked the concert." I think he had the advantage.

"ALEKO" PROVES A BOYISH INDISCRETION OF RACHMANINOFF'S

poser knew his. Pushkin's poetry, which, I understand, is very beautiful, counted for nothing last night, and the dramatic shell one witnessed seemed extremely old-fashioned and naive.

Has Byronic Complex.

THE story is obviously colored by the Byronic complex rampant in all Europe at that period. "Aleko" is the Russian Byron. He is "Manfred," "Childe Harold," the "Giaour" and other rebellious misanthropic personifications of Byron dressed up in kaftan and Russian boots. He is a solitary youth, a rebel against convention, and the program adds, inflamed with passion—a combination of all the Byronic ingredients which so intrigued the English ladies of the time of the Prince Regent.

To ease his burdened soul he goes to the gypsies and, of course, loves one and is loved for a while in return. After a while the gypsy deserts him for a male gypsy and Aleko kills them both. This done, he is left again like Othello, without an occupation, and roams the steppes in the same pessimistic frame of mind as when he first left home.

The "Fountain of Bakhchi-Sarai" followed "Aleko" and proved to be a pretty tale about a legendary Crimean Khan, a terrible potentate who so loved his Polish captive, the Princess Maria, that he completely neglected his wife, Zarema. This indignant and unhappy spouse frightens the Polish girl to death and is herself thrown into the local stream, over which the terrible Khan erects a marble fountain where he repairs frequently to shed tears.

Poor Singing, Fine Acting.

THE final spectacle, "Cleopatra," is probably one of the earliest stories illustrating the inordinate amorous appetite of the famous Egyptian. The victim of her temporary favors is required to pay for his evening with his life. Three much differentiated gentlemen are chosen, and the scene ends as the first one, a Roman soldier, steps up.

The Russians exhibited their familiar characteristics in the "Love and Death" trilogy. The singing, as usual, was generally trying, and the action was vivid and passionate. The "Cleopatra" scene seemed to me the most successful of the three, because, for a long time after the rise of the curtain, there was no singing at all, the people on the stage comporting themselves very much in the manner of the Diaghileff Russian ballet of blessed memory. But suddenly Cleopatra broke into song or speech, I couldn't quite make out which, and the illusion was entirely gone.

O'Neill Play in Rehearsal.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—A new play, described as "unusual," by Eugene O'Neill, is making ready at the Greenwich Village Theater for production on Jan. 25. Its title is "The Great God Brown."

Strauss Tacks Moral Upon Till's Waggeries

By HARRY R. BURKE.

ALMOST 500 years before the "milking" of the Jack Daniel warehouse, a poet of France, who was also a cutpurse of Paris, discovered a method of substituting plain water for the good Baigneux wine purveyed by the landlord of the Fir Apple Inn, who later suffered also the loss of 14 hogsheads of the white wine of Aulis through the merry theft of that same Francois Villon.

Nor was this all of Villon's errancy. Through life he went sinning and singing. He lived "more merrily than most" in youth, as he has said. By a thousand tricks he cozened worthy burgesses or phlegmatic landlords out of food, drink and cash. Rake, glutton, spendthrift, drunkard, gambler—he had most vices known to man, and with them genius.

Diligent in Swindling.

CONCERNING the early years of Francois Villon there grew up a collection of anecdotes in verse called "Repues franches," or "Free Feeds," of which he was hero and not author. He was the "nursing mother of those who had no money, and in swindling before and behind he was a most diligent man," chant the songs. Born in 1431, he was condemned to death in 1460 as "an incorrigible thief, pickpocket, marauder and sacreligious scoundrel." Yet he escaped the gallows then—and lived to write some of the most beautiful verses in literature.

A similar hero is prototype for "Till Eulenspiegel," whose "Merry Pranks," told in music after "the old-fashioned, waggish manner" by Dr. Richard Strauss, reappear this week on the regular program of the Symphony Orchestra. In fact, as John Payne observes in a monograph accompanying his translation of the poet, "many of the traditional stories of Till Eulenspiegel's rogueries are founded on Villon's exploits."

Till a Historical Personage.

THE traditional Till dates further back than that. His source was Teutonic, but he appears as one familiar with other lands, and rises to the height of a national hero in Flanders. That such a person actually lived seems unquestionable to Kenneth R. H. Mackenzie, fellow of the English Society of Antiquaries.

The name Eulenspiegel—in English Howleglas, in French Ulespeigle, in Flemish Ulenspeigel—derives from the owl and glass which are depicted in a portrait of Till appearing in an early French edition of the tales. Mention of him occurs in Saxony as early as 1337. A widow of Brunswick is supposed to have been his mother. At Mollen is a gravestone purporting to mark his burial place; and a chronicle, attributed to the year 1486, describes the ravages of the Black Death at Braunschweig in 1350, and records that "thereof died Ulenspeygel at Mollen among the Gheyseler brethren."

On the tombstone is an engraving of the rogue, with owl and glass. The date is 1350, and the legend reads: "Tyle Ulenspegel lies here underburied; mark well and think thereover what I have been; who passeth by may to me become alike."

Hero of de Coster's Epic.

AN old English edition of about 1528 or 1530 pictures the knave with a pitchfork, in a Bailiff's hands and before the King. The title of the book runs: "Here beginneth a merye jest of a man that was called Howleglas and of many mervaylous thynges and jestes that he dyd in his lyfe

LAST WEEK OF GRAND OPERA IN CHICAGO, TROUPE TO TOUR

Itinerary Includes Boston and Eastern Cities: Ten Days in Miami, Fla.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—The coming week will be the twelfth and last of the current season of the Chicago Civic Opera Co. Two hours after the final performance a week from tonight, the company will be en route for Boston on its annual tour, which will extend through nine Eastern cities down to Miami, Fla., where a 10-day engagement has been underwritten.

At the matinee of the final day here, Mary Garden will sing the leading role of "Resurrection." At the valedictory performance that evening Florence Macbeth and Tito Schipa will appear in "Lucia di Lammermoor."

Lehar Operetta in Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 16.—Franz Lehar's operetta, in which Geraldine Farrar was to have sung, opened here at the Playhouse Monday night. Grace La Rue and Roy Atwell have the leads. If successful, it will be taken East next season. The name has been changed from "The Love Spell" to "The Love Call."

JACOB BEN AMI DIRECTING PLAY FOR THEATER GUILD

First Work for English-Speaking Stage: Former Experience in Yiddish Productions.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Jacob Ben Ami, well known as an actor, is doing his first piece of direction for the English-speaking stage in Franz Werfel's "Goat Song," now in rehearsal for the Theater Guild. However, Ben Ami has staged five plays for the Yiddish Art Theater of New York.

Lee Simonson has designed 90 costumes and five sets for the production. In the cast will be Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne, Blanche Yurka, George Gaul, Dwight Frye, Albert Bruning, Herbert Yost, William Ingersoll and Erskine Sanford.

SCRIABIN IN A COSSACK SHOW

Russian Composer Directs Orchestra Without Using a Baton.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Alexander Scriabin, son of the celebrated Russian composer, is leading the orchestra at Hollandhall, where many Russians who held considerable rank under the old regime are putting on a Cossack show. He uses no baton, but indicates his desires with his fingers.

Scriabin is a composer, like his father. He is about 40 years old and became a professional musician only after the Russian revolution.

Strauss Tacks Moral Upon Till's Waggeries

in Eastland and in many other places."

Dr. Thomas Murner, a Franciscan friar, is believed to have been the author of the original chronicle of Eulenspiegel's adventures, which was first printed in 1519. Murner's work was translated into French, Dutch, Danish, English, Polish and Hebrew; and between 1519 and 1538 some 105 editions are recorded. Thomas Carlyle wrote that "to few mortals has it been granted to earn such a universal place in history as Tyll."

In Charles de Coster's "The Legend of Tyl Ulenspeigel" he develops into an epical hero, embodying the unbeaten spirit of Flanders in its grapple with Philip of Spain. De Coster wrote a Rabelaisian tale, which is none the less charming or piously patriotic.

Strauss Has Moral Ending.

OF the adventures of Till as recounted in music by Strauss, one finds no hint either in De Coster or in reprints of the early English version. Strauss makes his hero ride through the market-place amid a clatter of pots and pans, as he lashes out at the fleeing women with his whip; he dons the stolen garb of a priest and delivers a burlesque sermon; he pleads in vain with a beautiful maid whose scorn sends him away in high dudgeon; he mocks at the pundits and philistines; and at last is hauled before the court, condemned and left to dance on air, with the hangman's work well done and morality upheld.

All this, maugre the head of Dr. Strauss, has little enough to do with the "old-fashioned roguish manner" of a medieval tale. There was a curious belief in those days that the good God was sometimes good enough to forgive even the unworthy, whose frailties of the flesh He well understood, and to forgive them out of nothing more than simple lovingkindness. As our concept of Heaven has always molded our notions of justice, in the ancient story Till manages to outwit the hangman and escapes—as Villon did in 1460. Neither the majesty of Heaven, the dignity of the state nor the lustihood of man seems to have suffered thereby.

Till, as he informed his light-o'-love in De Coster's epic, "was the son that Chance one day begat on High Adventure." That was boasting, for the strains of Till's blood were base. He began life by being baptized three times in one day. The midwife dropped him in the mud as she returned from the christening, and had to wash him off with warm water when she got him home.

Catalogue of Rogueries.

WHEN he grew up, a priest hired him as parish clerk, but his jests were a scandal to the congregation, not to mention the good curate. Having set the devout ones by the ears with his pranks at a mystery play, Till "went his way out of the village and came there no more."

He took a contract to rid a hospital of all its halt and lame, and did so with a trick whereby the unfortunates were robbed of refuge to his profit. He agreed to paint the portraits of the ancestors of the Earl of Marcheborough, left the walls bare, and protested that all those who could not see the likenesses were base-born.

How he won cloth and money of a farmer by his plot with a "Shottish priest and another knave"; how he fed the blind men at the expense of the curate of Hanover, and how he scared his landlord with the carcass of a dead wolf—all these anecdotes have a smack of waggish roguery. Their broad, irreverent and very human mirth is characteristic of the record which the medieval ages have left of their humor as carved in the stones of their cathedrals.

A Pranksome Deathbed.

NOR was it necessary for all this that Till should dance on air. He died in his bed, according to the English version, and managed to get more fun out of dying than most do from living.

"In the meantime," it is related, "waxed Howlegs sycker and sycker. Then he called for ye lordes to make his testamente. And when they were come he gave his grodes in iii partes. One parte to his kynsfolke, another to his lordes of Molen, and the other to the parson of Molen, whensoever he died. And he asked to be buried in christen men's buriall, and to synge for his soule, Placebo and Dirig, with masses and other good servyces, after the custome and usans."

He showed them a chest wherein he said were his goods, and the four keys to the chest he apportioned among them. Then he died and had his "chrisen men's buriall"—the while, one imagines, smiling in his winding sheet. For when they opened the treasure chest, there was naught but stones within.

These medieval personages were quite blithely unregenerate.

"SEVENTEEN" SUFFERS FINAL BLOW—IT'S A MUSICAL COMEDY NOW the role of Oswald played by Glenn Hunter.

"Hedda Gabler" is to be given by the Actors' Theater with a notable cast that includes Frank Conroy, Louis Calhern, Dudley Digges, Patricia Collinge and Beverly Sitgreaves. It should be ready week after next.

Two Roles for Miss Le Gallienne.

"THE MASTER BUILDER" has been jogging along for some weeks past, produced by the dauntless Eva Le Gallienne with herself in the role first played in New York by Nazimova, who was an inscrutable member of Miss Le Gallienne's first audience. Miss Le Gallienne, who was not afraid to go to Paris last summer and play Jeanne d'Arc for the astonished French at her own expense, would, of course, be unabashed by the mere prospect of tackling two Ibsen heroines at once. So, for matinee performances during the run of "The Master Builder," she is calmly rehearsing "John Gabriel Borkman," a magnificent tragedy almost unknown to the playgoers of this country.

Finally, an interesting group of actors is furtively rehearsing "Little Eyolf," an Ibsen play which has not been seen in this town since the opening of a playhouse then known boldly as Nazimova's Thirty ninth Street Theater. That was in the spring of 1910.

The impending 'Little Eyolf" will enlist the services of Clare Eames, John Cromwell, Margalo Gillmore and Uspenskaya. Uspenskaya is one of the members of the Moscow Art Theater who cast in her lot with America when that magnificent troupe sailed back to Russia a year ago. Those who saw her as the governess in "The Cherry Orchard" will guess what an inspired stroke of casting was her selection to play the alarming rat-woman in "Little Eyolf."

Roland Young as Producer.

THIS production, which is for matinees only, will introduce a new director to the American theater. His name is Roland Young. Since he decided not to be an architect after all, this young Englishman has turned his restless hand to sundry trades. He is best known, of course, as an actor, and is now prospering with Ina Claire in the entertaining and immensely successful Lonsdale comedy, "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney."

Then he has published some prose, a good deal of verse and no end of devastating cartoons. For all I know, he has also done umbrella mending and a little plain sewing. But my records disclose no previous attempt of his to direct a play. The event is the more interesting to me because of my old suspicion that he could do that better than anything else.

"The Master Builder," "John Gabriel Borkman," "Little Eyolf" and "Hedda Gabler"—these four, then, are likely to compete with one another in February. And perhaps "Ghosts" will follow in the spring. If the Tyler plan falls through, I could bear up splendidly if only I were consoled by the news that it would be staged well with another cast. For the purpose, I nominate Margaret Anglin and Richard Bird.

"DOCTRINE" OF PLAY MAY RANK ITS ART AS SANE OR BARBAROUS

defray the exhibition of a peccant religious, unless she were also plied savagely with calamity on calamity. As a matter of fact, the production, in deference to this protest or that, has been steadily revised on tour, and has grown more and more orthodox, incoherent and saddistic.

And is the plot, as it now stands, what Prof. Parks terms "a real story?" Is what happens to the nun, as he says, "exactly what would happen?" She is presented at first as a person of no common initiative and daring; and suddenly is debased into a creature as passive and inanimate as a marionette. Is there actuality, to say nothing of dramatic effectiveness in a series of tragic adventures unrelieved, after the incident of the Knight, by the slightest contrast of happiness?

Does the elopement of a nun from a convent plausibly entail the murder of Knights, Counts and Princes, the insanity of monarchs, the overthrow of empires and the outbreak of revolutions? Not necessarily, except in a phantasmagoria. There was, for instance, Sister Katharina von Bora, who left a nunnery, married an excommunicated priest named Martin Luther, and lived ever after as an exemplary wife and mother.

Men's Club to Give Dinner.

A community and good fellowship dinner for men of the Cabanne district will be given by the Men's Club of the Episcopal Church of Ascension, Cates at Goodfellow avenues, Tuesday evening at 6:30. Ben Scovell, dramatic reader, will give one of the scenes of "The Sign of the Cross."

"NEW BROOMS," WITH FRANK CRAVEN, AND AGAIN "ROSE-MARIE"

New England by Martha Stanley, will be given this week at the Empress by the Woodward Players. The scene is a fishing hamlet in the Portuguese colony of the Cape Cod coast, and the story deals with the rivalry of an impetuous Latin suitor and a stolid, inarticulate Yankee Sheriff for the hand of a fair widow.

Cologne Appoints 12 Hostesses.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—Twelve of the most attractive women in Cologne have been appointed municipal hostesses, their duty being to see that foreign visitors of note enjoy their stay in the city. When he was twitted on his selection of guides, who, it was said, would distract the attention of men visitors from the historical beauties of the city, the Burgomaster replied that although the hostesses are undoubtedly beautiful they are neither dumb nor frivolous. Some of them speak seven languages, he said, while all speak at least English, French and Italian in addition to German. They have been trained in a school for hostesses. The Burgomaster admitted that most of them were widows.

BUILDING HEALTH SINCE 1873

The human system demands certain foods rich in health-building vitamins to assure health and normal growth.

Eminent scientists agree that cod-liver oil is one of the greatest forms of concentrated medicinal food ever discovered.

Scott's Emulsion contains cod-liver oil, also glycerine and hypophosphites of lime and soda, a combination that seldom fails to bring the desired result. Millions have successfully used this vital food-tonic since 1873. It is a creamy, white, easily taken health-builder—just what is needed for those who are run-down.

You will never regret your having taken Scott's Emulsion of invigorating cod-liver oil yourself or having given it to your child.

Don't Neglect That Stubborn Hacking Cough

It is not only dangerous but entirely unnecessary to let a persistent, hacking cough rob you of sleep and strength. For through a very simple treatment you can get almost instant relief, and very often break the most stubborn cough completely in 24 hours.

This treatment is based on the famous prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take one teaspoonful at bed-time and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of night coughing. So the coughing quickly ceases and you sleep right through undisturbed.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, sore throat, hoarseness, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children as well as grown-ups—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for Mothers Ignored in Vaccination.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Many London moths are objecting to a ruling by officials of the Health Department that children may not be vaccinated against smallpox without written permission from the male parent. While women thought they had obtained equal rights with their husbands over their children, they find that the health officials do not share that view, and still recognize the man as head of the house and sole-master of the children.

SUFFRAGE A TRANQUIL MOVEMENT IN FRANCE

Heckling of Lawmakers Would Work Injury to Nation, Leader Says.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—French suffragists, with a method as chic as French milliners, are putting new touches to the technique of equal suffrage campaigning. Petting, not picketing, summarizes the policy of the feminists, although they see their long expected enfranchisement repeatedly postponed in the Senate by the press of the financial difficulties of the country.

If, as they hope, French women are added to the 175,000,000 voting women of the world as soon as a budget is finally balanced and the franc well on its way to stabilization, they will have conducted the most tranquil suffrage campaign that the world has seen. This despite the Frenchman's reputation for highly explosive temperament and volubility.

"This is no war of the sexes," said Mme. Leon Brunschvicg, president of the French Union of the International Suffrage Alliance, to the Associated Press. "To heckle, aggravate and irritate the lawmakers now, when they are desperately striving to save the country from bankruptcy would not only injure the cause of suffrage, but would injure France."

Suffrage leaders until a short time ago believed that victory was within their grasp. It only remained for the Senate to ratify a bill granting women equal suffrage, a bill already passed by the Chamber of Deputies in 1919, when M. Briand enthusiastically supported it.

Although there were certain difficulties to be overcome in the form of a bloc of Senators whom Mme. Maria Verone, president of the French League for Women's Rights, characterized as "a menace to reform in France," the possibility for victory still was hopeful until ministries started to crash. Until finances are settled, Mme. Verone said, French women have no hope of obtaining the vote.

"So Different"

MISS MOLLY FEINER.

"I've never known such real powder satisfaction," says pretty Miss Mollie Feiner, of 984 Simpson St., New York City, "as I've found in using the delightful Black and White Face Powder. It's so distinctive in its delicate 'Incense of Flowers' perfume, and in its soft, fineness of texture which keeps it from coarsening or enlarging the pores. It's so different, too, in the way it stays on so smoothly for hours, and never looks pasty or floury."

You, too, can be sure of perfect satisfaction if you'll use this daintily fragranced Black and White "Incense of Flowers" Face Powder, which comes in white, flesh and brunette tints, at 50c a package.

Best results come from using Black and White Skin Soap along with the Black and White Beauty Creations.

How do you value environment?

ARE you one of the men or women who seek the better kind of surroundings instinctively? Are you one who shrinks from anything which is haphazard—anything insecure—anything which does not promise the fullest measure of health, the most permanent beauty and contentment for your home and your family?

Then you will be interested in Clewiston—for here is the master work of community planners. Here, in the making, is a city beautiful—on the shores of a great inland sea—with a climate of eternal summer—and into it today are being built essentials of health and happiness, contentment and prosperity.

Without the limit of precedent—without the restriction of political ties—community planners and builders of the foremost rank are creating here what is destined to be not only one of Florida's great cities but also one of its most beautiful and most modern.

John Nolen, internationally famous community planner, has laid out Clewiston with the skill and the foresight that has put him in the front rank of his profession.

Collaborating are Olmsted Brothers, America's foremost landscape architects—designers of Central Park (New York City); the famous Biltmore Estates; Palos Verdes (California); Seattle and San Diego Fair Grounds; Lincoln Memorial Park (Washington, D. C.)

Dwight James Baum—supervising architect for Syracuse University, Sarasota, Fla., Temple Terrace, Fla., and the designer of Sarasota County Court House, Venetian Palace for Mr. John Ringling at Sarasota and other public and private buildings from Canada to Florida—is also the supervising architect for Clewiston, to insure its present day and future wholesomeness and beauty.

Link these men and the indisputable value of their work with the present day prices of Clewiston property—and you cannot doubt its worth—nor the opportunity which Clewiston affords in the way of future enhancement of values—nor yet its ideal environment for you and your family from the standpoints of health, happiness and prosperity.

Basic Community Building Forces

Back of Clewiston are four basic community building forces combining to assure a steady growth and increasing wealth.

1. An ideal climate and natural healthy environment, so necessary to the prosperity and social upbuilding of any community.
2. Transportation facilities. Clewiston enjoys rail transportation with Atlantic Coast Line Railroad and will have water connections through canals and river to both ocean and gulf. It is now being connected with both coasts at Ft. Myers and Palm Beach by the new Cross State Highway, expected to be finished early in 1926.
3. Agricultural wealth — super-production in all seasons of the fruits, vegetables and cereals of the temperate zone and in due season of subtropical products, oranges, lemons, nuts. And sugar cane soil equal to the richest in the world.
4. Industrial activity—with raw materials right at the door, the native products of the surrounding soil. The sugar mill and other industries contemplated for Clewiston should create a circulation of wealth, a basis for business and professional activity—the dawn of industrial Florida.

The combination of these four great elements offers a firm basis for the prediction that Clewiston will become one of the greatest cities of Florida. Send for map showing railways, highways and canals.

Gray Hair Is Easily Darkened

Tells How She Did It With a Home-Made Remedy.

Mrs. E. H. Boots, a well-known resident of Buchanan County, Ia., who darkened her gray hair, made the following statement:

"Anyone can darken their gray or faded hair, and look twenty years younger with this simple remedy, which they can mix at home. To half a pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, one small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently. It does not color the scalp, is not greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray haired person look twenty years younger."

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga.

RED CROSS CHAPTER AIDING 1000 VETERANS

December Report Also Shows 20 Victims of Tornado Still Being Assisted.

Service to almost 1000 disabled war veterans and their families and community service, which ranges from free dental treatments of public school children to teaching business women life-saving and water-safety methods, are enumerated in the report of the activities of the St. Louis Chapter, American Red Cross, in the December statement of P. H. Byrns, executive secretary of the Chapter, issued yesterday.

Aid to veterans includes financial relief to families while the men are in the Government hospital, assistance to tubercular veterans and families in adjusting health and family problems detrimental to the recovery of the patients, and assistance in the treatment and adjustment of neuro-psychiatric veterans.

Technical assistance to the families of deceased veterans in procuring pensions, and assistance to both able-bodied and disabled veterans in obtaining other Government benefits are also reported.

Beginning the first of this month, the St. Louis Chapter has widened its work for the war veterans' families by investigating, on request of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, the conditions of orphans of veterans to see that they are enjoying normal home life and are happy in their environments.

Dental clinics in three public schools, financed by the Red Cross Chapter, and George A. Meyer, gave 1193 free treatments last month to children. A class in first aid was held for Girl Scout leaders, and weekly classes to teach live-saving were conducted by Red Cross experts in the Y. W. C. A. pool. Red Cross volunteers packed 450 Christmas gift boxes which were distributed by the chapter to veterans in several hospitals.

The December report also showed that the Red Cross Chapter is still aiding victims of the Murphysboro tornado of last spring. Twenty victims of that disaster were assisted to medical treatment here during the month. These were men in whom disease had developed as a result of exposure and accident during the storm.

CHICAGO AUTO TOLL TOPS WAR ACTIVITIES

Motor Vehicles More a Menace Than Disease, Crime or Murder.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—The automobile accident is a far greater menace to the life and health in Illinois than disease, crime, murder, war or industrial accident, declares Robert S. Marx, former Cincinnati Judge, in a review of the automobile accidents in Illinois in 1925.

Compulsory liability insurance for every motorist is advocated by Judge Mix, to stop the increase in motor accidents and provide compensation for pedestrians injured or killed.

"More than 780 people were killed outright by automobiles in Chicago during 1925," says Marx, "and unless something fundamental is done at once, the number who will be killed in 1926 will be far greater, because of the ratio of deaths has increased every year with the increasing number of automobiles.

"The number of persons seriously injured by automobiles in Chicago alone, in 1925, exceeds 23,000.

"The total number of fatal industrial accidents in Illinois reported by the Industrial Commission was 675. This means that more people are being killed every year by automobiles in Chicago alone than were killed in all the mines, factories and workshops of Illinois as a result of industrial accident. In fact more people are killed and injured annually by automobiles in Chicago alone than Chicago lost in the World War."

Strong Man Weighs Only 135.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 16.—A former barber from Essen, weighing only 135 pounds, is astonishing Berlin audiences by strong man feats which recall Sandow and Breitbart in their palmiest days. He is Karl Gorris, 21 years old. Among his stunts are driving nails through three half-inch planks with his bare hands; bending iron bars into fantastic shapes and biting through wood. Riding in a truck he pulls a trailer containing 16 men by a chain gripped in his teeth.

IF BACK HURTS FLUSH KIDNEYS

Drink Plenty Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally

To much rich food forms acids which excite and overwork the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's waste, begin drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders.

By all means, drink lots of good water every day.

Boy Scouts and Their Activities

The following scouts spent five hours each at headquarters recently, aiding in mailing the paper: From Troop 27, Ed Rosenauer; Troop 91, Herbert Helmberger, James Burns, Adolph Schlosstein, and Alex Sisk; Troop 156, Stanley Kuciejezyk and Eddie Bialcyak; Troop 158, Gerald Hildebrant; Troop 183, John Krievy, James Krievy, Armand Mack and Henry Buchold; Troop 195, Fred Matter and Norman Hertner; Troop 206, Paul Whitter.

An examination of candidates for first-class in scoutcraft will be held at Webster Groves High School next Tuesday. Scouts taking the tests must have their certification card.

North District.

At the first annual North Star banquet last Monday night the deputy commissioners of the North District agreed to devote all the time possible to the Roundup. Each commissioner is pledged to call upon every troop in his region at least three times befre the circus, in order to help them secure their quota.

Troop 1 entertained the North District scout leaders at the Arlington M. E. Church last Wednesday. Women members of the church prepared and served a supper. Scouts acted as a reception committee and as wrap-checkers. Scout Commissioner H. D. McBride was toastmaster and Chief Scout Executive Earle Beckman the chief speaker. Plans for the Roundup and Circus were outlined and accepted. D. N. Miller entertained with an exhibition of magic.

Troop 42 has worked out a scheme for distributing the circus tickets. Over a month ago the scouts began listing prospective purchasers until now each boy has a list of 10 persons who have promised to buy as soon as the tickets are ready.

Troop 56 is the only troop that has qualified for points in the North District flag contest. They have gone over their quota.

Troop 147 hiked to the Chain of Rocks last Sunday, and visited the Waterworks. The rest of the day was spent studying glacial deposit at the foot of the bluff west of the park, and in passing tests. Two more mavericks have been added to the troop—Howard Jones Jr. and John Pfeiffer.

At an investiture ceremony of Troop 220 last week, a tenderfoot pin was presented by Troop Committeeman J. E. Reford to Scout Earl Walls, the first maverick recruited for the roundup.

Scout Charles Spirz administered first aid to Scout Harry Tungate when the latter fractured his arm in a fall a week ago Friday, and stayed by him until he could be taken to a doctor.

South District.

Deputy Commissioner J. E. Allen was operated upon for appendicitis last Monday at the Alexian Brothers' Hospital. He is now convalescing and will be able to receive visitors this week.

L. J. Sexton, principal of the Mason School, has been appointed deputy commissioner in the South District. He will have under him troops 43, 158, 218 and two others which are now being formed.

The next district meeting will be held next Saturday at the Missouri School for the Blind, 3815 Magnolia avenue. Scoutmaster D. M. Sallee of troop 229 will act as scoutmaster for this meeting. At a dinner held a week ago Saturday at the Oak Hill Presbyterian Church, Scout Executive Beckman spoke on the roundup and circus. The Ladies' Aid Society served the dinner, and troop 63 entertained with a stunt. Scoutmaster Arters of troop 139 played a piano selection.

Troops 160 and 165 are tied in the contest for the South District flag.

The new troop committee of troop 14, composed of E. F. Bebb Abegg, H. B. Dickey, William Haarstick, H. G. Rapp and George Fox, held its first meeting at the home of Scoutmaster F. J. Fischang last Monday. They pledged four Boys' Life subscriptions. Mr. Abegg was appointed assistant scoutmaster.

While troop 27 was returning from a hike to Creve Coeur Saturday week, they performed a good turn in letting loose a dog caught in a steel trap. The scoutmaster, a committeeman and 14 scouts were on the hike.

Troop 61 is the first troop in the South District to complete its first class quota, two scouts having passed their last tests.

Scoutmaster A. C. Rivoire of Troop 57 underwent an operation at the Veterans' Bureau Hospital recently.

Troop 76 has signed up for nine scouts to qualify for the first-class achievement. In order to prepare these scouts, three have been assigned to the Senior Patrol Leader, three to the Scribe and three to the Assistant Scoutmaster.

Troop 81 was presented with a new American flag and a troop flag by the Fathers and Mothers' Club, at the Forest Park University Thursday evening.

West District.

Sixty-five members attended the Diamond W. meeting at the Pilgrim Congregational Church last Monday night. Scoutmaster Lindsley demonstrated first aid and Chief Executive Beckman spoke on scouting and the roundup. Mrs. E. N. Birge, wife of the District Commissioner, served supper.

Scoutmaster Fichtel of Troop 59 entertained the troop committee and their families at his home last week.

Scoutmaster Fichtel attended the Diamond W. meeting, accompanied by the Assistant Scoutmaster and five troop committeemen. Scoutmaster Fichtel announced that the troop will attempt to increase its enrollment from fifty to ninety scouts.

Suburban District.

The inspection trophy, awarded quarterly to the Webster Groves troop making the best appearance at formal inspection, has again been won by Troop 9, Webster Groves. This troop has held the cup continuously since it was placed in competition in the fall of 1924. Webster Groves Troops 1, 6 and 15 also made excellent showings. The cup will be contested for again in March.

Troop 6, Webster, went on a hike yesterday to secure material for a lean-to. Each patrol will construct a lean-to, and the best type will be chosen for display at the Circus.

A. W. Veazey has become scoutmaster of Troop 1, Brentwood, succeeding former Scoutmaster S. C. Reaves, now field executive of the West District. Mr. Veazey has served as assistant scoutmaster for the past three years.

An additional meeting place has been secured in the South District for the Harmonica Band which will play at the circus. The band will meet at the Francis home every Wednesday afternoon from 3:45 to 5 p. m., and every Saturday morning from 8:45 to 10 a. m., but the Compton Hill Church has also been secured for practice for scouts unable to attend at the firfst meeting. Practice will be held from 5 to 6 p. m. every Wednesday, and from 10:15 to 11:30 a. m. every Saturday.

Sessions of the Examining Board will be held at Webster Groves High School, Yeatman High, McKinley Intermediate and Soldan High Schools at 7:30 p. m. next Tuesday. All scouts appearing must have their certification card.

A large number of scouts attended the classes in cooking and nature study at Forest Park Thursday afternoon. Dr. Ray Anderson of Shaw's Garden gave instruction in the identification of trees in winter by bark, buds and other characteristics. Scoutmaster Thompson of Troop 141 led the class in cooking, later allowing scouts to pass the test by making a hunter's stew and twist o a stick. The City Recreational Department furnished firewood.

First-Class Scout Martin Kelly, Troop 5, Webster Grobes, was the first scout to join the Campers' Saving Club this year. He signed up for one section in the main camp and two in the Rangers. Second-Class Scout Paul Hanlon, Webster Groves 15, was the second to join.

The Campers' Saving Club is a plan similar to the Christmas clubs conducted by banks. Each boy who joins is given a savings bank, which he brings to headquarters once a month to be emptied. The money is credited to his account for the summer camp at Irondale.

LLOYD GEORGE AND DAUGHTER

LONDON, Jan. 16.—David Lloyd George's quick abandonment of his vacation under sunny Mediterranean skies to hasten to the bedside of Miss Megan, his favorite child, who is now convalescing from an appendicitis operation, is only another example of the close attachment between the two. The former Premier and his youngest and only unmarried daughter are almost inseparable companions.

An American army officer here knows, to his embarrassment, of Miss Megan's constancy to her father. The young Major met her at a dance and received permission to call her on the telephone. He boasted of this to friends, but when he telephoned, Megan was busy with her father. Again he phoned: she was still busy. Every day for a week he rang her up, his brother officers watching his efforts with growing smiles. Finally, like a good soldier, he admitted defeat, and retired from the field. What chance, after all, had a mere Major against Lloyd George?

Medical News Service of St. Louis Tuberculosis Society

No. 14—Home Versus Sanitarium in the Treatment of Tuberculosis.

THIS is the fourteenth of a series of articles on matters pertaining to tuberculosis which are being prepared by medical experts and distributed among St. Louis physicians by the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis. The others will be sent out each week, and will contain the latest medical information on the subject.

In the treatment of tuberculosis, it has been recognized that rest, especially in bed, is by far the most important aid. Whether to take this rest in bed, or in the sanatorium is the problem. The value of the sanatorium lies in the fact that patients learn how to take care of themselves, and how to protect others and are trained in the different methods that are used in the treatment of tuberculosis. The first six weeks in bed are often the greatest value, especially in the fever cases. It is surprising how quickly the temperature will drop after a few weeks rest in bed, and with this the patient feels so much better, and is willing to take the treatment necessary for the cure of his disease. There is also a great advantage in seeing other patients, and to note their progress and also their patience. In the sanatorium they are frequently taught occupational therapy, and thus they learn how to pass the time. Another important advantage is that they soon learn to obey orders and regulations that they would not do in their homes.

The home treatment should be a post-graduate method of recuperating. It has been the experience of most physicians who do tuberculosis work that this preliminary training in the sanatorium has done more to help cure tuberculosis than any other. The length of time necessary to remain in the sanatorium depends upon how much involvement there is in the lungs, also how well the patient reacts to the sanatorium.

It is unfortunate that there are not enough beds in most communities for this preliminary educational training, but wherever possible the patient should make every effort to obtain sanatorium treatment. The medical treatment of tuberculosis cases can best be handled where the physician sees the patient daily, and is able to make X-ray, tuberculin tests, examinations and cultures of sputum, etc.

Conclusions:

1. Every patient suffering with tuberculosis should have at least from three to six month's rest in a well equipped sanatorium.

2. The best medical and nursing care can only be obtained in a sanatorium.

3. Graduates of the sanatorium have the best chance for complete recovery.

4. Home treatment and care at best is a compromise.

5. The best home treatment is that which approaches nearest that of the sanatorium.

LEE AND JACKSON SERVICE

Confederate Societies to Join in Program Tuesday Night.

A public commemorative service in honor of the birthdays of Gens. Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson will be held Tuesday evening at Central Presbyterian Church, Delmar boulevard and Clara avenue, by all local chapters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, the Sons of Confederate Veterans, the Confederate Memorial and Historical Society and the Confederate Veterans' Association.

The program will include invocation by Chaplain Edward Card of the Confederate Veterans and an address on "Lee and Jackson," by the Rev. J. L. Fowle, pastor of Central Presbyterian Church. Several musical numbers will be rendered.

ART WORK OF CIZEK PUPILS TO BE EXHIBITED AT LIBRARY

Illustrates Children's Attempts at Self-Expression Without Formal Instruction.

A collection of paintings, sculpture, wood carvings, embroidery and other art works executed by children of the Cizek School of Vienna will be placed on view in the Delivery Hall of the Public Library tomorrow morning and will remain for three weeks. The collection comprises two and a half tons of materials.

The works are all wrought by children between the ages of 5 and 16 and represent their attempts at self-expression without the influence of instruction. The Cizek School does not teach art, but encourages the pupil to express his own ideas as best he can without guidance or models. This is done to discover and develop the pupil's own artistic resources.

More than 50 children attend the school on Saturdays and Sundays when free from the duties of their regular school work. Dr. Franz Cizek is the founder and director of the institution. The exhibit, which has been in this country for about two years and displayed in 28 large cities, is in the charge of Dr. Hans C. Kollar.

Women Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Countless girls and women now know how foolish and needless it is to "purge" and "physic" themselves to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, sallow skin, colds, or sour, gassy stomach.

They have found that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those heretofore chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement, but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate girl or woman. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

TWO BLIND GIRLS OF PARDEE AND THE LIGHT THAT CAME TO THEM AFTER LONG DARKNESS

Mayme and Fay Cook Had Moved Since Babyhood in a World of Deepening Shadows

Hope Was Held Out to Them at Last and They Came Down Out of the West Virginia Mountains to a Hospital, and on the Day Before Christmas Their Mother Stood at Her Door Listening—Would the Train, Coming Up Buffalo Creek, Bring Her Girls Home for Christmas, and Would They Come With Seeing Eyes?

A True Life Story From the Humble Home of a West Virginia Mining Camp Where Science Came to Work a Seeming Miracle.

By F. A. BEHYMER,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LOGAN, W. Va., Jan. 13.

LEANDER COOK'S widow stood at her door and listened. It was the day before Christmas. The noon train on the Logan branch was coming up Buffalo Creek. Her girls might be coming home. From babyhood they had been in darkness. Soon they would be coming back from the hospital and when they came it might be with seeing eyes. She prayed that it might be so. And she hoped that they would be coming home today. For tomorrow would be Christmas.

In a moment she would hear the engine's blast, around the hip of the mountain. If it signaled a stop at Pardee, it would mean, probably, that her girls were coming home. For not many passengers came to Pardee.

This mountain mother knew how to want. She had known little but want all her life. She had never wanted anything as she wanted this thing, that her girls might see. She had borne the hardness of her lot and had not complained, but another disappointment, such a disappointment, would be almost more than she could bear. She stood and listened.

* * * * *

When this woman was a girl, and a bride, nearly thirty years ago, the future was bright, as it always is to a bride. She was a mountain girl and a mountain man's wife, and her lot would be the lot of the mountain woman, mother of many children, as the mountain fashion is, and that was altogether as it should be and she was content.

Four Blind Children.

Her world was a few square miles of topsy-turvy, mountains and creeks, where Boone and Logan, Raleigh and Wyoming Counties meet. Leander Cook took her to a cabin near Bald Knob, on Pond Fork, and there they lived and Cook toiled tilling a few stony acres, "hiring" to the timber companies at a meager wage, digging coal when the railroad came pushing up Pond Fork and the mines were driven into the mountain sides. His wife did her part, bringing children into the world, caring for them in the poor way which was the best that she knew.

There was sorrow for her when her first girl was born, the sorrow which a mother knows when her child is doomed to darkness, but it was a sorrow which many mountain mothers must bear, the penalty which progeny must pay unto the third and fourth generation, and she bore it with the stoicism which was her inheritance from the generations that had known like sorrows.

To have borne one blind child was bad enough, but the time came when Leander Cook's wife was the mother of nine children, and four of them walked in a dimness which, with the passing of the years, would fade to darkness. That she knew, for it was told by the mountain women, mothers of blind children, that it came that way, fading from dimness to darkness. And there was no hope then. The doctors had not come into the mountains with their skill.

A World of Shadow.

Corbie, the first-born, and Mayme and Fay and Howard, born blind, or their babyhood blighted by the beginning of blindness. Not sudden, complete blindness, but creeping blindness, twilight and dim afterglow, deepening into night.

As young children they lived in a world of shadow, deeper than the shadow that crept across Pond Fork when the sun, mid-afternoon of a summer day, sank below Spruce Fork Ridge, and different, for, in the shadow where they lived their lives, outlines sometimes became outlandish and objects took on a grotesqueness which grew the more they strained their eyes seeking distinctness.

They could not go to school, for that would hasten the coming of the doom of complete darkness which would, without that, come all too soon. The other children went, and learned, and brought their learning home, and the children who were almost blind listened to the droning of the lessons and learned a little that way. For they were alert, more so, perhaps, than they would have been if they had not been handicapped, and eager to learn, and they sat around the fireplace at night, listening with heads perked aslant, learning that way their A B C's and the meaning of words, wondering why they could not read the printed page as Guy and Willie could, asking why and not understanding when they were told. Coming at last to accept their lot. Groping their way through a world that was always getting darker.

Fifteen years ago Leander Cook and his wife came to the parting of the ways. It may be that Mrs. Cook, burdened with four children who were blind or going blind, balked at bringing into the world other children that might be born blind or begin going blind in their babyhood. Anyway, they separated and Mrs. Cook did the best she could with the help of the growing children who could see. Having the help, too, in household tasks, of Corbie and Mayme and Fay, capable at such tasks though they had to feel their way.

Then, eight years ago, because word came that conditions were better on Buffalo Creek, where the Logan branch was being extended to Three Forks, Mrs. Cook led her brood up the Boone County slope of Spruce Fork Ridge and over the divide and down the Logan County slope, and found shelter in a coal company house at Pardee, just below Toney Fork, and lived there, her sons working in the mines, her daughters helping her as she washed for the families of the coal company officials. Mayme and Fay doing their share, for at such toil they could do their part without seeing.

Through the deepening darkness came no ray of hope. Tales did come trickling at last into the mountains that down at Huntington there were doctors who made the blind to see. Mayme Cook, most energetic of the Cook children despite her blindness, heard about it and for an instant hoped, but a hard little smile on her tragedy-stamped face drove the hope away. Such miracles were not for the Cook children of Pardee.

There was a woman who had been blind and had gone to the doctors and now she could see. She spoke to Mayme Cook about it and paid no attention to the girl's hard little smile, and spoke again, saying there was hope, and at last the girl listened, and the hard smile died away and hope was born.

It would take much money, though, for the operations and treatment and hospital care, and they had no money. They talked about it among their neighbors, up and down the creek. Some one suggested that maybe the doctors would not charge so much if they knew these girls' great need. Growing optimism brought what had seemed impossible within the range of probability. The interest of the mining company men at Lorado, down the creek, was enlisted. Finally, out of all the discussion, and the sympathy that grew with the discussion, came a plan. The neighbors of the Cooks and the men in the mines and the residents of Lorado would be asked to contribute.

Robert Hager, a relative of the Cooks, and Freeman Spears, the tipple boss, and Arthur Brown, the mine boss, went around, asking everybody to help, and a fund was collected, enough to pay for a preliminary operation and hospital care.

Then tragedy came to their help. Leander Cook had become a Deputy Sheriff at Bandytown, on West Creek, in Boone County. He went to arrest a man named Mayes, who refused to be arrested, and backed away and drew his weapon. Cook, with eyes as keen as his children's were dull, tried to shoot the weapon out of Mayes' hand and did shatter Mayes' trigger finger, but Mayes could shoot as well with another finger and they shot it out there at Bandytown, and both fell, each with three bullets in his body, and died.

Leander Cook, dead, was of more service to his blind children than Leander Cook, living. He owned a little timber land in Boone County. It was ordered sold, for the benefit of his children, so there was the prospect that after a while there would be a little more money which could be used to give sight to the blind, and they could, with greater assurance, go ahead with their plans.

It had been settled from the first that Mayme and Fay should first have the benefit of whatever the doctors could do. Corbie, who was older, and Howard would wait.

They were taken to the Hawes-Harple Hospital at Huntington and Dr. Charles Morris Hawes examined them. They listened, hope struggling with fear, for his verdict.

"You can be cured," he said. For it was not beyond a surgeon's skill to remove the congenital cataracts that had blinded them.

The preliminary work was done and, after a short stay in the hospital, the girls were sent back home, to return to the hospital when they were ready for the complete operation.

It was not until last month that some of the money from the sale of the land was available and plans were completed for the girls to go to the hospital for the test which would determine whether henceforth they would walk in darkness or in light.

Their mother and Aunt Sallie Cook, who lives on the mountain side above Pardee, went with them and Mrs. Cook stayed until after the operations had been performed and heard the surgeons say that the girls would probably see, and went back home to wait.

Waiting at home, worrying, wondering whether her girls would really have their sight, waiting on.

Now it was the day before Christmas and all forenoon as Mrs. Cook went about her work she was wishing that her girls might come home for Christmas. She would not have them come too soon, if it would affect their chances, but she could not keep from wishing.

Down at the Huntington hospital her girls were wishing too. Their dearest wish was that they might be back at home for Christmas. For days they questioned the doctors and nurses. The doctors, uncertain at first, concluded at the last that it would be safe for them to leave the hospital the day before Christmas.

Very early in the morning the Logan branch train started on its slow journey into the Blue Ridge mountains. All forenoon it dragged its winding way up the grades, coming at last near noon to Lorado, where the postoffice is, panting its way up the grade to Pardee.

* * * * *

Leander Cook's widow stood at her door and listened. The noon train was coming. She could hear it around the bend. She stood there, a sagging figure, with the weight of her years and her woes upon her, steadying herself with one hand against the porch-post. The first cruel cold of the winter had come in the night. Ice was forming at the edge of Buffalo's tumbling waters. A bitter wind swept down from Spruce Fork Ridge. It drove through her thin raiment and she shivered. But she still stood and listened.

In a moment she would hear the engine's blast, around the hip of the mountain, and she would know whether the train was going to stop at Pardee. Maybe her girls were coming home, and maybe, if God had been good to them, they would come seeing.

Her Girls Came Home.

A long screaming blast from the engine, echoing and re-echoing. Then two short blasts. The train was going to stop at Pardee. It came slowly around the curve, breasting the grade, and stopped at the tiny shelter which serves Pardee as a station.

The row of company houses, one of them the home of the Cooks, fronts the railroad track and when the train stopped one of the coaches was opposite where the woman stood. Two girls were on the platform, eager to alight. Her girls. They sprang to the ground, unassisted, and came hurrying toward her. God had been good to her girls. They could see. They could see her. They were looking at her. Fay was laughing, as a girl of 17 laughs when she is glad. Mayme was glad, too, but she did not laugh, for she is old at 24 and life has robbed her of laughter.

"So you've come home," said the woman who stood waiting, "and you can see."

"Yes, ma," said the girls.

"I'm well pleased."

They warmed themselves at the fireplace and Mrs. Cook looked into their eyes, which had been blurred and now were bright, and the other children came and stood in the warmth and made slow appraisal of the change that had been wrought. And Mrs. Cook would have prepared the dinner unhelped, but her girls would not suffer her and came helping, not groping as before, but seeing.

Aunt Sallie Cook, from her home on the mountain side, had seen the train stop and the girls alight. She came hurrying down, heedless of the biting wind, to make sure that the miracle had been wrought, and Eva McMellin, up from Barboursville, to take Christmas with her folks across the creek, came over, and the nearer neighbors came in and they all looked solemnly at the girls and said they were "sure glad," and the girls said they were "sure glad," too.

Too Sad to Smile.

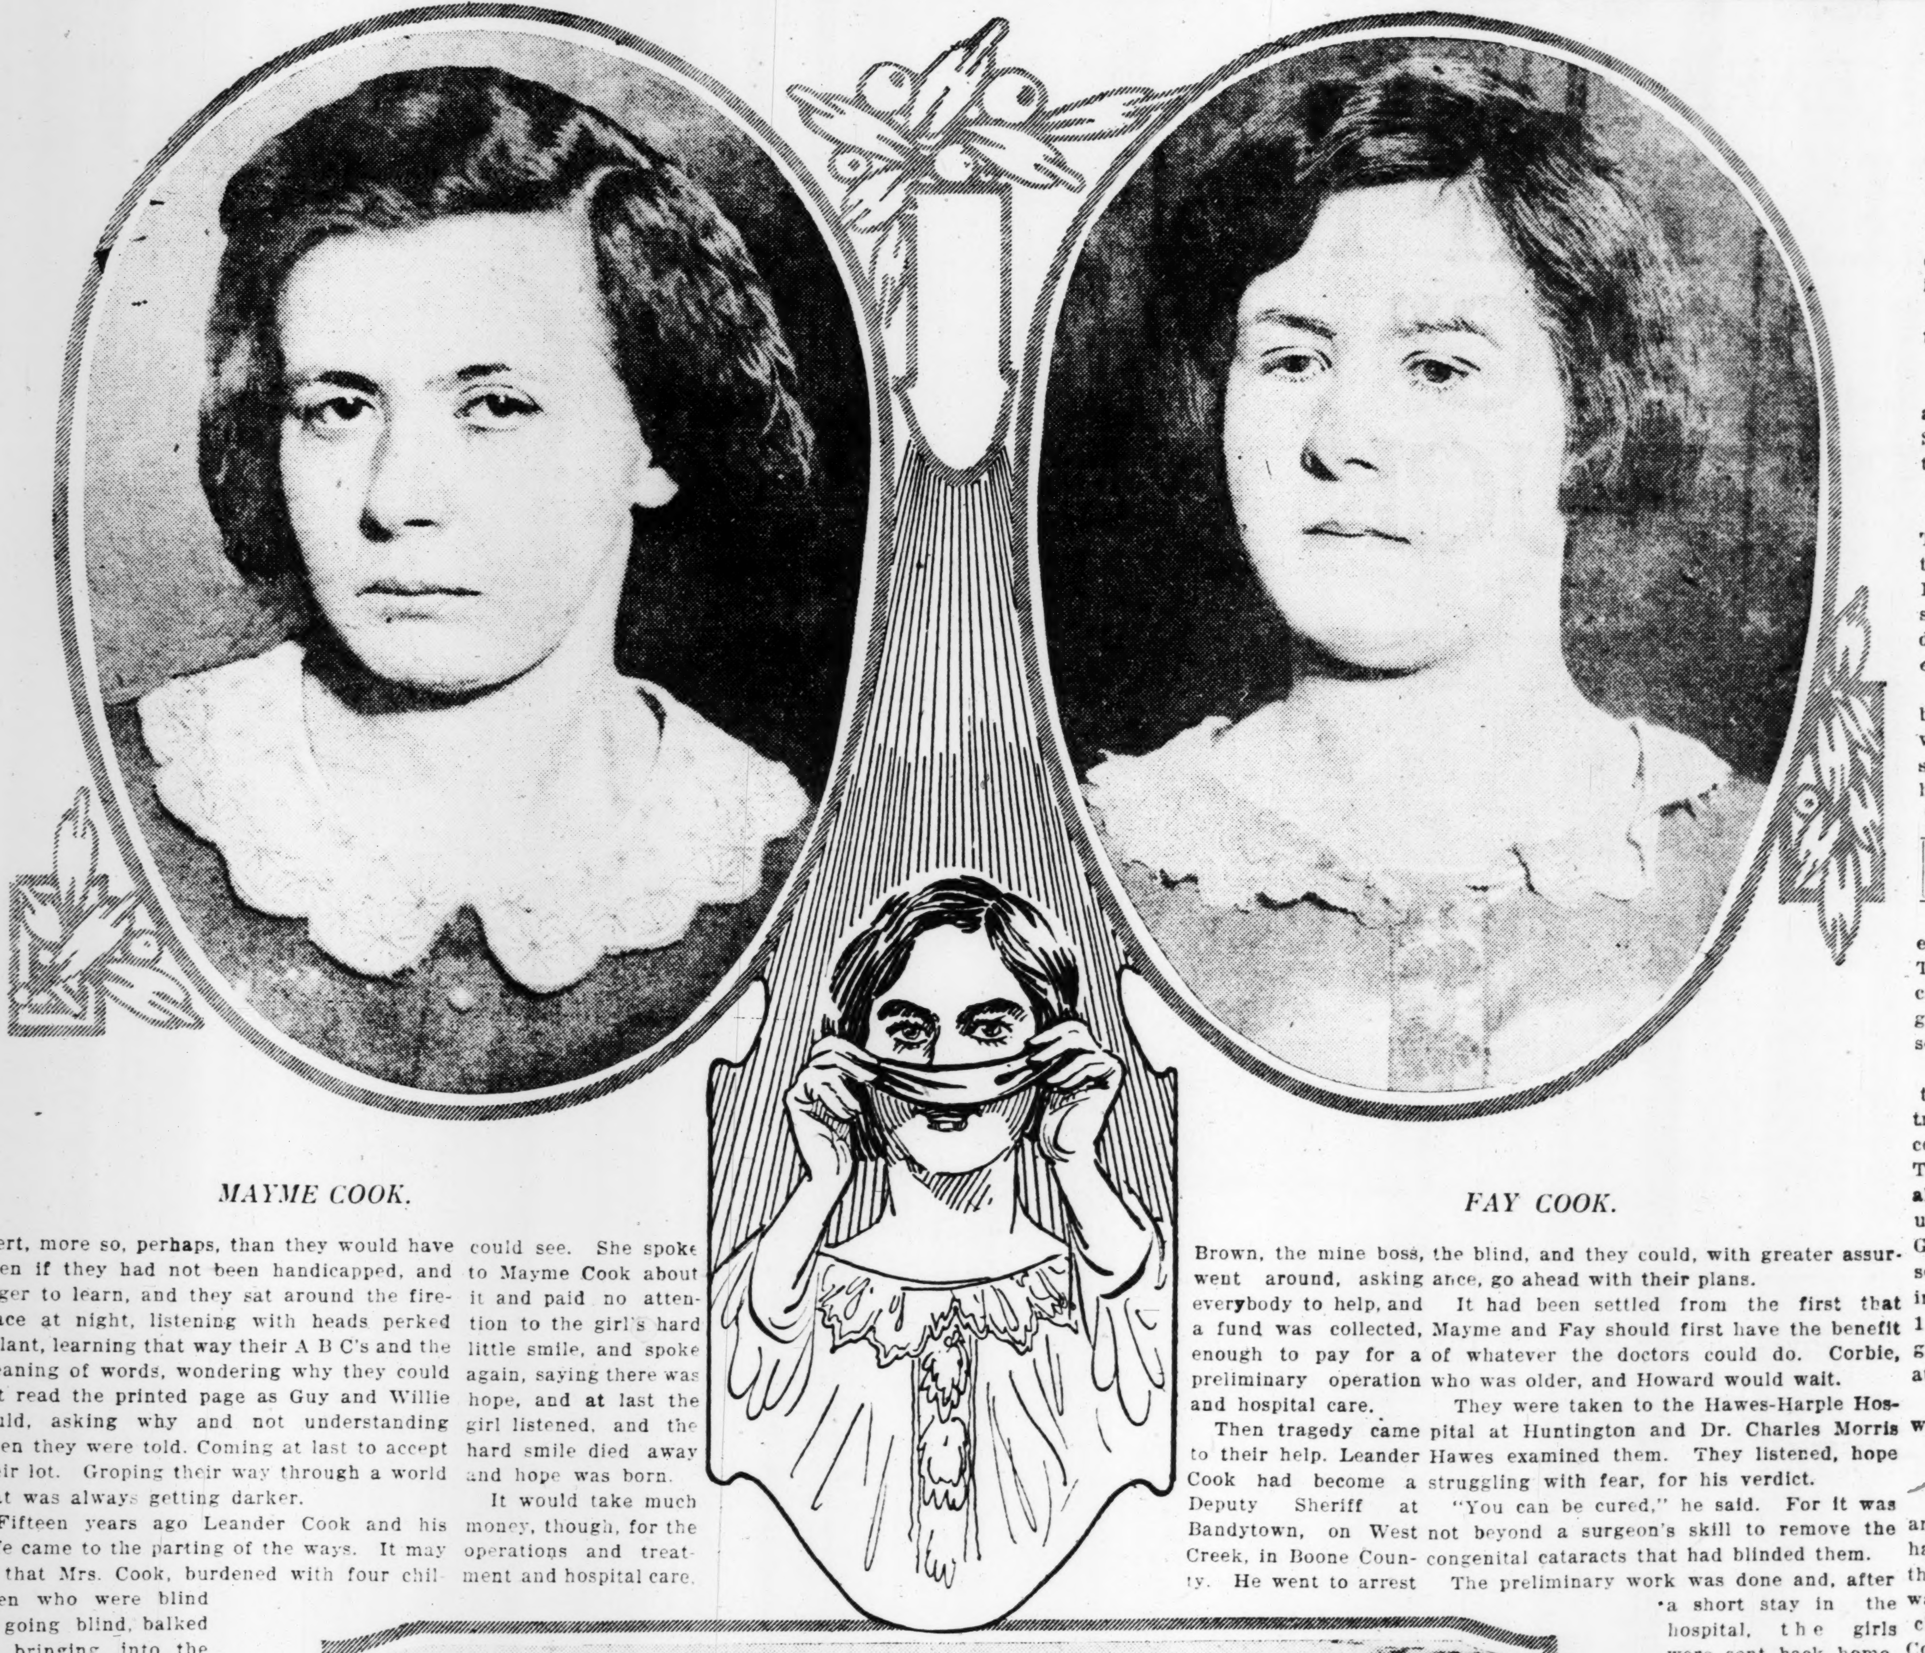
Another day, when this writer came up from Buffalo Creek to Pardee, walking from Lorado, snow was deep on the mountain side and deep in the valley. All the hemmed-in little topsy-turvy world, upon which these girls had opened their eyes, was white except where the waters, inky by contrast, flowed swiftly and sang. No other sound. No sign of life except the smoke that curled from the chimneys of the company houses, in a row.

The Cook girls were there, keeping house for their mother. A poor home, but warmth and cheer blazed from the hearth. They told of their days of darkness and the new day of brightness that had dawned. Of the beauty in line and color that had been all blur and drabness when, long ago, they saw as through a mist, dimly, before the utter darkness came. Of the new world into which they had come and all the wonderful things in it, strangely like what they had visioned and yet strangely unlike. Of their plans and hopes. And showed themselves not ill pleased with the suggestion that new romance, long laggard, might come.

Photographs were taken and it was fitting that they register the happiness that had come to two girls who had known altogether too much unhappiness. The usual chatter to bring a smile, and Fay smiled, for she is 17 and has not forgotten how to smile. But sadness, like a mask, sat on the face of Mayme.

"Smile," she was admonished. "Look glad. You have a right to be glad."

"We sure have," said Mayme. But she did not smile.



MAYME COOK.

FAY COOK.

The topsy-turvy world of Pardee, which the Cook girls, their sight restored, look out upon from their home in a row of mining company houses.

LAST CHANCE TO EARN A
STEELCRAFT "BULLDOG" DUMP TRUCK

FREE!

The Post-Dispatch offer of a Dump Truck FREE for only 15 new subscriptions will be withdrawn Saturday, January 30th.

No enrollments will be accepted after that date.

ONLY TWO WEEKS REMAIN IN WHICH TO EARN A DUMP TRUCK—FREE OF ALL COST

The Steelcraft, "Bull Dog" Type Dump Truck is the aristocrat of juvenile vehicles, an ideal playfellow and a real aid to juvenile service, in errands, etc. It includes many novel features found in no other vehicle built for boys and girls. Hundreds have been awarded by the Post-Dispatch, and are in possession of youthful owners in every St. Louis neighborhood.

Earned ownership of a Dump Truck is a juvenile distinction. Leadership among boy and girl friends is inevitable. The Dump Truck driver stands out because his prize offers playtime facilities not found in ordinary vehicles and because his attainment of Earned Ownership proclaims his success. And, by common consent, leadership is yielded to the successful—whether juvenile or adult.

If you want this distinction, seize upon this final two weeks of opportunity. Decide now that you can do what hundreds of other boys and girls have done. The Enrollment Blank will help you to start. Or, if you have already enrolled, go on with new determination to complete your quota of 15 new subscriptions.

So Light, Small and Comfortable is the New Rupture Cure, It Can Not Be Noted Even When the Wearer is Clad in Tights. Several Dancers, Sufferers from Rupture Due to the Unusual Exertion, Have Been Cured by New Discovery.

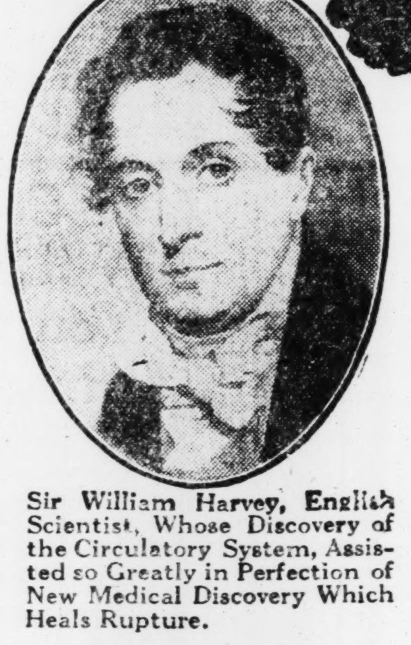
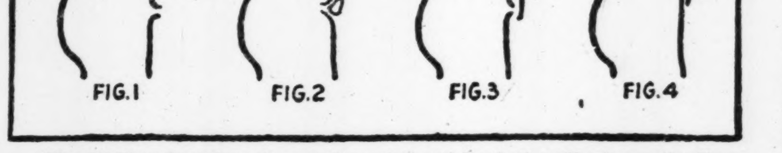
Little Children, Rupture Sufferers, Whose Hope of Cure Was Slight Until the Discovery of New Scientific Cure of Hernia, Need No Longer be Left Hanging Between Cure and Disability, But May Now Look Forward to a Full Life, Free of the Handicap of Truss or Dangerous and Costly Operation. Their Tender Little Bodies May Now Be Whole Once More.

Strains of Unusual Positions, Mean Nothing to Rupture Sufferers Now, as Science Has Perfected a Cure for Rupture Which Even During the Healing Stage Does Not Interfere With the Body Actions.



Sir William Harvey, English Scientist, Whose Discovery of the Circulatory System, Assisted so Greatly in Perfection of New Medical Discovery Which Heals Rupture.



The Outline Drawing of a section of the abdominal wall, shows the New and Old Way by Which Rupture Was Treated. Until the Present Discovery, a Heavy Pad or Knob Was Used, It Forced Itself Into the Rupture Opening, Retaining the Rupture But Making Cure Impossible.

Rupture can be healed.

Medical science, endless investigation, combined with modern inventiveness has devised a method which actually heals rupture. For ages, the healing of rupture, or hernia as it is known medically, has been the aim of countless physicians and surgeons.

Investigations into the ills and body afflictions of ancients, disclose that in days, when history was noted on tablets of stone, rupture was known and even then priests of that time, were aimlessly trying to effect a cure. Trusses, as the implements which hold or retain the rupture are called, were in use at that period in history, but like the modern truss they held the rupture but failed to assist nature in healing the wound.

The ancients' attempts at healing were mere gropings, as they knew nothing of the circulation of blood and its effect on body tissue and body growth. The various phases of growth were mysteries which they were unable to fathom. Since Sir William Harvey, an English scientist of the early century, discovered that blood really circulated through the body, sending life-giving materials to all parts of the human system, the path of the rupture scientists has been more easy to follow.

They attempted to find, if possible, some method of retaining the rupture safely, yet something which would allow free circulation of blood and not irritate the edges of the hernia or rupture and which would heal the tear.

Assists Nature to Heal

This has been done. Experiments carried on for more than 30 years has resulted in the perfection of an appliance, light, safe, comfortable and clean, which assists nature and really heals the rupture. An additional improvement has been made; the entire appliance, which weighs less than two ounces, can now be washed in water or antiseptics, eliminating all body odors, irritations and causes of skin blistering.

The announcement was withheld for some time, so that thousands of experiments which had been carried on in all sections of America, Holland, England, Canada and Germany could be investigated and the condition of these observed at frequent intervals.

These investigations have been made and it has been found that a great number of cures have been effected. That the cures have been permanent ones, is attested by letters written by the people themselves and sent to the offices of those who perfected the new rupture appliance. These included people in every walk of life, people who make their living by hard work, where strains, heavy lifting and constant muscular effort is necessary. Others include society women, working women and women in moderate circumstances. The cures have been general in all classes.

Heals the Aged

In their zeal to prove the worth of the new process, men and women of advanced years were selected and their experiences recorded. A probe showed that even in this class, a great number of permanent cures had resulted, where the patient followed closely the instructions of the experts.

To really understand what this great discovery and these years of experimenting and testing mean to humanity, it is almost necessary that a full description of the new method be given. Like all inventions and discoveries of science, its method of healing is based on logic and upon a keen knowledge of the subject.

A rupture or hernia, as it is known in medical science, is literally a tear or a separation of the muscle fibers in the walls of the abdomen. This separation is caused by a heavy strain, a violent jerking or unusual exertion. The fibers separate and allow a portion of the intestine to protrude through the opening. This results in a small knot or knob on the wall of the abdomen.

Before the investigation, which resulted in the discovery of this new method of healing, there were but two courses open. A physician or surgeon could be called and an operation performed or the patient or sufferer could seek some sort of comfort from a truss, which pushed itself into the rupture opening, keeping the protruding intestine inside the body.

The operation was expensive and dangerous, with the outcome a doubtful thing.

All the surgeon with his knife, could promise to do, was to bring the edges of the torn section together and sew it, then await the action of nature and allow growth to renew the torn sections.

Truss Prevents Cure

If the truss was called into service, the hard leather knob was forced into the tear, where constant irritation wore thin the edges of the wound and the hard pressure prevented proper blood circulation. The sufferer was forced to resign himself to a lifetime of rupture suffering, never free from the harness of the truss. No hope was held out by scientists, that his rupture would ever cure itself, although many manufacturers of appliances contended that such a thing was possible; scientific investigation showed that it was impossible to heal the rupture as long as the heavy pad was being pushed into the rupture opening, separating the edges of the tear and wearing thin, the edges of the torn section.

The heavy springs in the usual truss pressed into the body, many times injuring the kidneys and causing unrepairable damage to the back, where the heavy steel pressed into the tender nerves, centered in the spinal column. Besides this, so cruel was the old-fashioned truss, it was impossible to sleep in the apparatus, with the result that in sleep many times, the rupture "came out" and even a doctor was unable to replace it. When this happened, an immediate operation was necessary if the life of the patient was to be saved. Peritonitis would result in 24 hours if the rupture strangulated or could not be replaced. The old truss was not washable; it caused skin irritations and the dirt which accumulated caused a feverish condition which retarded the cure.

The great number of rupture cases among small children and babies made necessary some method which would eliminate forever the pushing pad, the dangerous operation and heavy steel encircling the body, injuring the delicate nerve centers.

Experiments Bring Cure

The experiments resulted in the discovery and perfection of the Brooks appliance. C. E. Brooks, a resident of Marshall, Michigan, was ruptured. He was not a doctor but he was a well educated man. Rupture causes and rupture cures became his hobby and after many years he developed the appliance which now bears his name.

He soon found the deficiencies of the truss—the things it did to hinder cure and to retard healing. So he developed an appliance which did everything which the truss failed to do. With reverse logic he invented the rupture appliance which resulted in the many cures narrated.

Can Be Washed Daily

His appliance, built scientifically and recommended by physicians and doctors in all sections of the world, lays—not pushes—on the rupture. Small, light, clean, safe and comfortable, its soft velvet-like air cushion of hygienic rubber retains the rupture and at the same time tends to bring the edges of the tear together. The action of the small oval is to gently close the wound, and in this way allow growth. Nature, when assisted, soon repairs the damage wrought in the injured side and the result is a cure for the sufferer. The washable, sanitary feature, so necessary if cure is expected and health assured, was incorporated into this new invention.

He eliminated at once all metal springs and hard, unyielding pads. Soft washable material encircles the body and acts as a support for the small oval. There are no features in the newly perfected appliance which do not work toward the cure of the patient. Every movement of the body results in the edges of the wound being brought closer together, reversing the action of the old style which constantly forced the edges of the wound apart.

It is so light, so comfortable that it can be worn even while asleep, so that night and day, asleep or at work, the rupture is being healed.

Thousands Cured

It is no wonder then that so many people have been cured by this new discovery. A volume of letters began to flow into the offices of the inventor as soon as these cures were effected. People who thought they were destined to wear a truss all their lives or submit to a dangerous operation, reported cures in a few months while cures with small children were regular occurrences.

To ascertain the truth of the reports of permanent cures by the use of the new invention, a check was taken over a period of years and letters written to hundreds who had worn the new device. The answers were amazing—the number of cures astounding. Hundreds, literally thousands, torn for years by rupture and weakened by its effects, had gained freedom from all devices by the consistent use of the new invention.

In a letter to the inventors, Mrs. Thomas Scott of 11637 125th Street, Edmondton, Alta., Canada, said:

"One year ago I bought your rupture appliance for my little girl, who was three years old. She is now four and the rupture hasn't bothered her since I put the appliance on.

"I surely am very thankful to you and you may use this letter, as it may help some other worried mother."

An amazing cure was effected by C. H. Campbell, a carpenter, 75 years old, living at Freeport, N. S., Canada, who had been ruptured many years. He said:

"I am pleased to inform you that I do not need anything in connection with the appliance, for I have not worn same for the last nine months and consider myself cured of rupture.

"The rupture has not troubled me for the last four years—thanks to you and your invention. It was a God-send to me, for the doctor said there was nothing for me but the knife. I am seventy-five years old and work every day at my trade as a carpenter. You are at liberty to use the above statement in any way you choose."

A brief period cured E. W. Brown of Norwich, N. Y., who states:

"I discontinued wearing my appliance about six weeks ago and am happy to say that my rupture is entirely healed. Was examined by my doctor and pronounced cured. Considering my age, 61 years, think this is wonderful work.

"Cannot express to you just how grateful I am, for up to the time I commenced wearing your appliance was miserable every minute."

Steel Trusses Fail

A proof that spring trusses failed to effect a cure while the more modern Brooks appliance made possible a cure which even a doctor pronounced positive. The letter from Albert Foote, P. O. Box 177, Sterling, Mass., said:

"Gentlemen: I wore your grand rupture appliance for one year day and night, after which I underwent a doctor's examination. He stated I was completely cured. This examination was made in December, 1921, and I haven't worn the appliance since and have had no trouble.

"I suffered from a double rupture and had used spring trusses for six years without help."

A further proof that the cures are permanent ones, is verified by John Clark, Roan Mountain, Tenn., R. F. D. No. 2, Box 84, who said:

"Your rupture appliance has cured me—I have been well for two years.

"You may use my name and this letter in any way you wish, for I feel very grateful."

A sad case was disclosed when a man writing from Peoria, Illinois, gave the following statement. His name was withheld out of regard for his grief. It gives a striking example of the dangers of rupture, especially where the old-fashioned spring truss is used. The application of the new Brooks appliance might have resulted in saving the man's life. The letter from his son follows:

"Dear Mr. Brooks: I am returning the rupture appliance for refund, as father died from strangulated hernia the day before it came.

"We tried two years ago to get him to order one of your appliances and cannot help but feel that if he had done as we wanted him to—he would have been spared."

Thousands Cured

On file in the offices of the company are thousands of letters, telling of the cures effected by this new invention and many of them full of thanks and gratitude for the cure which they had always thought impossible or too dangerous to attempt.

So convinced are the people who now make this new invention that it will cure rupture and bring instant relief they will allow a ten-day free trial of the new appliance. In ten days, they believe any rupture sufferer can tell whether or not it is satisfactory in his or her particular case. If it fails to give the comfort that they feel it should it can be returned.

Free Trial

The financial standing of the people who make this newly perfected appliance is above reproach. They give as references, banks, ministers, physicians and express companies in their city or in practically any large city in the entire nation.

"To gamble with rupture," said a prominent scientist, "is to gamble with life itself. Trusses hamper the wearer, they many times ruin the health of children for life. To secure an appliance, which retains and at the same time assists healing is wonderful and means much to mankind."

To obtain this appliance the readers of this paper can write to Brooks Appliance Co., 884A State St., Marshall, Mich., and it will be sent for free test trial. Fill out the coupon below and mail it today. To delay may mean permanent ill health or even worse.

Imperial Ball at Country Club Given In Garden of Roses

Affair Friday Night, Attended by 450 Guests, Largest and Most Brilliant in Organization's History.

THE Imperial Club, an organization of social leaders which for more than 50 years has been synonymous with the conservative element of St. Louis society, gave the largest and most brilliant ball in its history Friday night at the St. Louis Country Club. More than 450 members, with a few out-of-town guests, were seated for dinner, which preceded the dancing.

Although lacking, perhaps, the note of stately dignity afforded by the now burned and disbanded St. Louis Club, where for many years the Imperial parties were held, and where the guests mounted a rose-canopied stairway to greet the receiving line in a gold and white ballroom, dined and went home at midnight, the setting at the Country Club by its very air of informality was more conducive to a genuinely successful party.

Not unlike many predecessors it was a rose ball, for the deep pink of a full blown premier, and gold, are the Imperial colors. Tradition demanded, too, the Imperial crown, insignia of the organization, which was suspended above the palm-covered, rose-banked mantel in the reception hall.

In this room, were six of the tall gold standards always used as part of the decoration, each filled with huge clusters of roses. Two of them flanked the fireplace, and others were used at vantage points against the walls. Following the curved line of the ceiling were green arches fairly laden with roses and smilax, and more of the green, thickly studded with blossoms, covered the walls and fringed the arched doorways. In the three adjoining ballrooms of the clubhouse were arranged dozens of small dining tables, each with its center piece of roses and steevia in gilt baskets.

The scene might have been laid in an old English rose garden, with thousands of blossoms covering its vine-clad walls, the air heavy with fragrance, and lovely music being wafted through. Brilliantly lighted chandeliers, each a silvery replica of a crown held to the ceiling by many strands of fluffy tinsel, glowed overhead, and in the heart of each blossom on the wall an electric bulb was shining and catching the reflection of the jewels worn by beautifully-gowned women.

Nine chaperones, Mrs. Ames Cushman, Mrs. George Collier Hitchcock, Mrs. Breckinridge Jones, Mrs. George Dickson Markham, Mrs. George Wallace Niedringhaus, Mrs. George Fox Steedman, Mrs. Rolla Wells and Miss Mary Lionberger, beautifully gowned and bejeweled, received the guests in the living room of the club, which was devoid of decoration except for more of the rose filled standards, and later, with their escorts, occupied the central dining table almost covered with low bowls of roses. A tenth chaperone, Mrs. Daniel Kayser Catlin, was unable to attend.

A heritage of customs, strictly adhered to, includes the addition each year of debutante memberships, the number varying, and perhaps the bud's greatest thrill during her first season out is her engraved invitation to the Imperial. This year 16 young women, an unusually large number, attended their first Imperial party. A list, with a brief description of their gowns, follows: Miss Alice Francis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David R. Francis Jr., was in tea rose chiffon with touches of silver and carried roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Dorcas Carr Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Lackland Taylor, was charming in a white crystal beaded net over white satin. The frock was fashioned with a low waist with a drop shoulder effect and the filmy full skirt hung in four deep points.

Another attractive white gown worn by Miss Louise Church, daughter of Mrs. Rolla Wells, was of satin made simply with rhinestone banding finishing the neck line, from which a panel of rhinestones depended to cover the front of the gown, ending in fringe at the edge of the circular skirt.

One of the most colorful frocks was worn by Miss Elizabeth Cuendet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Cuendet, of gold lace veiling flesh tinted georgette, edged at the bottom with old rose and gold velvet. The square cut bodice was joined to the skirt with a slender piece of old rose and gold velvet ribbon fastened in front with a French flower.

An imported bouffant frock of white silk net shading into gray at the skirt was worn by Miss Elizabeth Douglass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Douglass. A lovely bertha of white net edged the upper part of the tight bodice. The only adornment was a French flower ornament in shades of Ward roses caught at the waistline.

Chief Justice and Mrs. Taft Guests at White House Dinner

Former Secretary of State and Mrs. Hughes, and Congressmen Also Present.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.

PRESIDENT AND MRS. COOLIDGE entertained at dinner in the White House on Thursday night, in honor of the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court and the Associate Justices. The Chief Justice and Mrs. Taft received the guests, including the former Secretary of State and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, and members of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees.

After the dinner a program of music was given by Carl Flesch, violinist, and Mr. John Powell, pianist. Maj. U. S. Grant III and Mrs. Grant were among the other dinner guests.

Another interesting dinner of the week was that given for the Vice President and Mrs. Dawes, by Madame Hauge, on Tuesday. Twenty-four persons were invited to meet the guests of honor.

Much speculation is exhibited in the National Capital over the series of Cabinet dinners as hosts to the President and Mrs. Coolidge, which will shortly be announced. Last year these dinners were omitted at the request of the President because of the recent death of his son Calvin Coolidge. The first dinner will doubtless be one by Vice President and Mrs. Dawes with the rest of the Cabinet entertaining in order. Most of the dinners will occur before Lent.

Ogden H. Hammond, newly appointed Ambassado to Spain, was in Washington the early part of the week to attend a dinner Monday given in his honor by Senator and Mrs. Walter Edge.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight Davis were entertained at dinner on Wednesday night by the Minister of Greece and Madame Simopoulos. Among the guests invited to meet them were:

The Ambassador of Brazil, Mr. Don Amaral; Senator and Mrs. David A. Reed, the Minister of Poland and Mme. Clechanowska, Mr.

Mrs. McKittrick's Wedding Tuesday

A QUIET wedding of much interest socially is that of Mrs. Ralph McKittrick and J. Clifford Rosengarten of Philadelphia, to take place Tuesday noon at the bride's home, 4328 Westminster place. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Dr. Chester A. Jenney of the First Presbyterian Church, in the presence of a few of Mrs. McKittrick's relatives. The bride will be gowned simply in black and white crepe, with a white hat, and her flowers are to be orchids.

After a wedding trip to Palm Beach, Mr. Rosengarten will bring her to St. Louis to reside.

Mrs. McKittrick was Miss Emily Catlin Wickham before her marriage, and is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Fanning Wickham. She is a sister of Mrs. Charles W. Moore of 36 Portland place and the late Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer.

Mr. Rosengarten is a prominent society and club man of Philadelphia. He will arrive in St. Louis today.

Among the Southern visitors will be Mrs. Oliver J. Anderson, Mrs. Theron Catlin of Brentmoor and Mrs. Henry Fenimore Cooper of New York, who will depart this week to spend a month at Nassau, in the Bahama Islands off the coast of Florida. Mrs. Cooper was formerly Miss Katherine Guy of St. Louis.

A much entertained visitor in St. Louis is Miss Di Gregory of New York, who is the guest of Mrs. James A. Seddon of 5341 Waterman avenue. Mrs. Seddon gave a tea for her Thursday, and a number of informal parties have been given. Miss Gregory is the daughter of the late Dr. Elisha H. Gregory, a prominent St. Louis physician. She will remain three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence Mauran of 46 Vandeventer place, will spend the late winter in the Bahama Islands.

Eakin-Wilson Wedding Takes Place at Church

Reception at Home of Bride's Parents Follows Ceremony —Honeymoon Will Be Passed in Cuba.

THE wedding of Miss Margaret Eakin, "Peggy" to her intimates, and Donald Francis Wilson, took place at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the Church of the Unity, the Rev. Dr. George R. Dodson officiating. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Robert Eakin, 56 Kingsbury place.

The bride's gown was of ivory satin, made en princess with a high round neck and long tight sleeves finished at the hand with rose point. A wide band of the lace formed a flounce across the front at the hip line and cascaded to the hem at either side. The back of the gown was buttoned to the waist, where a four-yard chiffon-lined satin train, fashioned in the new spread peacock feather design, was attached. Her tulle bridal veil was arranged under a coronet of orange blossoms and sprays of the flowers adorned the train. She carried a prayer book marked with valley lilies.

The bridesmaids, Miss Katherine Engel, Miss Frances Breck, Miss Jane Wilson of Little Rock, Ark., a sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Louise Fownes of Pittsburg, were gowned alike in orchid taffeta, made simply with four tiers of chiffon capes overlapping each other from the neck to hem line in the back. Purple hats with taffeta crowns and chiffon brims were adorned with purple and orchid ribbon streamers which hung to the floor. They carried violets.

Wilson Lewis was best man, and Alexander Shelby, Hiram Holladay, Hale Montgomery, Charles Niekamp and Everett Brookes, groomsmen. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson will go to Havana, Cuba, for a three week's wedding trip, and will make their home at 527 Clara avenue.

Mrs. Wilson is a graduate of Mary Institute, Dana Hall in Wellesley, Mass., and the Finch School in New York. Her husband, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Wilson of Little Rock, is an alumnus of the University of Missouri.

Miss Eugenie Berthold of 4482 Lindell boulevard and her niece, Miss Claire Peugnet, returned home a few days ago from a six months' stay in Europe. They were in Paris much of the time.

Mrs. David E. Woods of 7069 Kingsbury boulevard and her daughter, Miss Marydelle Woods, will sail from New York Jan. 28, on the Samaria, for a Mediterranean cruise. Other St. Louisans on the same boat will be Miss Marian Franciscus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Franciscus of 15 Lenox place, and a friend from Tulsa, Ok.; Mr. and Mrs. William H. Elliot of Westminster place and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lamy of 1 Forest Ridge. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pope O'Fallon, who had planned the same cruise, have canceled their reservations because of the illness of Mr. O'Fallon. Mrs. Woods and her daughter will travel in Europe for a month after leaving the ship. Mr. and Mrs. Woods' daughter, Mrs. Albert E. Happel, is the guest in Decatur, Ill., of Mrs. Philip Sproat, who was matron of honor for Mrs. Happel at her marriage a few years ago.

Mrs. Thomas E. Stocker of 4625 Flora place has as her guest her sister, Miss Fannie Blount Rutherford of Atlanta, Ga. Miss Rutherford is a sister of Congressman Rutherford of Atlanta, whom she will visit in Washington, at the termination of her stay in St. Louis. Miss Rutherford will be the guest of friends in Florida before her return to her home.

Miss Naomi Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Brown of Tulsa, Ok., formerly of Portland place in St. Louis, is the guest of Miss Helen Voight, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Voight Jr., of 5628 Clemens avenue. Miss Voight will entertain a group of her friends at an informal tea this afternoon in honor of the visitor. Miss Voight gave an evening bridge party last week for Miss Dorothy Hart of Cincinnati, who is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Edward W. White.

Mrs. John Dwight Filley of 40 Westmoreland place, and their daughter, Mrs. Thomas S. McPheeters, will sail the latter part of February for the Riviera, to remain for the spring season.

Missourians in European Cities

Holiday Activities Ended, They Scatter to Seaside and Mountain Resorts.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—Again the scenes of social interest shift. Paris and London have enjoyed their holidays and now are being deserted until the spring season opens—deserted in favor of Florida, the Riviera, Biarritz, Dinard, Switzerland, Italy, Sicily and Egypt.

Just now, the "monde chic" is installed at St. Moritz, with the overflow scattered from Gstaad to Chamonix, for the winter Alpine sport season. Those less hardy in their selection of amusements, however, are moving on to the Riviera and from San Remo to Hyeres, hotels, restaurants and casinos are welcoming their thousands; a hundred tennis courts resound to the twang of ball on racket; the shout of "fore" is heard in a dozen different accents; and riders and horses sweat in polo battles.

For the tourist, however, a few days in Switzerland and on the Riviera are sufficient. He is here for only a limited time and there is much to be seen. Italy beckons—Florence, Milan, Pisa, Genoa, Trieste, Rome, Naples—with a side trip to Vienna. Sicily sprawls lazily under a warm sun on a sea of velvet blue. A little farther south lies Africa—Algiers, Tunis, Egypt and the Valley of the Nile. What cares the earnest traveler if the "monde chic" is at St. Moritz and Nice is the winter capital of the Continent!

Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Banister of St. Louis, who have been visiting in Nice during the holidays, are expected back in Paris in time to sail for home in the French liner France from Havre on Jan. 20. Mr. and Mrs. Banister have been traveling in Italy and Switzerland for the past six weeks, following a tour of the British Isles.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Moffitt of St. Louis, who have been traveling in the south of France, were recent visitors to Nice, passing some time at the Villa Beatrice.

The second annual Black and White Art Exposition at the American Women's Club of Paris has been one of the most interesting events of the holiday season in the French capital. Among the exhibitors is Roy Van Aucken Sheldon, the St. Louis sculptor, who presents a series of animals, among them his well-known and amusing "Bear."

Mrs. Henry Leverett Chase and the Misses Frances Chase and Genevieve Barnickel of St. Louis have returned to the French capital from Vevey, where they have been spending some time. While in Switzerland, they visited Lausanne and Geneva.

Visitors are beginning to arrive in St. Moritz, Switzerland, by the hundreds for the winter sport season there. Curling and skating have been started but a fresh snowfall has made the danger from avalanche slides great and prohibits skiing. Missouri people noted at the New Year's Eve ball held at the Palace Hotel included Miss Alita Davies, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Davis of St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles McLure Clark and Miss Mary Denman Clark of St. Louis, who passed the Christmas holidays at Shepheard's Hotel in Cairo, have left the Egyptian capital on a boat trip up the Nile. They will spend some weeks in excursions throughout Northern Africa.

Miss Lucy Kavanaugh Peery of St. Joseph, Mo., who is studying voice in Paris, was among those present at the New Year's eve reception and dance given by the United States Students' and Artists' Club of Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Morehead and Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Morehead of St. Louis, who are spending a couple of months on the French Riviera, were among those noticed dining recently at Ciro's restaurant in Monte Carlo.

Mrs. Daniel A. Hill of 4931 Lindell boulevard entertained informally for Mrs. Bransford Hill of Paris, Monday afternoon, Jan. 11. The guest list was made up of 40 friends of the guest of honor. Mrs. Hill and her young daughter, Miss Joyce Hill, who attends school in Paris, leave Wednesday for New York to sail for France.

Mrs. Alphonse Dur of Hampton drive is entertaining her sister-in-law, Mrs. David Ralston of New York. Mrs. Dur gave a bridge luncheon for her guest yesterday. She also gave a bridge luncheon the first part of the week at the Missouri Athletic Association. Mrs. Le Grand Jones of 6316 Pershing avenue will give a supper this evening for Mrs. Ralston, who will also be the honoree at a dinner given by Mrs. Robert Teasdale of 6160 Westminster place, Thursday evening, Jan. 21.

Mrs. Charles Wiegand of the Hotel Chase, will entertain with a supper party at the hotel Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Warne Neidringhaus of Pershing avenue, are spending the month of January in Los Angeles, San Francisco and other cities in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Low of the Hotel Chase leave New York Jan. 23 for a cruise on the Mediterranean, later to tour the Continent. Mrs. Nettie Jacobs of the Hotel Chase gave a dinner party last evening for her sister and Mr. Low.

Dr. and Mrs. Harvey G. Mudd of 47 Vandeventer place, are planning to go to Florida in February for a visit of several weeks.

MISS RUTH KREISMANN, who served as maid of honor at the wedding of her sister, Helma, and Stuart McCormack, Tuesday night.

cut to a V, and the skirt caught up at one side with a rhinestone buckle, was worn by Miss Elizabeth Hoblitzelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Hoblitzelle. With this costume she wore silvr slipprs.

White chiffon, made in the simple girlish style which characterizes most of her gowns, was chosen by Miss Lillie Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard B. Allen. Chiffon godets gave added fullness to the circular skirt, and the V-shaped bodice was adorned with two large flesh-tinted roses.

Miss Maud Miller Streett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Clark Streett, wore the lovely white charmeuse gown sewn with mirror spangles and crystals, in which she was crowned Queen of Love and Beauty at the last Veiled Prophet ball.

Miss Marion Stoner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Stoner, used her silver fringed debut gown, and Miss Agnes Benoist wore white brocaded satin, finished with a chiffon flounce.

Miss Janet Wallace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace, was gowned in yellow satin, with long waisted bodice and circular skirt beaded in crystal. She carried yellow roses.

Miss Eugenie Edmunds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Edmunds, was in white chiffon combined with satin, embroidered in a design of silver flowers. She carried spring blossoms.

Miss Henrietta Hadley, daughter of Chancellor and Mrs. Herbert S. Hadley, wore blue, and in direct contrast was a pink taffeta gown worn by Miss Katherine McCluney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. McCluney. The latter frock was made bouffant and sewn with rhinestones. Miss McCluney carried orchids.

Mrs. William Maffitt's niece, Miss Josephine Bates, wore blue satin girdled with French flowers and banded in silver lace. Miss Juliet Carpenter's gown was yellow chiffon and metallic cloth.

A piano recital by William Mentor Crosse will be given in the Little Theater at Fontbonne College, Sunday afternoon, Jan. 17, at 3:30 o'clock.

Walsh, Miss Mary Patten, Miss Josephine Patten, Miss Helen Ernst, Judge John Barton Payne, Oscar T. Crosby and Mr. Evlambios, director of the National Bank of Athens.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Everett have sent out invitations for a dance to be given on Feb. 8, in compliment to Miss Beatrice Henderson, granddaughter of Mrs. John B. Henderson. More than 500 guests are invited.

The British Ambassador, Sir Esme Howard, who has been visiting Sir Henry Cordeux, Governor-General of Nassau, has returned to Washington and will go to New York Jan. 20 to meet Lady Isabella Howard, his wife, who is coming to Washington, after passing the summer and fall with her children in Switzerland.

Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant entertained at luncheon Sunday, Jan. 10, for Chief Justice and Mrs. William Howard Taft. The Princess Cantacuzene, daughter of Mrs. Grant, is in Washington as the house guest of her mother, having arrived here on Monday from Florida, where she has been spending the winter.

Senator and Mrs. Williams entertained at dinner Sunday night in honor of the members of the committee who have come East to secure stars for the Municipal Opera in St. Louis, and stopped over in Washington on their way to New York.

Among the guests were former Mayor Henry W. Kiel, Miss Edna Kiel, Mr. and Mrs. David E. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Roettger, Nelson Cunliff, Otto Rugg, Thomas Lovelace, Miss Clara Neiss, Miss Ethel Conselman, Arthur Siegel and the Director of Public Welfare of St. Louis, Harry Saulsbury, and Mrs. Saulsbury.

The Missouri State Society will hold a meeting at the Washington Hotel next Tuesday night. The guests of honor will be the presidents of State societies of states bordering of Missouri and the Senators and Representatives of those states.

Mrs. Walter McNabb Miller of St. Louis, chairman of the Department of Public Welfare of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was the guest of honor at the dinner given by the Public Welfare Committee of the Women's City Club last Wednesday.

School Dinner on 25th Anniversary

The Eugene Field School, at Olive street and Taylor avenue, will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of its opening with a dinner Friday, Jan. 29, served in the first floor corridor of the school building.

Graduates and former pupils of the school, the present faculty, and those who taught there at any time since its opening, besides parents and friends of the student body, will be included in the guest list, and may make reservations for the affair by telephoning the Field School, Delmar 4110.

Mr. W. Scott Hancock, an enthusiastic patron, whose children received their elementary education within its walls, will preside as toastmaster, and beginning at its inception, will carry his auditors mentally through the intervening years to denote the progress of the school and its value to the community. A program of music and short talks by prominent graduates will be announced later. Dancing will follow.

C. Spencer Meredith of the Argonne Apartments departed Monday, Jan. 11, for Miami, Fla. Mrs. Meredith will join him the latter part of the month. They will be the guests of Mr. Meredith's sister, Mrs. Jay Bee Lewis at her home, "Orange Blossom," near Arcadia.

SEMI-ANNUAL CLEARANCE

Incomparable Values in Coats!

In the Garland category "Incomparable" means that you could not possibly expect anything greater! Here are several hundred fresh, new coats in fashionable, fur trimmed styles, offered at less (in most cases) then either the furs or fabrics cost the makers!

$35
All of these Coats at $35 are $69 to $79 values. The fabrics are rich and lustrous or soft, suede-like. Flares aplenty—slim straight lines or wrappy effects. Furs in profusion on collars, cuffs, pockets, panels, etc.

$55
$55 now buys $99 to $125 Coats. Expensive fabrics of finest textures in virtually every shade. Flares, wrappy effects, Tuxedo fronts, in fact every style you would expect to see in the better coats. Luxurious trims of rich furs.

$75
Included at $75 are handsome one-of-a-kind models originally priced to $169, many of which were just purchased by us for less than they cost to make. Very finest of fabrics in many shades, exclusive styles, expensive fur trims.

At the meeting of the St. Louis Fine Arts Club Friday, Jan. 8, at the Artists' Guild, Mrs. Donald MacDonald read Oscar Wilde's play, "The Ideal Husband." Hostesses were Mrs. Charles H. Hoyle and Mrs. B. A. Thompson. Ushers, were Misses Frances Thompson, Martha Carter and Jessie Dresher.

The Tuesday Literary Club of Clayton met at the home of Mrs. R. E. L. Giers on Leland avenue last Tuesday. Mrs. E. E. Morton spoke on the poetry of Lindsay and Sanburg. Mrs. J. L. Blacken analyzed the work of Lewis and Cather.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Third Baptist Church, Grand and Washington boulevards, has invited all Baptist women of the city and their friends to hear an address on "Leadership" by Miss Harriet Taylor of New York City, Tuesday, Jan. 19, at 2 p. m. Mrs. H. D. Carley, president of the auxiliary, will preside. At 5:45 p. m. of the same day a "welcome supper" will be given for Miss Taylor by the girls of the Young Women's Christian Association in the "Y" building, 1411 Locust street, and from 6:30 to 7 o'clock the guest of honor will speak on "Achieving Success"

Mrs. J. L. Griswold and Miss Laura Philippi, assisted by Mrs. L. W. Ray and Mrs. H. O. Byrd, were hostesses to the M. A. E. McLure Chapter, United Daughters Confederacy, at 2 o'clock Monday, in the tea room of Dorr & Zeller on De Baliviere avenue. The president, Mrs. John D. Hurck, presiding. Reports from various committees were given, tickets distributed and plans completed for the annual ball which will be given at Hotel Chase, Feb. 10, at 8:30 p. m., with Mrs. A. E. Farrar as general chairman, Mrs. W. H. Dickey, vice-chairman, Mrs. C. S. Stanford, matron of honor, and a bevy of young girls from the season's debutantes acting as maids of honor. The ball this year promises to exceed all previous affairs of this chapter owing to the fact that the fund derived from the sale of tickets is to continue the scholarship in Columbia, Mo., University, which is used each year by the lineal descendant of a Confederate soldier.

Mrs. G. V. R. Mechin, 5088 Raymond avenue, was hostess to the Sorority Circle Thursday. Mrs. G. H. Broeder and Mrs. J. B. Dubail were the assistant hostesses. The program, on the Mussolini and the Fascist movement, was given by Mrs. W. R. Chivvis, who recently spent several months in Italy. Miss M. A double installation of officers of the Sons of the Union Veterans of the Civil War, Rassieur Camp No. 4, and the Auxiliary, was held at Cinderella hall, 2733 Cherokee avenue, Friday evening, Jan. 8. Major Leo Rassieur was sponsor for both organizations.

The annual parish meeting and dinner of St. John's Episcopal Church was held last Monday evening, in the guild rooms, 3664 Arsenal street. The Rev. Leighton Howard Nugent, rector of St. John's Church, presided. The vestry, elected to serve during 1926, follows: T. E. Upshaw, senior warden; C. W. Alban, junior warden; J. W. Hossack, treasurer; E. C. Earle, Charles P. Whitbread, Ellis H. Hamel, C. B. Milson, S. W. Greaves Sr., G. A. Leimecke, Dr. A. H. Hamel, Dr D. H. Kremer, W. J. Freeman, vestrymen.

The following officers were elected by the Women's organizations. Mrs. C. T. Fisher, president, parish department; Mrs. C. P. Whitbread and Mrs. H. Longreck, missions; Mrs. G. Miller and Miss Julia Upshaw, social service; Mrs. R. C. Reber, Mrs. J. M. Whitaker, Mrs. L. H. Nugent and Mrs. E. Booker, religious education.

The monthly meeting of the St. Louis Circle, International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, will be held next Wednesday evening at the Ursuline academy, Twelfth and Russell boulevard. Mrs. M. E. Croak will act as hostess.

The St. Louis Story Tellers' League will meet at the Cabany Branch Library auditorium at 8 p. m. Tuesday. The subject for the evening will be "American Stories and Story Writers." Mrs. F. A. Clifford will have charge of the meeting. Miss Shirley Seifert, a St. Louis short story writer, will speak on "The Making of the Short Story." Mrs. Adaline Palmier Wagoner will also speak. American stories will be told by Miss Margaret McLaughlin and Miss Flora Doran. A group of American Colonial songs will be sung by Mrs. Betty Bucher, costume song interpreter.

The Kirkwood Tuesday Club held a luncheon last Tuesday at the home of Mrs. James J. Lewis. Mrs. John C. Berger assisted the hostess. • Miss Frances Brumer read a paper, "A Day on the Grand Canal." A business meeting followed the program.

The Rubinstein Club met at the home of Mrs. H. C. Ritter of 3420 Juniata street last Thursday. A musical program was given by Miss Laura Suda, Miss Bertha Donnelly, Miss Louise Furling and Mrs. Ritter.

The Child's Conservation Conference will meet for an afternoon of sewing at the Community Center in Sherman Park at 2 p. m. Wednesday. The meeting will take the place of the regular monthly sewing meeting at the City Sanitarium. The work is to be continued for the charity of city institutions, and the needy children who attend the public schools, because of lack of clothing. The work is under the supervision of Mrs. W. C. Fisher, Mrs. M. A. Bliss and Mrs. J. Westerman. Notices will appear later for the regular meeting, Tuesday, Jan. 26.

The Dozier School Parent-Teacher Association will meet Tuesday evening in the kindergarten of the school. Dr. Arthur M. Alden will speak on "The Tonsil and Adenoid Question." The orchestra of the Cabanne Methodist Church will play.

The St. Louis Chapter of the Isaak Walton League will hold a monthly meeting in the auditorium of Soldan High School, at 8 o'clock Wednesday. Harry A. Collins, secretary, will show a film of the Arcadia Valley. Dr. Isaac Lippincott of Washington University will speak on the conservation of the natural resources of the State. Mrs. F. H. Littlefield, president, of the Eighth District, Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, will present the women's viewpoint of conservation.

The Town Club program for the coming week will begin tomorrow night, with a reading of two one-act plays—"Barries" "Rosalind," by Miss Betty McGuire, who is a pupil of Prof. Clark of Chicago University. The hostesses will be Misses Hildah Levy, Olivia Marting, Jetta Kopf, Lela O'Neil, Mesdames Jessie J. Barnum and Grace Herndon Fletcher.

At 2 p. m. Tuesday the club lounge will be reserved for cards, and a buffet tea will be served. The

CALIFORNIA WOMEN ASK FOR EXPOSITION BOOTH

St. Louis Sponsors of Exhibit, Feb. 16 to 22, Already Report Waiting List.

A telegram inquiring about the possibility of arranging for a California booth and speaker at the Women's National Exposition, to be held Feb. 16 to 22 at the New Coliseum, has been received by the exposition management from Mrs. John S. Payne of San Francisco, former St. Louis clubwoman.

All but 18 of the booths have been taken, and there is a waiting list for those, the management reports. The Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., the McElroy-Sloan Shoe Co., and the Good Will Industries are among those recently making reservations. Demonstrations of telephone equipment and electrical research, methods of shoe manufacture, and work to improve conditions of the poor will be demonstrated respectively in those booths.

Many requests for scholarships for women, for which a part of the proceeds of the exposition is to be set aside, have been received at the exposition headquarters in the Town Club, said Mrs. George W. Niedringhaus, chairman of the Scholarship Committee. She remarked that the offer of scholarships was fitting, because "above all, the purpose of the exposition is educational." And she added:

"No one can help women more than women themselves, as we are trying to demonstrate. Nor can anyone appreciate what education means to a woman more than another woman."

Her committee is to confer with the Advisory Board at the close of the exposition upon how many scholarships will be given and of what they shall consist.

In response to a request from several Jefferson City clubs, Mrs. .T. Walker Hardy, chairman of the St. Louis County League of Women voters, is to speak there soon in the interest of the exposition.

CONFERENCE CALLED ON INTERRACIAL SITUATION

Meeting to Be Held in Auditorium of the Public Library Jan. 20.

A conference on the interracial situation in Missouri will be held Jan. 20 in the auditorium of the Public Library. It was called by Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, superintendent of woman's work in the Presbyterian Church, and Miss Daisy June Troutt of the Christian Woman's Board, both members of the Interracial Commission of the Federal Council of Churches.

Representatives of both races in social and religious work in the State will attend the meeting. They will discuss the common problems of the races with a view to co-operation.

I have a Message for the Deaf

. . . a sudden illness . . . all my savings spent in my long battle with disease . . . discharged from a hospital . . . cured, but with my hearing impaired . . . then DEAFNESS.

In a few short months, the income from my work had dwindled to practically nothing, and I faced the world broken in spirit and with an affliction that seemed to make it impossible for me ever to secure my former income again.

Then I made a Startling Discovery

It's the story of that discovery and what it meant to me in improving my hearing . . . fighting my way back . . . that I want every man and woman to read, who is deaf or even hard of hearing.

My message is in booklet form . . . it points the way for YOU . . . it shows YOU how to regain for yourself, the full, active, happy life you enjoyed before.

Don't let this opportunity knock in vain . . . don't postpone . . . now, as you read, send for the booklet "My Message to the Deaf." It will be sent FREE to YOU. Send for it today—NOW. Address,

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain—How to Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

OPPOSES WILLIAMS ON WORLD COURT STAND

St. Louis League of Women Voters Sends Protest Message to Senator.

The St. Louis League of Women Voters last week sent a telegram to United States Senator Williams of Missouri expressing its displeasure at the Senator's seeming opposition in the Senate to adherence by the United States to the World Court.

The National League of Women Voters has "repeatedly resolved advocacy of American adherence to the Court of International Justice on the Harding-Hughes-Coolidge terms," the message read, the St. Louis League has reiterated the conviction, it continued, and Senator Williams' recent speech in the Senate "seems to indicate indecision in regard to the matter." The message further contains the resolution, as adopted by the League's City Central Committee:

"Resolved, That the City Central Committee of the St. Louis League of Women Voters, assembled in meeting on this day, Jan. 12, representing ward and precinct organization, respectfully invite the consideration of Senator Williams of their unequivocal stand in favor of American adherence to the Court of International Justice on the Harding-Hughes-Coolidge terms."

Announcement was made yesterday that Miss Pearl McIvor, head of the Child Hygiene Division of the Missouri State Board of Health, will discuss the provisions of the Sheppard-Towner maternity bill before members of the Political Information Bureau at league headquarters, at 10:30 a. m. next Friday.

The third lecture of the primary school of the league will be held in the Hotel Chase ballroom tomorrow at 3:45 p. m., when Prof. Bernadotte Schmitt of the University of Chicago, department of economics, will speak on "The Economic Recovery of Europe."

The league has addressed a request to members to attend the public hearing on the proposed St. Louis zoning law, scheduled for Monday, Feb. 1, at 8 p. m. in the Board of Aldermen chambers in the City Hall.

CLUB MEETINGS AND PROGRAMS

Hospitality Committee in charge is: Misses Pearl L. Heuer, Eva Marie Schopp, Marjory Abbott, Helen C. Condon, Kathryn Cornelsen; Mesdames Charles Murphy, H. D. Heuer, Howard E. Miller, Fred L. Williams and M. J. Wolf.

A luncheon will be given in the auditorium at 1:15 p. m. Saturday. The speakers, Mrs. Everett Pattison, Miss Irene M. Deicke, Mrs David O. Ives and Mrs. Oscar Johnson, will discuss the different modes of steamship travel. The hostesses will be: Misses Marguerite B. Johnston, Martha K. Krebs, Ida Mereto, Katharine Pogue, Geraldine Rohan, Jennie Wahlert, Cornelia Young, Frances B. Lawton, Mmes. W. D. Stover, Frank Hinchey and Horace G. Beedle.

The Phi Delphian Chapter will meet at 2 p. m. Wednesday at Cabanne Library. The chapter met last Wednesday afternoon, at the Cabanne Library. The subject for the afternoon was "The Nineteenth Century Drama of England." Mrs. H. W. Dawson was the leader for the afternoon's study. The following text reports were given: Pinero's "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," Mrs. James L. Stuart; "Bernard Shaw's Point of View," Mrs. G. W. Jones; "Getting Married," Mrs. R. C. Ringwald; "The Terrible Meek," Mrs. E. Ossing. A discussion on courtesy and conversation was led by the president, Mrs. Stacy P. Douglas.

The Uandi Literary Club will meet next Thursday at the home of Miss Marietta Schumacher, 6110 Pershing avenue. Mrs. Myron M. Medaker will assist the hostess. Mrs. Fred Maxsted will read a paper on "James Whitcomb Riley," Mrs. Everett Ramsey will talk on "Eugene Field," and Mrs. Louis L. McCormack will read a paper on "Edgar A. Guest." Mrs. George Gephart will give a reading.

Mrs. Philip North Moore will address the Daughters of the American Colonists on "The Growth of the Organization from a National and International Viewpoint," at the Forest Park Hotel, at 3 p. m. Thursday. Mrs. J. C. Crowdus will relate her travel experiences abroad. St. Louis club women are invited.

The Tercentenary Shakspeare Society will meet at the Vandervoort Music hall at 2 p. m. Tuesday. The Rev. A. J. Kuhlman, S. J., will talk on "Life and Language in Shakspeare." On Tuesday, Jan. 26, A. Rosenthal will deliver a lecture on "Timon of Athens." February meetings of the study class will be given to the consideration of the tragedy, "Timon of Athens."

Mrs. Donald MacDonald of Lindell Hall School, gave an interpretation to "Will Shakspeare" before the Society at the Vandervoort Music Hall, Jan. 12.

Mrs. W. C. Markhan, of 3940 Russell boulevard, was hostess to the Harmony Literary Club last Friday. Mrs. Gordon Z. Davis, president, had charge of the meeting. A paper on the "Biography of Anatole France" was read by Mrs. C. W. Parker. "The Crime of Sylvester Bonuard" was read by Mrs. F. J. Sternberg. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Mary Emmett, 1363 Granville place, at 1 p. m. Friday.

WILL SEEK $5000 FOR PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Committee to Meet Tomorrow to Plan Raising of Fund in St. Louis.

The St. Louis Physical Education Committee will meet at noon tomorrow, at the call of Mrs. L. H. Littlefield, vice chairman, at room 705 Equitable Building, to plan for the raising of at least $5000 in St. Louis for the promotion of physical education in the schools of the State. State Superintendent Lee and Dean Elliff of the University of Missouri, chairman of a committee of the State Teachers' Association, appointed to co-operate, will be there.

It is intended to have committees representing the teachers, doctors, dentists, and the Rotarian, Kiwanis, Lions and other organizations solicit these groups.

The work in the State is done under a law passed in 1921 for the teaching of health, the supervising of playgrounds and the physical education directly of 400,000 children outside of the larger cities and indirectly 350,000 in St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph, which cities have special charters for this work.

One Cent a Scholar a Year.

The support asked is only a cent a scholar a year. The raising of $5000 here has been indorsed by the Chamber of Commerce. Henry S. Curtis is State Director of Physical Education.

A sportsmanship code, training rules and method of awarding high school letters have been drawn up by a committee composed of the State director, Athletic Coach T. C. Reid of Warrensburg, and H. R. Shepherd of the Manual Training High School, Kansas City, for the use of the State High School Association, steps toward the organization of which were taken at a meeting in St. Louis Dec. 12. The constitution, including the code, requires a final vote from the Superintendents in February, but is being put into operation at once.

Sportsmanship Code.

The code provides that in April of each year, a sportsmanship vote shall be taken by the high schools in each of the district leagues. Leaving itself out of consideration, each high school will send in to the district chairman (or secretary) their first, second and third choices for sportsmanship honors. This vote will be based on the conduct of the team, the student body and home partizans, but primarily on the two former. First choice will count three, second choice two and third choice one. The district chairman (or secretary) will on the basis of this vote compute the score of each school and mail the same to each member of the league and to the State Department of Education. This rating shall be considered in all protests against teams and shall be a matter of record in the office of the State Superintendent.

A sportsmanship banner will be given or reassigned each year by the league to the high school receiving the highest vote.

PARENT TEACHERS OF SEVEN COUNTIES TO MEET FEB. 12-13

Sessions in Granite City Y. M. C. A. Building Will Open With Dinner.

District 14, Parent-Teachers' Association of Illinois, will hold its annual convention in Granite City on Feb. 12 and 13. Seven counties will be represented.

Mrs. M. M. Arnsparger, principal of the McKinley School, is general chairman of the program. The counties to be represented, and which will send more than 600 members, include Madison, St. Clair, Clinton, Washington, Perry, Randolph and Monroe. Two hundred and fifty members of the association are members of local associations in the schools here.

The conference will open at 6:30 o'clock the evening of Feb. 12 with a dinner in the new Y. M. C. A. building. The building will serve as headquarters for the conference.

LITIGATION OVER ESTATE ENDS

Man Withdraws Appeal From Order Revoking Will.

By the Associated Press.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 16.—Litigation over the will of Archibald McArthur, who died here last June, has been ended by attorneys for George E. Rafferty of Jacksonville, withdrawing his appeal from the recent decision of Judge Dubose in Circuit Court here, revoking the probate of the will. The action was taken late yesterday.

The will was contested by Luther McArthur, a nephew, representing a score of relatives. The elder McArthur, from Dodgeville, Wis., had bequeathed his entire estate, variously estimated to be worth $50,000 to $300,000, to Rafferty, cutting off his relatives with $5 each. McArthur came here nearly two years ago and made his home with the Raffertys. The will stated that he had given each of his relatives $5 and left the bulk of his estate to Rafferty because his relatives had "never done anything for me."

Did Not Die of Alcoholism.

John Swengrosh, 70 years old, of 2142 Linton street, who was found unconscious at noon Tuesday in O'Fallon Park, died at city hospital of pneumonia and not of wood alcohol poisoning, as at first believed. The erroneous theory arose from the fact that with Swengrosh was found a bottle of rubbing alcohol, which he used externally for rheumatism. An autopsy performed by the Coroner disclosed the actual cause of death was pneumonia.

Democratic Elections Appointees.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 16.—Gov. Baker today filled the two Democratic vacancies on the Jackson County Election Board. Fred Redford, Independent, was named secretary, succeeding Albert M. Ott. J. B. Yankee of Lone Jack, Mo., was appointed to succeed Brown Harris. The terms are for four years from Jan. 15. Appointment of the two Republican members was announced several days ago by the Governor.

U. S. ART EXPEDITION IS SAFE IN TURKESTAN

It Has Crossed Karakorum, Sasser and Kardong Passes in Mountains.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—News has been received by the Roerich Museum of the safe passage of the Roerich art expedition over the Karakorum, Sasser and Kardong Passes into Chinese Turkstan. The cable, coming by way of Misguir, India, probably was dispatched by courier. Anxiety has been felt for the expedition, in view of the fact that these passes are the most difficult in the world, each being higher than Mont Blanc, and because the weather this season has been unprecedentedly severe.

The caravan of the expedition is perhaps one of the largest assembled, consisting of about 100 pack horses, in addition to riding mounts, 16 mules, 16 yaks and also mountain rams. The yaks and mountain rams are used over the highest passes, as the horses are unable to carry more than their own weight.

The expedition, which left America in 1923 as the first purely artistic expedition into Central Asia, consists of Prof. Nicholas Roerich, Mme. Roerich, and their son, George, who is a distinguished Orientalist of Harvard and the Sorbonne. George Roerich speaks most of the Eastern languages, including Tibetan, Chinese, Pali and Sanskrit. There also is a staff of about 60 natives consisting of Tibetans, Kirghiz, Ladakists and others.

The expedition has already sent to New York more than 150 paintings, covering an entire panorama of the East and including paintings of some of the most sacred legends. In addition, the expedition has gathered one of the most remarkable collections of Tibetan sacred Banner-paintings from the monasteries. Included among them are several completed by the artist of the Tashi-lama, the religious head of Tibet. Last year, on his mysterious flight from the monastery, unprecedented in history, the lama took with him only one painting, a duplicate of which is included in the collection.

In addition to their artistic endeavors, the expedition has affirmed the existence of remarkable legends and writings of the East. Some of these concern Christ and other Western teachers. Reports of these have been received and one of the immediate objectives of the expedition will be to obtain further material existing in the Eastern monasteries written contemporaneously with Christ.

Prof. Roerich, an artist, has lived in the former home of the Dalai Lama, where he completed many of his Himalayan paintings. His remarkable interpretations of the Eastern languages as well as his understanding of the East have proved the greatest factors in aiding him to obtain material not heretofore shown to Westerners. In addition, the expedition has translated many writings concerning the Buddhist teachings not heretofore translated, and concerning Buddha, Confucius, Lao-Tze and others.

The present route of the caravan is considered the most unfamiliar in the world. The three passes are each more than 18,000 feet in height. Although Karakorum is the highest, being 18,209 feet, the Sasser Pass is the more difficult due to the glaciers which are full of deep crevices.

FORMER MOTOR CYCLE OFFICER SUES FOR PENSION

Leo Chamblin Dismissed for Disability Following Accident After Six Months' Service.

A mandamus suit was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Leo Chamblin, 5520 Easton avenue, a former motor cycle policeman, to compel the St. Louis Police Pension Association to pay him a pension. He was appointed to the police force April 21, 1923, and was dismissed May 29 last because of disabilities, due to injuries suffered by him in an accident at Union boulevard and Enright avenue, Oct. 30, 1923, in the discharge of his duties, his petition says.

His attorney, Eugene J. McMahon, said that Chamblin had joined the Police Pension Association, which prior to his dismissal had not been formally incorporated, and had paid $14.50 in dues which later was refunded to him. The association was incorporated Sept. 8 last.

Chamblin is 34 years old and has five children, his attorney said. At the time of his dismissal he was receiving a salary of $2160, and he says he is entitled to a pension of from one-fourth to one-half of his salary. Last year he obtained a verdict of $1000 from a jury in Circuit Court in a suit growing out of his injuries.

SAYS TENDENCY IS TOWARD CENTRALIZED GOVERNMENT

Senator Wadsworth Tells Women's Republican Club Prohibition Is Revolutionary Expansion.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Giving an estimate of the tendencies of Government and reviewing new functions since the Roosevelt administration, United States Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr. today predicted a "great imperial government at Washington" if the tendency toward centralization of power there is to continue. He was the principal speaker at the fifth annual luncheon of the Women's National Republican Club.

As instruments of the extension of power he cited the Federal Trade Commission, the Federal Farm Loan Board, the Shipping Board, Federal Water Power Commission, the Federal Reserve System and the organization for supplying Federal aid in road building.

Senator Wadsworth characterized the prohibition amendment as a "revolutionary expansion of power."

Voice of Union Labor and Radical Press

THE COAL STRIKE.

(From the Illinois Miner, Organ of United Mine Workers of America.)

There are a number of plans for settling the anthracite strike floating around just now. The most sensible we have seen is the one put out by the Committee on Coal and Giant Power, with headquarters at 70 Fifth avenue. Some of the most progressive engineers and economsts in touch with the intricacies of the coal business are on this committee.

In brief, the plan provides a raise in the wages of day men, the worst paid in the industry, this raise to be met by a slight increase in the cost to the consumer, imposed only by those companies which have not been earning 10 per cent. Further, a committee of operators and miners is to go into all the facts of the industry and lay a firm basis for futfure negotiations.

The miners have already shown that they are willing to discuss any plan that seems to have good sense in it. And the operators have shown as plainly that they will not discuss any plan at all that roes not carry with it refusal to grant the check-off and contain their beloved arbitration gag.

The hard-boiled bunch that run the hard coal mines have foreheads of brass when they attempt to revive the arbitration joke. Every one who knows anything about the setbacks that the miners have always suffered whenever they agreed to arbitrate, knows that they will not be burned at the fire again.

The operators certainly pulled a big bone when they turned down Gov. Pinchot's proposals so flatly. And now they are trying to get out of it and to persuade the big capitalist sheets of the East to save their faces by using costly paid advertising.

It would be interesting to figure out just how much of the anthracite bill paid by the consumer goes into propaganda, the fees of high-salaried publicity men, lawyers and expert union busters. Taken with the way they waste men and materials, it might easily be found that an end of these practices could be the beginning of a living wage for the majority of the hard coal diggers.

CAPITALISM A FAILURE.

(From the Milwaukee Leader, Socialist.)

In Minneapolis the community fund for charitable purposes is $1,150,000. It is somewhat less in Milwaukee, but a vast sum just the same. In other cities the amounts are much the same, in proportion to population.

The figures would seem to indicate that the community funds alone amount to about $2.00 per capita for charity. And of course there is a great deal of charity dispensed by individuals and some by organizations—outsdie of community funds.

Can any fair-minded person look upon all these colossal sums raised for charity without realizing that there is something wrong with our civilization?

So long as the need exists, it is necessary that the funds be raised and used for charitable purposes. The victims of society should not be permitted to starve and freeze and go entirely without aid. Too many of them suffer greatly even with the aid of charity. So, this is not intended as a knock for the charity organizations.

But it is decidedly intended as a knock for the social system which makes charity a necessity. The stupendous sums needed for chairty are alone suffcent to prove beyond question that the present social system is impracticable. It is a failure. Let's supplant it with something better.

FASCIST CELLS IN AMERICA.

(From the Illinois Miner, Organ of United Mine Workers of America.)

The Washington Government has given Mussolini permission to start Fascist cells in the land of the free and the home of the brave, where democracy rules triumphant so long as Wall street can use it in its business.

Mussy has told the Italian consuls in the United States to get busy and open up reading rooms for Italians in America. These Italians are to be taught to form Fascist cells, to make propaganda for Fascism in America, to glorify the superior merits of government by murder.

No doubt Mussy's teachers will tell Italians in America that the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor ought to come down, because it is an insult to Fascism.

Mussy says that Americans have always been Fascists at heart and have always preferred to settle public issues by violence rather than by political democracy. So they ought to quit the silly pretense of Democratic Government and adopt Fascist dictatorship.

That's the talk, Mussy. Let us know what we should do. Tell us also whether you are going to apply Fascist methods in the International relations, so that everybody will understand how much your signature to the Locarno security pacts or to any other arbitration pact is worth.

UNCLE OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW BETTER.

(From the Milwaukee Leader, Socialist.)

The Director-General of Railroads has finished his job and turned in his resignation.

Have you forgotten that there ever was a Director-General of Railroads?

Well, that's what McAdoo was during the war. The roads were given back to the private owners on March 1, 1920, but there has been a Director-General in charge ever since that time. His duties were to close up the business and settle claims. Who would have thought it would take so long to do that?

The railroads, you will remember, said the roads were turned back to them in terrible condition. They filed claims against the Government for a total of $1,014,402,000 for undermaintainence during the time the Government had the roads under its control.

Evidently this immense claim was just another railroad effort to get hold of some easy money, for the roads eventually settled for less than 5 cents on the dollar.

Uncle Sam—the big boob—should have kept the railroads when he had them in his grasp. He'll have to go to the trouble of getting hold of them again some day.

The closing of the Director General's work is the end of a sorry chapter in our country's history.

The second Woodrow Wilson administration was probably the most calamitous period our country ever went through—and the turning back of the railways to private parties was not the least of the calamities perpetrated upon the people of the United States by that odious administration.

LOCAL TAXES PER CAPITA HIGHEST IN FARMING STATES

Bulk of Federal Levies Paid by the Industrial States With New York Ranking at Top.

LIGHTEST BURDEN ON WYOMING PEOPLE

Alabama at Bottom of List in Amount Raised for State and Local Administrations.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Although New York state pays the highest per capita federal tax, amounting to more than double the average for the country, and contributes by far the largest amount annually to the upkeep of the Federal government, the people of Florida, Michigan, Delaware, North and South Dakota and Utah bear a heavier total tax burden in proportion to their income, according to a study of camparative taxation contained in a report just completed by the National Industrial Conference Board.

Out of the $3,229,285,000 Federal taxes raised in 1924, New York state paid $681,406,000, or $62.46 per capita representing 7.13 per cent of the total income of its citizens. For the upkeep of state and local administration, the people of New York spent a similar total amount, $139,190,000 and $530,874,000 respectively, or 7.01 per cent of their total income.

The people of North Dakota, on the other hand, contributed $8,194,000, representing $12.13 per capita, or only 3.04 per cent of their total income for the upkeep of the Federal government but they spent $30,091,000, representing 11.15 per cent of their total income for state and local administration expenditures.

Total tax contributions for Federal, State and local government administration paid by the people of New York represented 14.14 per cent of income, while the total tax burden of the people of North Dakota amounted to 14.19 per cent of income.

Lightest Tax in Wyoming.

The people of Wyoming enjoy the lightest tax burden in the country, their total tax bill for all governmental expenditures amounting to only $15,094,000, representing 9.59 per cent of their tota lincome.

Rhode Island, Delaware and Massachusetts follow New York as the next heaviest per capita payers of Federal taxes, owing, at least as the former two are concerned, largely to the heavy payments of corporation income taxes emanating from companies whose main offices are located in these states.

The lowest Federal per capita taxes are paid by the agricultural states, particularly in the South and the Northwest, which is explained by the Conference Board study as due to the fact that the bulk of Federal taxes consist of income tax payments, and most of agricultural income is exempt from income taxation by reason of personal exemptions.

The average amount of per capita Federal taxes paid by New York for the years 1919, 1922 and 1924 was $80.48 annually; North Dakota, which pays the lowest Federal per capita tax, paid an average of $13.29 for the years indicated. Massachusetts' average was $56.84, Pennsylvania's $42.81, Illinois paid $46.94 and Michigan $52.68 average per annum in 1919, 1922 and 1924.

Industrial States Grouped.

Five leading industrial states, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Massachusetts and Ohio, paid 51.3 per cent or more than half of all Federal taxes in 1919, and 49 per cent, or a little less than half, in 1924. Including five additional industrial states, Michigan, California, New Jersey, Missouri and Wisconsin, the ten leading manufacturing commonwealths have paid two-thirds of the total Federal tax bill during the five-year period, 1919 to 1924.

But comparing taxes paid in 1924 with those of 1919, it is found that some of the industrial states, as New York, Delaware, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and others, which pay the highest Federal per capita tax and contribute most to the support of the Federal government, show a decline in their aggregate tax burden, while the total tax burden of the agricultural states remains high in proportion to income. This, the Conference Board points out, on one hand reflects the benefit derived by the industrial states from recent Federal tax reduction, as they pay the largest portion of the Federal tax bill; on the other hand, it reflects the rising expenditures of state and local administrations, which form the larger portion of the total tax burden in agricultural communities.

Agricultural depression, as in North and South Dakota and Minnesota, has further aggravated the burdensomeness of taxation in these states because of reduced income.

Nevada High in Local Taxes.

Per capita taxes paid for state and local government support average highest in Nevada, with California, New York, Minnesota, Massachusetts, Oregon, South Dakota and New Jersey following in order. The Southern states rank lowest in per capital taxes raised for state and local administration purposes, with Alabama at the bottom of the list. The per capita is relatively severe in some of the agricultural states, particularly in the Northwest and on the Pacific coast.

German Prince Drawing Dole.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 16.—Some former rulers in Germany have obtained plentiful helpings from their country's possessions, but at least one has been left out in the cold. Prince Lippe, former head of the principality of Schaumburg, is drawing an unemployment dole, although he owns the ancestral castle in which he lives.

COUNCIL TO REPORT TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS

10,000 Motorists to Assist in Campaign of Safety Organization.

Plans for "the greatest drive against traffic violators ever conducted by the Safety Council" were announced yesterday by Oliver T. Remmers, president, and Robert E. Lee, vice-president of the organization. The drive will consist in the amplification of a plan already in use by the council, by which members of the Safe Highway Club report to the council violations of traffic rules which they happen to see, together with the license number of the violator.

A record of all violations will be kept in Safety Council headquarters and "cases of serious violation warranting police action will be referred to the police department." About 10,000 motorists will assist in the work, the statement says. The theory of the plan is that the majority of traffic violations are committed in the absence of policemen and many of these would come under the view of the volunteers.

"The Safety Council hopes to discourage careless driving and promote habits of caution through its educational campaign among drivers reported by Cafe Highway Club members," says the statement. "The plan is in no wise a spy-system but is more a matter of motorists, who are members, being on their honor to drive in such a way as to set the example for other drivers. At the same time they will report drivers who display a lack of regard for traffic laws by violating them.

"The great majority of drivers want to be law-abiding citizens, but there is a small percentage of those who drive on our highways who will not obey traffic laws unless they first receive their lesson through paying a fine in the Police Courts, or are called to account in some other way. We believe letters of caution will help in many minor cases and efforts of the Police Department will be of material assistance in more serious ones.

"It is believed this work of the Safe Highway Club will do much to develop a code of ethics among motorists and should result in safer driving, followed by a reduction in accidents on the streets."

Lost purses and money are restored almost daily through POST-DISPATCH wants. "Most persons are honest" and return articles they find if the loss is advertised. Call Garfield 6600.

ST. LOUIS COUNTY FINANCES 'TIGHT'

After Paying Current Liabilities, There Will Be Less Than $54,000 Left.

St. Louis County is going to experience its chronic financial anemia during 1926, it has become apparent. After paying current liabilities out of the estimated total of $1,100,000 collected in taxes last month, the county will have less than $54,000 left.

Previous collections of taxes have been used up by expenses. The December collections represent about 75 per cent of the year's total. The liabilities to be met aggregate $1,046,441.

Included are: County warrants for $414,774 which were cashed by Clayton banks during the year, although the county was without funds to make them good; $200,000 for general accounts due; $261,667 due rural school districts as their share of tax money; $170,000 for the sinking fund on the 1916 road bond issue.

The difference between the $1,100,000 of expected income and the total of liabilities is $53,559, but this balance will be reduced further by payment of interest at six per cent on the warrants cashed by banks and held by them. The interest dates from the varying times of cashing warrants.

County Treasurer Eblo and Collector Rudder said they did not regard the financial prospect as serious. Whatever balance is left, tax collections during 1926 and the practice of letting banks cash warrants will combine to finance governmental activities.

F. W. HOFFMANN DEAD IN WEST

Resident of St. Louis 57 Years Expires in Los Angeles.

Word was received here yesterday of the death Friday in Los Angeles, Cal., of Frederick W. Hofmann, one of the founders of the Hofmann Brothers Produce Co., 700 North Second street, who succumbed to the infirmities of age. He was 83 years old.

Born in Germany, Mr. Hofmann came to America when a boy and in 1860 entered the produce business here with his brother, Ernst. He was active in the Hofmann firm for 57 years, retiring in 1917. Since then he had lived with his son and daughter in California.

DISPUTE OVER WAISTCOAT

Younger Men of Paris Wearing White With Evening Dress.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The Paris winter season is being enlivened by a controversy over the question of white or black waistcoat with evening dress. The younger men most of whom take their cue from London, are taking the part of the white vest, and are wearing it even with the dinner jacket, as well as with full evening dress.

There is plenty of opposition to this innovation, for it is new to Paris. The older generation, especially the staid old gentry represented by Raymond Poincare, seem to think a white waistcoat an immoral invention, comparable to extreme decollete in a woman's evening gown. Nothing but black around the abdomen will do for these conservatives. President Doumergue, it is noted, wears white with his "soup and fish," but most of the other leaders in political life stick to the black vest for all forms of evening dress, particularly the Socialist Deputies, with whom the wearing of the black waistcoat seems to be almost as much a point of doctrine as the wearing of black shirts among the Fascisti.

EMMELINE GRACE TO WED ALTON P. HALL OF NEW YORK

Daughter of Bethlehem Steel Corporation President Formerly Was Engaged to Sir Michael Bruce.

By the Associated Press.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Jan. 16.—Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, and Mrs. Grace, at a dinner tonight announced the engagement of their daughter, Emmeline, to Alton Parker Hall, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Mercer Hall, of New York.

Hall, a graduate of Princeton, played on the 'varsity polo team. He is a grandson of Alton B. Parker. The engagement of Miss Grace to Sir Michael Bruce was announced a year ago, but the engagement was broken off.

Draw the Line!

Natural PRIDE is an admirable trait. Those who possess it are ofttimes wrongfully accused of being "swell-headed."

Such people generally prove to be worth knowing, and as acquaintance grows into friendship their true worth is shown.

But pride ceases when vanity supplants it. Then it is that the "weeding-out" process takes place, with the vain one as the victim.

Ever notice how a peacock "struts" when it spreads its tail? That's a perfect example of vanity.

Be proud but never vain!

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Secretary Jardine advised the Senate Agricultural Committee today that he was opposed to the Caraway bill which would prohibit future trading in cotton and grain because the department is preparing comprehensive recommendations on the subject.

"In the meantime," he said, "the Department feels that the hedging function of the future exchanges is of real necessity in the present-day development of our markets for cotton and grain and that it should not be destroyed until other means of accomplishing the same ends are discovered and established."

SEIZURE OF COAL MINES BY U. S. URGED IN SENATE

Copeland Resolution Would Empower President to Bring About Resumption of Anthracite Mining.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—After President Coolidge had been attacked and defended today in the Senate for inaction in the anthracite suspension, a proposal was put forward that would give him full authority to bring about a resumption of mining.

It was in the form of a joint resolution by Senator Copeland (Dem.), of New York and would empower the President to seize the mines, fix the price of anthracite at the mines as well as wages of employes and compensate the mine owners.

At the request of the author the measure was sent to the Interstate Commerce Committee. The running fire of discussion as to whether the President can do anything indicated rather widespread opposition to any such legislation.

Another Resolution.

Before offering the resolution, Senator Copeland sought action on another, requesting the President to act to end the suspension, but after an hour and a half of debate it went to the calendar under the rules at the conclusion of what is known in the Senate as the "morning hour."

During the debate Chairman Oddie, of the Mining Committee, disclosed that his committee has sent to the Commerce Department for expert opinion, a measure designed to carry out the recommendations of the President's coal commission by giving the Government a greater measure of authority to deal with emergencies in both the anthracite and soft coal industries.

Senator Oddie told the Senate he did not think this was the time to consider that legislation because of the present situation in the anthracite field.

Intimations in the debate of a possible combination between operators and miners to bring about suspension drew denial from representatives of the miners here, who declared there could be no such conspiracy as was hinted at in the Senate discussion.

Miners Welcome Proposal.

Incidentally, these representatives, W. J. James and George W. Lewis, legislative representatives of the United Mine Workers of America, said the miners would welcome an opportunity to negotiate with the Government in preference to the operators.

"We are ready to negotiate with any one who will give us a square deal," they added.

While Senate discussion was in progress, four members of the House from New York City joined in a request to Chairman Parker, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, that this committee take immediate action on the recommendation of the President in his last annual message that he be given power to act when an emergency exists in the anthracite field.

Miners, Gloomy, Watch Developments in Silence.

Press

Activities of national legislators and others at Washington in an effort to find a way to end the anthracite strike is being closely watched by leaders of the United Mine Workers, but no comment is forthcoming from them on any phase of the situation.

President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, who came here to attend a meeting of the miners' scale committee on Thursday, was disinclined today to make any statement on the efforts being made at the national Capitol in the interest of a settlement.

The reiteration by the Government that there will be no interference at this time in the strike was a disappointment to many miners and business people generally. The strike, now in its fifth month, has had a very depressing effect on business in the smaller communities and the prospect that the suspension would continue at least another month made the gloom deeper than ever.

President Lewis will speak at Wilkesbarre tomorrow afternoon and is expected to answer some of the criticisms that have been aimed at him. He will speak in Scranton, Monday, and Tuesday will find him in Shenandoah, at the southern end of the anthracite fields.

ARMS COMMISSION SESSION LIKELY TO BE DELAYED

Preparatory Body May Not Convene Until April Because of Attitude Taken by Germany.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Jan. 16.—Because of articles in the foreign press and because Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany is reported to favor delay until Germany becomes a member of the League of Nations, League officials today said they will not be surprised if the opening meeting of the preparatory disarmament commission is postponed until the latter part of April.

President Scialoia of the League Council and Sir Eric Drummond, the League secretary-general, are in Paris today to attend the opening of the Institute of Intellectual Co-Operation, and may discuss this question with Premier Briand, as well as the subject of Russia's action in accepting the invitation to the disarmament commission meeting only if the conference is not held on Swiss soil.

The League's position is that it has nothing to do with the relations between Switzerland and soviet Russia, but hope is expressed that possible delay in the convocation of the conference will permit of a reconciliation between the Berne and Moscow Governments, as it would be of great inconvenience for technical reasons to hold the disarmament meetings elsewhere. If reconciliation is not achieved, the prevailing opinion is that the Council would abandon Geneva at Russia's behest.

Meanwhile a sensation has been caused by an article in the Vaterland of Lucerne, assailing the Genevese for urging the Federal Government to apologize to Moscow for the assassination of Vaslev Vorovsky and the acquittal of Maurice Conradi, the events which roused the soviets' ire.

The paper charges that the Genevese were among the first to acclaim the acquittal of Conradi, but that, to save their hotels and watchmaking industry, they now want Switzerland humiliated.

If Russia will abandon her boycott of Switzerland and indemnify the Swiss whose property has been sequestrated, the paper adds, resumption of normal relations can be studied calmly.

House Takes Up Request to Pay Expenses of U. S. Delegates.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The House today took up, but failed to reach a vote on a resolution to appropriate $50,000 to defray expenses of American delegates to a preliminary disarmament conference at Geneva. It will be in order again Monday.

Drafted at the request of President Coolidge to permit acceptance of an invitation from the League of Nations to attend the conference, the resolution was indorsed by a number of members.

Chairman Porter of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and Representative Burton (Rep.) of Ohio both indorsed the proposed conference as a step looking to further disarmament of nations and in line with the world peace movement.

Representative Connally (Dem.) of Texas declared the movement for the conference, as that for the Washington arms conference, radiated from the tomb of Woodrow Wilson. "It is the spirit of Wilson that prompts the action to accept this invitation," he said. "In death Wilson is winning over those who opposed him in life."

Tumulty Passes Crisis in Illness.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Joseph P. Tumulty, private secretary to the late Woodrow Wilson, has passed the critical stage of a severe attack of bronchial pneumonia, it became known today.

Altho not a daily occurrence we have noted in the latter years an increasing number of patrons who bring the third generation into Conroys for a piano.

In analyzing this condition we cannot but conclude that these owners of former days not only realized that Conroys alone give Conroy values but also remembered—that their transactions with us were of such pleasant a nature, that introducing the third generation seemed quite the obvious thing to do.

It is perhaps unnecessary to state that this singular mark of public commendation is more than pleasing to Conroys, a musical institution that has not changed hands in almost half a century.

EXPLAINS TESTIMONY GIVEN FOR GANGSTER

County Constable Tells of Finding Bond Made by Patrick Scanlon.

Constable John E. Flood of St. Ferdinand Township explained last night the testimony he gave Friday in Judge Mix's court, which resulted in a jury disagreement in the trial of Patrick Scanlon, Hogan gangster, charged with participation in the $34,700 robbery at the Mound City Trust Co., March 3 last.

Flood testified he had Scanlon under arrest in Ferguson at the time of the robbery. Five officials and employes of the bank declared positively that Scanlon was one of the robbers. The jury stood 11 to 1 for conviction.

Last night, Flood exhibited a much-worn common law bond bearing Scanlon's signature. It was dated March 3 and the contents indicated that Scanlon had been arrested that day for speeding at 42 miles an hour on Florissant road.

The Constable said he had forgotten about the charge against Scanlon when he was subpenaed by the gangster's attorneys and thereupon recalled it. He searched for the bond, he said, and found it in his desk.

"When I testified, I fixed the day of his arrest by the date on the petition and the time by the fact that I drove my daughter to her work and was going home when a Ford passed me at high speed on Florissant road," he explained.

"After I caught them, I held them in my office an hour and a half while I checked on the machine to be sure it wasn't stolen." Scanlon failed to answer the charge in Justice court, Flood said.

COURT HOLDS T. A. BARRAT IS MOTHER'S SOLE HEIR

Judge Holtcamp Gives Decision in Case of Estate Valued At $6000.

Probate Judge Holtcamp yesterday rendered a decision that Theodore August Barrat, 39 years old, of Richmond, Va., was the son of Mrs. Ada Barrat Maguire and as such was the sole heir to her estate, valued at $6000. Testimony was that shortly after Theodore's birth he was taken into the home of former Congressmen Richard Bartholdt and reared by the latter's sister-in-law, Mrs. Laura Koch, until he was 18 years old. Barrat appeared in court yesterday and was identified by persons who knew him.

When Mrs. Maguire died in November, 1923, letters of administration were granted on her estate, at which time the court was informed her closest heirs were several sisters, brothers, nieces and nephews. Subsequently Barrat filed a claim asserting he was the woman's son and only legal heir. Mrs. Maguire was the widow of James Maguire, a printer, and lived at 3518A Vista avenue.

CHARGE AGAINST PROPRIETOR OF ROADHOUSE DISMISSED

Only "Collected" $16 Due Him From Taxi Driver and Passengers, Says.

Charges against three men accused of taking $16 from William Sherman, a taxicab driver of East St. Louis and two passengers, were dismissed yesterday before Justice of the Peace A. B. Lauman for want of prosecution. The men are Arthur Hess, proprietor of Monk's Mound Inn, on the Collinsville road; George Halstead, his bartender, and C. Smith of Fairmount City.

Hess, at the time of his arrest, denied the charge, saying he had only collected what was due to him, since Sherman and his two passengers had dined at the inn and departed without paying their bill. He followed them to East St. Louis, he said, accompanied by Halstead and Smith, and took the money away from them.

Inventory Lists $10,597 Due Estate of Ferdinand H. Manger From Harvey Company.

An inventory of the estate of Ferdinand H. Manger, manager of Harvey's Union Station Resturant, who died Feb. 8, last, filed yesterday, shows personal property valued at $153,065.69, of which $114,042 is given as the par value of stock in various corporations. An account of $10,597.34 balance due Manger from the Harvey Restaurant Co. for services and bonus for 1924 is among the items listed in the inventory.

In his will Manger bequeathed one-fifth of his estate to his widow, Mrs. Clara Manger, 5354 Waterman avenue, and the remainder in charge of trustees for the benefit of his four children. The trustees are Mrs. Manger, Z. J. Mitchell and Fred Harvey, the latter of Kansas City.

Fined $750 for Careless Driving.

On two charges of careless driving, Andrew J. Cope of 4659 Magnolia avenue was fined a total of $750 by Police Judge Beck yesterday. He appealed. According to witnesses, Cope collided with two other automobiles at Fourteenth street and Lucas avenue Dec. 28.

Marvin Again Heads Tariff Body.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Thomas O. Marvin of Boston was designated today by President Coolidge to serve for another one-year term as chairman of the Tariff Commission.

BEGGS' HEIRS DENIED FEDERAL JURISDICTION

Action to Enjoin Wisconsin Income Assessor Remanded to State Court.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 16.—Action by heirs of John I. Beggs, traction magnate, to enjoin John Leenhouts, State Assessor of Incomes, from examining the estate's books in fixing income taxes for 10 years, failed today when Federal Judge F. A. Geiger refused Federal Court jurisdiction in the case and remanded it to the Milwaukee County Circuit Court. Previously, Mrs. Richard McCulloch of St. Louis, Beggs' daughter, had petitioned the Circuit Court to transfer the case to Federal jurisdiction, but Circuit Judge Oscar M. Fritz ruled that such a transfer may be granted only to defendants in actions involving residents of different states. In today's action, Judge Geiger upheld this ruling.

Judge Fritz must now decide whether Mrs. McCulloch is entitled to an injunction to prevent Leenhouts from proceeding with the tax investigation. In the event the courts decide Beggs died a resident of Wisconsin, this investigation is to determine what income taxes and penalties have accrued during the last 10 years and are now due the State from the Beggs estate.

RUSSIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH TO ERECT NEW BUILDING

St. Michael's Congregation Obtains Option on Lot on Ninth Street and Park Avenue.

St. Michael's Russian Orthodox Church, 1125 Hickory street, has announced that it has secured an option on the northeast corner of Ninth street and Park avenue, as a site for a new church, planned to be built in the Russian style.

Almost ever since the present pastor, Archpriest Archip Sirdu, came to St. Louis from New York last October, the church has felt the need of a larger building. Under him the congregation, composed largely of Russians, but containing a few Rumanians, Albanians and Syrians, has grown until it numbers more than 300. The room now available for the worshipers is but 30 feet square.

Archpriest Sirdu formerly was chief administrator of all Orthodox churches in Canada. He was born in Bessarabia, Russia, in 1872, and was ordained in 1896. He has been a missionary in Siberia, Hawaii and China, and has held pastorates in the Philippines. He came here from Siberia in 1917 because of the revolution.

$500,000 FOR BANANA "ADS"

United Fruit Co. Head Tells of Publicity Campaign Plans.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 16.—That the day of the dictator in Latin-America is done, as well as that of the monopoly grabbing concessionnaire, is the conclusion of Victor M. Cutter, president of the United Fruit Co.

Cutter came to New Orleans to tell the Western Fruit Jobbers' Association that his company expects to spend $500,000 this year in advertising bananas. "I believe that the next ten years will see a remarkable development in Latin-America and road building will be one of the vital factors of that development," he suggested. "America has been lamentably lacking in distributing the truth about Latin-America for a long time."

MAN INJURED IN OIL BLAST

$200,000 Damage Done When Tank Explodes in California.

By the Associated Press.

ELSEGUNDO, Cal., Jan. 16.—One man was injured, it is thought fatally, and property damage estimated at $200,000 caused when an 80,000-gallon tank of distillate exploded at the Standard Oil Co. refinery here today. The cause of the blast has not been determined.

Al Collier, 19 years old, of Inglewood, a gauger, was working on top of the tank when it exploded. The cap of the huge tun blew off, carrying Collier a distance of more than 100 feet. The heavy steel tank was melted almost to the ground. Firemen from El Segundo joined the oil company's fire squad and quickly had the flames under sufficient control to protect the nearby tanks.

Sons of Veterarns' Officers.

Members of the Major Leo Rassieur Auxiliary and the Sons of Union Veterans held a joint meeting and installation of officers at Cinderella Hall Friday night. Maj. Rassieur, now 82 years old, addressed the meeting. The officers of the auxiliary installed were: Elizabeth Quick, president; Mabel Gerding, vice president; Alma Schaar, secretary, and Myrtle Yeager, treasurer. Officers of the Sons of Veterans taking office were: W. L. Frank, commander; Fred Gardner and William Hubel, vice presidents; Henry Kessilring, secretary, and W. G. Hilur, treasurer.

Purported Cancer Cure Chartered.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 16.—The Hoxide International Distributors, Taylorville, has been granted a charter by Secretary of State Emmerson. The object of the firm is to deal in and sell a compound alleged to cure cancer. Incorporators are H. T. Morphy, president; V. E. Taylor, S. A. Peerson, W. E. Carlson and E. H. Bach. A $100,000 libel suit recently was filed against the American Medical Association by the Hoxide Cancer Sanitarium, charging unfounded attacks upon the institute.

MEN'S CLOTHING FROM 1776 TO 1926 TO BE EXHIBITED HERE

Display to Be in Connection With Convention of National Association of Tailors.

An exhibit of men's clothing, tailored from 1176 to 1926, will be a feature of the seventeenth annual convention of the National Association of Merchant Tailors of America, Jan. 26 td 29, inclusive, at the Statler Hotel.

Invitations to historical societies throughout the United States also request permission to lend the garments for exhibition at the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia, June 1 to Sept. 1. The exhibit will include tailored clothing worn by famous men.

Admission will be free, by card, obtainable at convention headquarters or from any member. The garments will be insured, and a police guard will be provided.

Sam Fox, retiring president of the Merchant Tailors' Association of St. Louis, will open the convention. New officers elected Thursday by the local organization, who will take office Feb. 1, are: President, Conrad Peterson; vice president, Vincent C. Sigillito; secretary, John C. Walter; treasurer, George F. Driemeyer. Louis H. Usselman is chairman of the Convention Committee.

FEDERAL COMPLAINT AGAINST PRINTING COMPANY DISMISSED

Firm Drops "Engraving" From Name as Misleading Because Output Is Printed.

A complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against the Plateless Engraving Co., 922 Pine street, has been dismissed, following an agreement whereby the concern promised to change its name to the Plateless Process and Printing Co., eliminating the word "engraving."

According to the Commission's report, the firm is engaged in printing social and business stationery by a special process which turns out a product closely resembling engraving. The process, however, consists merely of printing by means of inked type and the application of a powdered chemical substance to the ink while it is still moist. The Commission's complaint charges that the firm's use of the words "engraving" and "embossed" as applied to its products, was misleading.

ST. VINCENT DE PAUL SOCIETY AIDED 5560 PERSONS IN 1925

Expended $91,000 in Relief Work, Chairman Reports in Making Appeal for Funds.

The Society of St. Vincent de Paul aided 5560 persons in 1576 families, expending $91,000 during 1925, a letter sent out to members and friends, signed by Festus J. Wade, chairman of the Finance Committee, stated in making the annual appeal for the poor.

The society has 2906 members, whose voluntary services enable the organization to spend practically all its funds in direct service to the poor. Members donated $18,885.80 at weekly meetings, and, through conferences, without direct appeal to the public, raised $34,217.99.

Activities included providing medical care for the sick, obtaining pensions for widows, providing needed institutional care and finding employment. Neglected and delinquent children were protected and encouraged by the society's Juvenile Court representative.

BUY OUT MY FURNITURE OR RENT MY APARTMENT—OR BOTH
Because of changing positions I am leaving St. Louis within two weeks and must sell out all my furniture and sublease my apartment. My outfit cost over $1500, and to sell it out quickly I am going to take about one-third its value. There is a large genuine Karpen overstuffed living room suite with down-filled cushions, a two-tone French walnut bedroom suite with fine spring and mattress, rugs, lamps, tables, mahogany breakfast set, complete nursery, etc. Four rooms on the second floor; corner, facing south, in the most exclusive West End section of St. Louis; one block from Forest Park; The rent is much less than $90 a month. You can rent the apartment or buy the furniture all together or separately, or both. Call Sunday afternoon. Lucille Apts., second floor south, 29 N. Buckingham Court. Opposite west side of Forest Park Hotel near Euclid and West Pine.

SEVERAL OFFERS TO LEASE BUTLER BROS. BUILDING

Future of Structure After Removal of Mail Order Concern Interests Realty Men.

SITE BOUGHT FOR NEW BUILDING

Plans for New Edifice Will Arrange for Total Floor Space of Not Less Than 1,000,000 Square Feet.

By Berry Moore.

Realty circles are speculating as to the future of the building at Eighteenth and Olive streets now occupied by Butler Bros., who have acquired a large part of the block bounded by Lucas avenue, Morgan, Sixteenth and Fifteenth streets, for a new big structure.

There have already been a number of inquiries on behalf of prospective lessees of the building with notable interest displayed in each instance. The building is one of the most commodious on a modern scale in the city, available for a major mercantile establishment, for whch it is regarded as unusually attractive, owing to its central location.

Butler Bros. now occupy the building under a lease which will expire Dec. 30, 1927. Both the building and the site, embracing the entire block from Olive to Locust and from Seventeenth to Eighteenth street, is owned by the Joliet Realty Co., of which Lionberger Davis is president, and which erected the building in 1906. Under the prevailing prices of building material and labor, the building, according to authorities, could hardly be reproduced for less than twice its original cost, to say nothing of the increase in ground values in this section.

With the prospect of a material increase in rental, upon the expiration of the lease, Butler Bros. made the plans for the new building.

New Building Plans.

Plans for the new building were disclosed with the filing of articles of incorporation for the Butler Building Co. Tom W. Bennett, president of the Bennett Mortgage Co., who is engineering the project, stated that plans are being made for a building with 1,000,000 square feet of floor space, 270,000 square feet more than is embraced in the concern's present building.

With the northwest corner of Fifteenth street and Lucas avenue, for which negotiations are now pending, the new building will occupy the entire block from Morgan street to Lucas avenue and from Fifteenth to Sixteenth streets. The cost of the building will approximate $3,500,000, according to H. J. Littledale, local manager of the mail order concern.

A strip of ground with a frontage of 40 feet on Washington avenue, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, running through to Lucas avenue, has been acquired for a passageway from Washington avenue to the new building.

The J. E. Kaime & Bro. Real Estate Co. conducted the negotiations for the site.

An Exclusive Forecast.

The fact that a block in this locality was sought as a site for a structure of these proportions was told exclusively in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, the exact location of the block being withheld pending its acquisition, in order to not embarrass negotiations.

Butler Bros. also now occupy an eight-story warehouse building 100 by 225 feet at the southeast corner of Thirteenth and St. Charles streets, which was recently sold by the Mercantile Trust Co. for the Mutual Realty Co. to the Jefferson Hotel Co. They occupy the structure under a lease with a six months' vacation clause.

Realtors regard as significant the fact this is the first structure of major magnitude to be located north of Washington in the district east of Eighteenth street.

Other Deals in Prospect.

Building plans on a large scale were the salient feature of the week. In addition to those already announced, negotiations carrying large building plans for other sites are progressing.

Building plans on a large scale were the salient feature of the week. In addition to those already announced, negotiations carrying large building plans for other sites are progressing.

Negotiations for the purchase of a 40x85 foot lot on Broadway for a six-story addition to the 14-story Times building at the northeast corner of Broadway and Pine, were made public with the sale of that structure to the Quick Pay Life Insurance Co. by I. M. Levitt. The addition will be erected by the insurance company primarily for its headquarters, now in the Holland building, 211 North Seventh street.

The deal for the Times building did not include the ground occupied by the building under a 99-year lease. Negotiations were conducted by H. J. Zeuschel, realtor, with offices in the International Life building.

3000 IN CONTEST FOR MERAMEC HIGHLANDS PRIZE

The new name for Meramec Highlands and the 500-acre tract adjoining, on the Big Bend road and Meramec River, will be announced next Sunday, Jan. 24, according to Ralph F. Bixby, president of Bixby-Smith, Inc., owners of the property.

A recent contest in which this firm offered $500 for a suitable name for the property closed Friday night. About 3000 persons entered the contest. The judges are George M. Burbach, advertising manager of the Post-Dispatch; Edward L. Hill, assistant to the president of the Globe-Democrat; A. E. Kaye, advertising manager of the Star; O. E. Knisely, advertising manager of the Times; Ralph F. Bixby, J. C. Smith, Garneau Weld, Ethan A. H. Shepley and Harold M. Bixby. The plans for the development of the property also will be announced Sunday.

MAJESTIC HOMES IDEA HAS BECOME A REALITY

When the idea was conceived of building what are called "Majestic Homes," it was thought by many to be an impossibility, yet 90 per cent of Gannondale and more than 50 per cent of Los Angeles is sold. Some 200 families are now occupying these homes.

Building material and labor have advanced considerably since this idea was first brought to public attention, and it will be necessary to advance the price of future sellings in order to meet these advances in cost. There is considerable work being done by the corporation, in the way of completion of landscaping, installation of permanent lighting of streets, etc., all of which increases the value of these Majestic communities.

$196,724,931 IN LOANS BY INSURANCE COMPANY

The Prudential Insurance Co. of America placed real estate mortgage loans amounting to $196,724,931 during the year ending Dec. 31, 1925, and in the month of December granted loans of $25,500,306.

A report on the year's activities, issued from the home office of the company in Newark, N. J., declares the total is far in excess of the amount disbursed during 1924.

Of the $196,724,931 invested, there were 19,361 loans on dwellings and apartments for a total of $105,396,664. Loans on other city property amounted to $55,569,750.

In 1924, there were 17,462 such loans made in the United States and Canada, for a total of $82,912,773.

CORNER AT MANCHESTER AND TAYLOR AVENUES SOLD

Edward W. Grant, secretary and treasurer of the Wagner-Grant-Bell Realty Co., reports the sale of the Busy Bee Motor Car Co. at Taylor and Manchester avenues, to Fred C. Peters for Mrs. Elsie Schacht. This property consists of four buildings and a parcel of ground, approximately 194 feet, on Manchester by 132 feet on Taylor. The sale included the good will and stock of parts and automobile accessories.

Grant reports a new record for his company for January sales, totaling $350,000 in business property, flats and apartments.

WENZLICK CO. REPORTS SALE OF HILLCREST HOME

The Wenzlick Co. reports the following sales for the week: 108 Aberdeen place in Hillcrest, new home of 10 rooms, with 50-foot lot and two baths and garage, for R. L. Woerheide to Edwin J. Sieber and wife; 7230 Lindell boulevard, new seven-room residence and double garage, for E. O. Kimmich to Richard W. Brennan.

2216-26 Morgan street, stores and tenements, with lot 84 by 144 feet, for the Meryl Real Estate Co. to a client of Irwin Fishman; 6239 Elizabeth avenue, six-room bungalow, with lot 50 by 150 feet, for Harry Vollmar to Gottfried Kneubuhl.

2162 Esther avenue, six-room bungalow, now being completed, for Harry Vollmar to Mike and Annie Torpey; lot of 30 feet on west side of Ohio avenue for Louise K. Zippenfeld to John Beran.

Leases were closed as follows: 4142 Olive street, five years, to Filling Station Service Co., manufacturers of tanks for filling stations; 2019 Cass avenue to John Jourdain, mover.

LE GRAND JONES CO. SELLS DENNY PLACE SUBDIVISION

LeGrand Jones, Inc., announces the sale of Denny place to the E. H. Smith Realty Co. of 6625 Delmar boulevard, which intends to subdivide this property into building sites for business and residences. The E. H. Smith company was represented by Lyle Garrison.

The property is located within the new city limits of Kirkwood on Denny road, about five blocks from the heart of the city, served by one bus line on 20-minute service, and four other bus lines within two blocks.

The Smith Realty Co. has a plat ready for filing. Denny place will have 52 lots, which have been graded. Water, electric light and sewer privileges are now ready. It is the intention of the agents to place the property on the market at an early date.

WALTER HEUER OPENS OWN REAL ESTATE OFFICE

Walter Heuer, 22 years with the Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co., of which he was treasurer, has opened an office in the Wainwright building under the firm name the Walter Heuer Real Estate Co. The firm will do a general real estate business. He has had a broad experience in the real estate field.

JOHN C. GREULICH CO. SELLS BUNGALOW AND FLATS

The John C. Greulich Realty Co. reports the sale of a flat at 3912-14 St. Louis avenue for Dr. A. H. Conrad to Francis Maguire and wife for $15,000; bungalow at 3642 Hebert street to William R. and Sophie C. Barton from Louis J. and Hilda Hannibal for $6000.

The new bungalows being built on Oxford lane at McLaran avenue are nearing completion and numerous inquiries have been received from prospective buyers. These buildings are in the new Inglesyde subdivision.

The company reports loans aggregating $2500.

CONTRACTORS SYNDICATE BUYS 30 PAGEWOOD LOTS

Ben Altheimer & Brother Realty Co., agents for Pagewood, at the corner of Page avenue and Woodson road, put on the market a few months ago, report the sale of 1500 feet, comprising 30 lots, to a syndicate of contractors. It is the intention of the syndicate to start building immediately, the type of houses to be on the bungalow style.

The Altheimer firm plans to improve Easton avenue in the subdivision immediately owing to the fact that all of the lots bought by the contractors face on this street.

The terms of sale in the subdivision are $1 down and $1 a week.

R. J. RICHARDSON PRESIDENT OF BUILDING AND LOAN LEAGUE

Robert J. Richardson was elected president of the St. Louis League of Mutual Incorporated Building and Loan Associations last Wednesday. James L. McQuie was elected first vice president, Charles J. Daly second vice president and E. A. Kamp, secretary-treasurer.

A. F. Leonhardt, who has been the president since organization of the league but who was not eligible after a second term, received a vote of appreciation for his work in behalf of the league.

The league now has a membership of 22 associations and was organized for the purpose of keeping the public advised as to sound and safe associations with which to do business.

The league is publishing a monthly magazine, "The Modern Home," of which Miss Dolores Muller, manager of the educational extension department, has charge. The magazine is distributed for the purpose to create home ownership and thrift and has many subjects which are prepared by the Architects' Service Bureau.

The installation of the officers of the league will take place in February at a special meeting.

LOAN OF $75,000 MADE ON WESTGATE AV. APARTMENT

The Franciscus Realty Co. reports having made a loan of $75,000 for the West End Realty & Construction Co., to be secured by property at 853-55-57 Westgate avenue, a 30-family apartment building, three-room efficiency.

This loan was subsequently sold to Little-Moore & Co., who will issue it in serial form, first deed of trust. The apartments will have in-a-dor beds, stoves and ice boxes, very modern efficiency apartment throughout.

SOUTH SIDE REALTY CONCERN MOVES TO 2720 NORTH GRAND

The Foshin, Galbert & Slattery Realty Co., formerly at 3617 South Grand boulevard, has moved into its new offices at 2720 North Grand boulevard.

Business has increased to such an extent that larger quarters were necessary.

BROWN SHOE CO. LEASES PROPERTY FOR FACTORY

The Mullin-Walters Realty Co. reports the following business transactions:

R. H. Haller and H. D. Frank have leased a portion of the seventh floor in the Silk Exchange Building at 503 North Twelfth street, where they will be established Feb. 1. The space is to be used as an office and salesroom for a general line of bolt drygoods. Haller was connected with the Rice-Stix Drygoods Co. for 30 years.

The Brown Shoe Co. has leased the second floor in the building at the southeast corner of Cherokee street and Ohio avenue, which it will use as a factory and cutting room.

The Hatty Hat Co. has leased a portion of the third floor at 1324 Washington avenue, where the space will be used as a salesroom and office. The main office and factory are in New York and Chicago.

The New York Embroidery Co. has leased the sixth floor at 701 Lucas avenue as a factory, office and salesroom.

WOODLAND PARK SOON TO BE PLACED UPON THE MARKET

The Federer Realty Co. reports having closed a deal for a 40-acre tract of land it has sold for the Audrey Realty Co. to a syndicate for a subdivision.

The property is high ground one block west of Kingshighway and runs from Macklind avenue to Hampton avenue and from Finkman avenue on the north to Gresham avenue on the south. The land is nearly level. Its development is under way, some of the improvements having been installed. The land will be subdivided into lots of approximately 35x140 feet each, and will be improved with concrete and asphalt streets, sewers, water, gas and electric service.

The Federer Realty Co. soon will offer the property for sale. Almost half of it has been contracted for by builders and investors.

Opening of the subdivision will be announced later.

BIG BLAST FURNACE LINING ORDER HERE

Parker-Russell Company Gets First Contract of Type Let in St. Louis.

A new stock building is being erected by the Parker-Russell Mining and Manufacturing Co., 3314 Morganford road, to house brick and tile for the filling of an order from the Midland Coke and Iron Co., Granite City, for stove-lining in its blast furnaces.

This order is said to be the first one placed in St. Louis for blast furnace lining material. In the past, brick and tile for this purpose have been imported from the East. This order will require 180 carloads of material. It was placed by the Riter-Conway Co. of Pittsburg, a large builder of blast furnaces.

The Parker-Russell Co. is testing a new firebox in its kilns as a smoke prevention device, and has obtained good results thus far. Success in this undertaking would go far to show that the smoke nuisance is not, as has been supposed, connected inseparably with the brick industry here.

Industrial activity in this section has been stimulated greatly by the plans of the Koken Barber Supply Co. for a $2,000,000 plant on property adjoining the Parker-Russell Co. location.

EPSTEIN AND SON SELL 58 ACRES NEAR TAMPA

J. I. Epstein & Son report the sale of 58 acres of land in Florida near Tampa to D. W. Shobe, who will subdivide the property and sell it in lots.

J. I. Epstein & Son also report making three loans aggregating $115,000 in De Mun Park. These loans are part of a total of $1,250,000 in this subdivision.

The firm also reports the sale of 707 and 711 Darst road in Northwood Park, Ferguson, to Mrs. Mary Flechsig of Staunton, Ill. The firm has sold four lots at Hodiamont and Penrose avenues to John J. Cochran. He is building a bungalow there. The sale was made for Louis L. Horen.

CHAUNCEY HEATH BUILDING EIGHT-ROOM HOUSE

Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey P. Heath are building a residence at 7323 Maryland drive, Maryland Terrace, T. L. Johnson, is architect.

The house, which is in the English style, has eight rooms, three baths, a large amusement room in basement, breakfast room, sun-parlor and sleeping porch, with garage for three cars attached on the rear of the house.

The living room is on the eastern part of the house, with the sun-parlor attached, with a center entrance hall 25 feet long with breakfast room at the north end. The amusement room is 28 by 17 feet, with fireplace and hardwood floor.

It is planned to install a gas-fired boiler and the interior finish of the first floor throughout is walnut.

FOUR FAMILY FLAT ON GOETHE AVENUE SOLD

The Yeckel-Feydt-Earickson Realty Co. reports the sale of 5120-22 Goethe avenue for the Norso Realty Co. to Henry Schmidt. This flat was just recently completed and is arranged for four families.

BUILDING IN U. S. SHOWED GAIN IN LAST YEAR

Huge Development Program in Florida Important Factor in $6,500,000,000 Total.

$115,000,000 GAIN OVER PREVIOUS YEAR

Building Costs for Year Relatively Stable, With Slight Wage Increase and Moderate Material Drop.

Total building operations in the United States for the year 1925 approximated $6,500,000,000, according to the estimate made public yesterday by S. W. Straus & Co., based on official reports from 391 cities and towns. These figures compare with an estimated volume of $5,750,000,000 in 1924.

The Straus report covers 81 per cent of the cities and towns of the United States with a population of 8000 or more. In these centers there was a volume of $4,451,959,840, compared with $3,740,791,486 in 1924, a gain of 19 per cent. In the 25 principal cities in point of building, operations totaled $2,761,070,793, a gain of more than 21 per cent.

Florida Boom Big Factor.

Among the high spots of the year were the following:

Spectacular activities in the South where the huge development program of Florida and the commercial activity throughout the Southland was reflected in a 50 per cent building increase over 1924.

A gain throughout the East of 19 per cent.

A substantial, well distributed gain in the great central district where the 1924 volume of construction, itself about 2 per cent below that of 1923, was exceeded by 15 per cent.

In the Pacific West a recovery of 6 per cent over 1924 and a return to the 1923 level of building.

December Record Broken.

The greatest December on record, 15 per cent above December, 1924, following four fall months of exceptional activity.

Sufficient volume of building already permitted for or contemplated to give definite assurance of a very high rate of activities for several months to come.

A year of relative stability in building costs with slight increases in building wages practically offset by moderate declines in the prices of some building materials.

In the building material market a prospect for the next few months of firmness with the possibility of price increases.

The 25 cities reporting the largest volume of permits in 1925, compared with the previous period, follow:

	Year 1925.	Year 1924.
New York	$1,020,655,076	$837,661,941
Chicago	363,794,050	296,893,985

WILLMORE ACTIVITIES AID UNIVERSITY CITY

Firm Developing Three Tracts in Rapidly Growing Section

The University Hills, University Park and University Park No. 2, being developed by the Cyrus Crane Willmore Organization, Inc., with offices in the Boatmen's Bank Building, have been important factors in the rapid growth of University City, of which they comprise large areas located in the heart of this district. The present school enrollment in University City is 60 per cent greater than the previous year, while dwellings and apartments were built during the year sufficient to house 731 families. An additional bond issue was authorized in order to obtain funds for additional school buildings. Two school buildings are under consideration for sites adjoining the Willmore addition.

The three subdivisions being developed by the Willmore company offer sites for 300 additional home and apartment buildings. Streets, sidewalks, curbing, sewers, together with all other improvements, have been installed in University Hills and in University Park. These have been closely followed with buildings that dot the entire properties. In University Park No. 2, which is restricted for two and four family dwellings, improvements are to be installed of a similar character to those in the other districts in order that the purchasers in that section may proceed with their building plans. University Park No. 2 is well located, there being no location in the entire district which is more than two blocks removed from street car accommodations, with two city parks at two corners of the property and with the plan for the new school buildings above referred to for another corner of the property.

This is said to be the last remaining property suitable for the type of development for which it is restricted, namely, two and four family dwellings. Its popularity is shown from the fact that it almost entirely sold during the few months it has been on the market.

Cyrus Crane Willmore, president of the company, stated that the salesmen were now closing contracts for the balance of the lots in University City before the activities of the selling organization were directed toward another part of St. Louis. The company has built up a reputation for thoroughness in its operations, completely selling out all of its properties before negotiating for others. It is also a marked fact that the purchasers in the Willmore properties are almost entirely utility buyers, there being very few instances of speculation, although it is stated also there are outstanding cases of excellent profit having been made by purchasers through the resale of their properties by the Willmore organization.

Because of the several types of buildings under construction in the various properties of the Willmore organization, considerable interest is being displayed on the part of the public. In the residential section are to be seen homes of Colonial, English and Spanish types. In the bungalow district are Italian and English cottages and in the two and four family dwelling section many interesting buildings of this type are drawing considerable attention. Delmar boulevard leads directly to the property either by street car or bus.

J. S. FEYDT JR. RE-ELECTED TO REAL ESTATE EXCHAGNE

At a regular meeting of the board of directors of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, held on Thursday afternoon, Julius S. Feydt Jr., formerly vice president of the Yeckel-Feydt-Earickson Realty Co., was elected to active membership in the Exchange as an individual. Feydt's severance of his connection with the Yeckel-Feydt-Earickson company automatically terminated his directorship in the exchange. However, upon his election as a new member he was re-elected to succeed himself as a director for his term expiring April 20, 1926.

Eugene F. Falkenhainer, real estate loan officer of the Insurance Bank, 1501 Locust street, and the Gerhart-Braun Realty Co., 107 North Seventh street, represented by Thomas S. Gerhart, its president, were also elected to "realtor" membership in the exchange.

SUBDIVISION PLANNED AT GEYER AND ESSEX ROADS

The Rengel-Weber Realty Co., 3127 South Grand boulevard, reports the sale of a 54-acre tract at Geyer and Essex roads, Kirkwood. The Essex road frontage was owned by Miss Kate Hegel of Hynes, Cal., and the remaining 44 acres by a client of the firm. The purchase was made by a syndicate of subdivision realtors of St. Louis, who are planning a subdivision in the near future.

The firm also reports the sale of a six-family apartment at 5652 Cates avenue for Walter Weinstock to William F. Peikert; sale of three double flats located near Lemp and Wyoming; double flat at 4516-18 Labadie avenue for a client to Ingeborg Lund; lot on Rhodes avenue for August Eisel to a client; flat, 2751 Shenandoah avenue, for Helena Strahl to Mathias Till; lot on Hanover street, St. Louis County, for Henry Deekento to John T. Ott; lot on Rhodes avenue for Louis J. and Lena Wenneker to a client.

MAURER-GHIO-BEFFA FIRM SELLS OLIVE ST. PROPERTY

The Maurer-Ghio-Beffa Realty Co. reports the following sales: Northeast corner of Twentieth and Olive streets, consisting of three stores, three flats and three houses, lot 85 by 110 feet, for Maxine Realty Co., represented by Cornet & Zeibig Trust to Frank Dallavalle. This property is now under the management of the Maurer-Ghio-Beffa Realty Co.; 4454 Delmar boulevard, an eight-room residence, for Mr. and Mrs. Everett R. Riggs, represented by Reddin Realty Co., to a client of the office; 5034-36 Delmar boulevard, a four-family flat, for Mr. and Mrs. John J. Lodenkamper, represented by Frank J. Frick Real Estate Co., to Paul Orsi; 1818 Belle Glade avenue, flat, for Mrs. Kate Snyder to a client; 804-06 Ann avenue, eight-family tenement, for Richard Dotta to a client of the John Abbott Real Estate Co.; 913-15 Madison street for a client to Albert F. Brinkman, represented by the Frank J. Frick Real Estate Co.

REALTY REPRESENTATIVE ON PUBLIC ECONOMY BOARD

The directors of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange have appointed William W. Butts, first vice president, as a representative on the home owners group of the General committee of the Association for Economy in Public Expenditures. The committee will meet at Kansas City Jan. 21 to draft a program.

FOUR BRICK FLATS SOLD ON ARLINGTON AVENUE

The John A. Watkins Real Estate Co. reports the following sales:

Four three-room brick flats, 1469-71 Arlington avenue, for Samuel W. Hughes of New York to Etta Marcus for $9000.

Janitor Missing Since Jan. 2.

Miss Carol Bates of 5231 Waterman avenue, secretary of the Missouri Welfare League, yesterday asked police to find William Bohn, janitor at the apartment in which she resides. Bohn, who is about 65 years old, has not been seen about the building since Jan. 2, when he left to go to a physician, having complained of lumbago.

Mayor to Address Jewish Club.

Mayor Miller and Judge C. W. Holtcamp will address the Jewish Orphans' Home Club at a meeting Wednesday night at Harburger Hall, 729 North Kingshighway. The annual election of officers will be held and a new building program will be submitted to the members.

WEBSTER GROVES TRACT IS NAMED GLEN PARK

Old residents may recall the name of Glen Park in Webster Groves. Glen Park was a tract of about 180 acres composed of lots 1 to 9, inclusive, bordering on what is now Newport avenue on the north, Bompart avenue on the east and Lockwood avenue on the south. Numerous years ago the Webster Park Realty Co. acquired lots 1, 3, 6, 7, 8 and 9 and developed them into Webster Park. The new Eden Seminary is now on the original lot 5 of Glen Park.

Blocks A, B, and C of Webster Park, containing 30 lots, being the original lot 1 of Glen Park, was acquired from the Webster Park Realty Co. by Judge James P. Dawson in 1906. He then erected a large home on the southern end. This home is now used as a girls' school.

Part of this tract on the north, fronting on Newport avenue, has recently been purchased by the S. & H. Realty Co., 1815 South Broadway, and it has named it Glen Park Homesites. The S. & H. Realty Co. is proceeding with the development of the property.

Colorado

A WONDERFUL opportunity for young farmers and others who have only a little cash. Highly cultivated, irrigated farms, some with buildings, in Arkansas Valley, Colo., on payments less than rent; only 10 per cent down and 34½ years to pay balance, 5½ per cent interest. These lands have been cultivated for past 20 years, and last year produced per acre: 3 tons alfalfa, 10 tons beets, 49 bushels barley, 77 bushels oats, 39 bushels spring wheat, 47 bushels winter wheat; dairy operations attractive; local milk condensaries and creameries assure constant market. Feeding lambs and other livestock profitable. Swine bring excellent prices when bred for early farrowing and early market. Beet sugar factories contract for all beets grown, making beets an attractive cash crop. Alfalfa and flour mills and grain elevators furnish local market. Modern schools and churches; good roads; excellent climate. This opportunity and the reasonable terms we make you independent in a few years. We are not in the land business and are anxious to get the best of our land in hands of good farmers who will cultivate same to best advantage to themselves and this community. For full particulars write AMERICAN BEET SUGAR CO., 31 Land Bldg., Lamar, Colo. (c99x)

SELFRIDGE FIELD MAJOR TO MAKE POLAR FLIGHT

Commander as Unofficial Observer, Will Claim for U. S. Any New Land Discovered.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Maj. Thomas G. Lanphier, commanding officer of Selfridge Field, Michigan, and leader of the army pursuit squadron, has been granted a four months' leave to join the Detroit Aviation Society transpolar flight in the spring.

Capt. George H. Wilkins, who will command the flight, says Lanphier had been considered as a member of the party from the start, but this had not been made public until it was certain the leave would be granted.

Lanphier will join the expedition as an unofficial observer and adviser, at Point Barrow, Alaska, the starting point. In case new land is discovered he will be asked to claim it for the United States.

Lanphier was a Captain of infantry during the World War and learned to fly in France during 1918. He commanded a squadron of six army planes, which flew from San Antonio to Porto Rico and Washington in 1922; later led the pursuit plane expedition from Selfridge Field to Miami and return, and spent last winter in an intensive study of flying under Arctic conditions with his squadron in Northern Michigan. He has been commandant of Selfridge Field since 1924.

PINCHOT AND U. S. DRY AGENTS IN CO-OPERATION AGREEMENT

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Establishment of a thorough basis of co-operation in enforcement of prohibition in Pennsylvania was announced at the Treasury today after a conference between Gov. Pinchot, Secretary Mellon and Assistant Secretary Andrews.

The Pennsylvania executive agreed to submit all evidence in his possession in support of his claim that the diversion of alcohol in Philadelphia has been extremely great.

The conference was described by the Governor as a harmonious discussion in which a free exchange of ideas as to ways and means of correcting conditions took place.

"I pointed out to the Secretary," Gov. Pinchot said, "not only the enormous increase of 50 per cent alcohol production in the Philadelphia district from 1924 to 1925, but also that large numbers of Federal permitees are evidently engaged in diverting alcohol.

"For example, I told him of one tobacco company which gets alcohol enough each year for tobacco sprays to treat twice the crop of the United States, and half that of the rest of the world."

Gov. Pinchot in conversation with newspaper correspondents later brought in the name of W. L. Mellon of Pittsburg and gave the inference that the Pittsburg members of the Pennsylvania Assembly were under Mellon's control.

LA FOLLETTE RESOLUTION SEEKS DATA ON MEXICO

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Senator La Follette, Republican, Wisconsin, today introduced a resolution asking the Secretary of State for information concerning the conditions under which American recognition was granted to Mexico.

The resolution would particularly request information on agreements regarding exploitation of petroleum deposits and other natural resources.

In a statement Senator La Follette said the controversy between the United States and Mexico over the Mexican land law and petroleum bill "threatens to be serious and may cause a definite break with the Mexican Government" and the Senate is entitled to full information.

Immediate consideration of the resolution was blocked by Senator Curtis, the Republican leader.

The Mexican embassy announced today that the Mexican reply to the note of Ambassador Sheffield dealing with the land law would be delivered to the Ambassador in Mexico City within two or three days. Pending the delivery op this note, which will set forth the opinion of the Mexican Government on the land and petroleum laws, the embassy will not issue any statement here.

FORMER HELEN KELLY GOULD AND HUSBAND SAIL FOR EUROPE

Asked Where They Will Reside, She Twice Says Paris and He Twice Says New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Undecided whether she will spend the most of her time in Paris or New York, the former Princess Vloria, nee Helen Kelly Gould, sailed today with her new husband, O. M. Burke, on the liner Majestic. She was in mourning for her mother, Mrs. Edwin Kelly, who died in December.

In reply to a question as to where the couple would live, Mrs. Burke said "Paris." "No," said Burke; "we'll live in New York. We'll be in Paris only a little of the time.

"I beg your pardon," the former Princess retorted; "I said we'd live in Paris." Her husband promptly replied that New York was his choice.

When she was asked if she did not regret surrendering her title, Burke interrupted to explain that his wife hated titles.

"Every time her maid says 'Princess' she gets fined $1," Burke added.

DINNER COAT AND SMOKING ROBE FOR WOMEN IN PARIS

Latter Comes in Fine Broadcloth or Velvet; Americans Are Buying Them.

Copyright, 1926, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The dinner jacket for ladies, introduced last season, persists, and one Rue de la Paix couturier says he has sold several "robes smoking" to American visitors who already are on ships bound for New York.

The garment is made of fine broadcloth, cut with an elegant waistline and tight sleeves, and is worn with a tight, straight cheviot skirt. Instead of hard collar, black tie and stiffened shirt, a ruffled fichu is worn, in imitation of men's dinner clothes in the past.

A variation is a velvet coat, or even fancy dinner jackets for tea.

Sinn Fein Republicans to Meet.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright 1926.

DUBLIN, Jan. 16.—Eamonn de Valera has summoned a convention of the Sinn Fein Republican organization for March 9 to determine whether Republican Deputies elected to the Free State Parliament shall conform to its limitations, as being in a position to control the lives of a large section of people. Republicans are sharply divided on the point. All agree that abolition of the oath of allegiance to King George is an essential condition of their entrance to Parliament, but an influential section would refuse to attend even if the oath were abolished.

UFLAND, BANKRUPT JEWELER, TO FACE ST. LOUIS CHARGES

Arrested in Germany 14 Months After His Escape, He Agrees to Return With Receiver.

Jacob Underwood Ufland is coming back. The 33-year-old president of the National Jewelry Co., St. Louis, and the Milton Watch Co., New York, who left here 14 months ago to escape creditors with claims of approximately $800,000, has been found in Germany.

Ufland was located in a responsible financial position in Berlin by Louis F. Schulze, receiver for the Milton Watch Co. He tried to leave Germany, but Schulze intervened and a passport was refused him. Schulze then arranged with the authorities to deport Ufland from Germany on a steamer whose first stop would be at New York. Under these circumstance, Ufland confessed defeat and agreed to return voluntarily, leaving Berlin next Tuesday with Schulze.

Reports are current in New York that Ufland and some who had dealings with him, including certain St. Louisans, have been indicted by the Federal grand jury there. District Attorney Buckner said no indictments have been returned, but action will be taken when Ufland returns.

Two Companies Failed.

Ufland left St. Louis on Nov. 13, 1924. Within a month his two companies had crashed into bankruptcy, followed by the failure of five local establishments, the Trauss Jewelry Co., Commercial Building; Morris Singer's jewelry shop, 503 Pine street, and the three retail stores of Herman Rosenthal, on Broadway.

Claims by creditors of the Milton Watch Co. are near $600,000. Total claims against Ufland are approximately $800,000, according to H. A. Gleick, local representative of the National Jewelers' Board of Trade.

Three years ago Ufland came to St. Louis as a representative of the Milton Watch Co. He opened offices in the Arcade Building, and organized the National Jewelry Co., which began as a retailer and ended as a wholesaler. He had an attractive personality and won the confidence of those with whom he dealt. The fact that he was a son-in-law of Jacob Bulova, millionaire watch manufacturer of New York, added to his prestige.

Wife Granted Divorce.

Ufland "borrowed" frequently from the stocks of the Trauss, Singer and Rosenthal firms, according to testimony subsequently given before Referee in Bankruptcy Coles. Sometimes he left a receipt, sometimes he forgot to do so. Also he borrowed large sums on accommodation paper. His affairs were so interwoven with the jewelry companies that all crashed when he disappeared.

His wife, Bulova's daughter, had sued for divorce, Aug. 19, and two weeks after Ufland went away she was granted a divorce, alimony and custody of their child, born after the suit was filed and before Ufland left. Mrs. Ufland has since returned to her father in New York.

Before Ufland left St. Louis he obtained $4200 from a safety deposit box at the Mercantile Trust Co. and had it changed into $100 bills. He is believed to have had this money and a bag of diamonds when he took a train for New York, Nov. 13, 1924.

GRAND JURY ENDS INQUIRY IN PERRY COUNTY BANK CRASH

Former Cashier in Jail in Default of Bond; Other Indictments Are Rumored.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PERRYVILLE, Mo., Jan. 16.—The grand jury called to investigate the failure of the Perry County Bank here was discharged this afternoon. J. H. Kiesler, former cashier of the bank, who was arrested yesterday on eight indictments returned against him Wednesday, is still in jail unable to give bond of $32,500 for his appearance at the April term of court.

Whether the jury voted indictments against other officials of the bank was not divulged, but there was a persistent report that such indictments had been returned.

CLAMOR OVER PRINCE CAROL

Some Rumanians Want Him Back; Others Would Jail Him.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Jan. 16.—Reports have reached Vienna that open agitation in Rumania for the recall of former Crown Prince Carol has led the Rumanian Cabinet to proclaim martial law in six districts.

Further reports have it that numerous civil and military agitators are favoring the imprisonment of Carol.

Boy, 7, Shoots Sister.

By the Associated Press.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Jan. 16.—Seven-year-old Jill Pitts was shot in the right arm last evening when the hammer of a rusty .22-caliber rifle in the hands of her twin brother, Jack, suddenly became loosened. The two children had found the gun in the shrubbery of a neighbor's home and older persons who inspected it thought it was empty and unable to be operated. They were visiting at their grandparents' home.

BLAMES FASCINATION THAT LURES WOMEN FOR HIS ARREST

Los Angeles Man Held in Chicago on Complaint of One That He Brought From the West.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—A fascination that lured women to him despite his hatred for them, was blamed today by Morris Kushner for love affairs which culminated in his arrest at the instance of Miss Bertha Wolman of Los Angeles, who charged that after bringing here here and living with her for three months he deserted her on the eve of their intended marriage.

Kushner, police said, has admitted having one legal wife and two children. "I couldn't marry Miss Wolman. My wife wouldn't have liked it and she's bad when she gets roiled," said the man.

Police said, however, that an affair with Miss Hazel Murphy of Chicago was the real reason for the break with Miss Wolman, who claims she advanced $300 to pay for the trip here from Los Angeles.

"When the women get to buzzing around me I just can't help telling them sweet things, although I have no love for any woman," Kushner said. The matter will be aired in morals court.

DEATH OF AGED PASTOR HERE NATURAL, POST-MORTEM SHOWS

Suit of Indiana Relatives Over Estate of the Rev. J. A. Bailey Still Pending.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOUNT VERNON, Ind., Jan. 16.—The Rev. John A. Bailey, formerly of Mount Vernon, who died in St. Louis June 21, 1924, at the age of 88, came to his death through natural causes, according to a report made today by Dr. W. C. Caldwell and Dr. H. G. Weiss of Evansville, Ind., who conducted a post mortem examination early in December. Exhumation of the body was made at the request of two daughters, Mrs. Lee Ashworth and Mrs. Hattie Hinderliter of Inglefield, Ind.

The Rev. Mr. Bailey left an estate approximating $35,000. His will left $20,000 to relatives, including the two daughters, and $15,000 in equal amounts to Mrs. Nellie Hackel, Mrs. Annie Petrio and the Assembly of God Church, all of St. Louis. The relatives' suit to break the will is still pending in St. Louis.

SUIT FOR $6,000,000 FILED

Two Men Accused of Realizing Sum From Bankrupt Firm.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Suit to compel Thomas H. Hayes and Ramond J. Anderton to rescind a transaction where, it is alleged, they realized more than $6,000,000 from the Fisheries Products Co., was filed in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn today. The plaintiffs are Walter H. Meal and John S. Weskett, receivers of the company in both State and Federal courts in North and South Carolina.

It is claimed that Hayes and Anderton, president and secretary of the company, respectively, sold plants, leases and options on property in St. Phillips, N. C., Lewes, Del., Norfolk, Va., Easthampton and Promised Land, N. Y., to the company and took stock in exchange. This stock, the complaint asserts, was later sold by them for $6,000,000 in a "high tension campaign." Both Hayes and Anderton deny the charge and asked for dismissal of the complaint. Justice Dike reserved decision.

NEW U. S. REFORMATORY OPEN

20 Prisoners From Leavenworth Go to Ohio as First Inmates.

By the Associated Press.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Jan. 16.—Twenty prisoners for the United States penitentiary here are scheduled to leave early tomorrow morning aboard a special car bound for Chillicothe, O., where they will become the first inmates of the National Reformatory, a Government institution now being started to care for first offenders and to relieve the menacing overcrowded condition of Federal penitentiaries.

The 20 "pioneers" at the National Reformatory will be detailed at once to the task of preparing buildings for the receipt of other young first offenders. Witn the establishment of the National Reformatory, the system of having young prisoners confined with old and hardened criminals will be discontinued. Only first offenders and Federal prisoners under 30 years of age will be sent to the reformatory.

MERCIER APPEARS STRONGER

Cardinal Able to Leave His Bed for An Hour.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 16.—Cardinal Mercier was able to leave his bed for an hour this afternoon and his general condition was pronounced satisfactory. The nourishment assimilated seemed to strengthen him. Today he had the pleasure of attending mass celebrated by his own nephew, but it was in the sick chamber.

Despite the protests of his doctors, the Cardinal yesterday conferred with Monsignor Heylen, Bishop of Namur, over the flood situation in that district. He begged the Bishop to inform the people that he was including them daily in his prayers and that he was glad to learn of the progress of the collection of relief funds. Several other visitors called on the Cardinal, who in the past two days has shown very considerable improvement.

Talks on Game Preservation.

Dr. Isaac Lippincott, professor of economics at Washington University, and Mrs. F. H. Littlefield, president of the Eighth District, Federation of Women's Clubs, will address the Izaac Walton League at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening in the Soldan High School Auditorium. They will speak on game conservation.

D. C. NUGENT FUNERAL SERVICES ON TUESDAY

Archbishop Glennon and Mgr. Tannrath to Officiate—Retired Merchant Died at 70.

The funeral of Dan C. Nugent, former president of Nugent's department store, who died yesterday at his suite in Hotel Chase, will be held at 10 a. m. Tuesday from the residence of Mrs. Charles Nugent, 401 North Newstead avenue, to the New Cathedral, where Archbishop Glennon and Mgr. Tannrath will officiate. Interment will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Nugent's store will be closed during the funeral service.

Mr. Nugent was 70 years old. Death was caused by heart disease. He is survived by his widow, a daughter, Mrs. Richard S. Kennard, and two sons, Dan C. Nugent Jr. and Morgan T. Nugent.

He was the last of the four Nugent brothers. Byron Nugent, founder and first president of B. Nugent & Bro., died in 1908. Charles W. Nugent, a vice president, died in 1911, and James G. Nugent, also a vice president, died in 1918. Dan C. Nugent served as president from 1908 to 1919, when he retired, severing all connections with the company. Since then he had traveled extensively.

Born in Canada.

Born in Belmont, Canada, in 1855, Dan C. Nugent went as a youth to Mount Vernon, Ill., to work in his brother Byron's store. While there he married Miss Carrie Casey, who survives him. The brothers transferred their merchandising activities to St. Louis in 1873, opening in a 22x54 storeroom at the southeast corner of Broadway and Franklin avenue. The first floor was the salesroom, and the second floor held the reserve stock.

The brothers worked hard, advertised their bargains and business was good. Larger quarters were needed, and the firm moved successively to 817 North Broadway, to 819 North Broadway, and, in 1889, to the southeast corner of Broadway and Washington avenue. The growing habit continued and in later years the building at the southeast corner of Broadway and St. Charles street was annexed, a subway and bridge connecting the two buildings separated by St. Charles street. An uptown store was established at Vandeventer and Olive streets.

The firm name became B. Nugent & Bro. Dry Goods Co. in 1880 when Byron Nugent wade a partner of Dan C. Nugent. Subsequently James G. and Charles W. Nugent and Fred C. Lake, a brother-in-law, were admitted as partners. Lake, who began working for Byron Nugent when 16 years old, now is secretary-treasurer of the firm. The president is F. A. Cramer.

Interest in Civic Affairs.

One of the largest retail dry goods and department stores in the Middle West, Nugents was consolidated with four other department stores into the National Department Stores, Inc., in 1923, but retained its name. It had $2,000,000 in stock outstatnding, and this was exchanged for stock of the new corporation.

Mr. Nugent's interest in civic affairs was manifest frequently. As far back as 1913 he suggested that the use of the Free Bridge be traded by the city to the Terminal Railroad Association for the use of the Eads Bridge, and negotiations to that end are now under way. Another suggestion, made in 1915, was that the old Union Market, since replaced, be used as a central interurban station, connecting with a proposed downtown loop from the Free Bridge.

In 1916, when there was a movement to establish a civilian army camp in St. Louis, he was one of the first employers to announce he would encourage employes to attend the camp, with full pay for the time they were absent from their regular work. He was proud of the fact that during the war eight young men of the Nugent families were in service, and four young men of the families sought employment at Nugent's that men employes might be spared to their country. His own two sons were in the aviation service.

Member of Clubs.

Other activities were service on the World Fair Executive Committee and on the St. Louis Grand Opera Committee which brought the Russian Ballet to St. Louis in 1916. He belonged to several clubs. The Nugent home for many years was at 3701 Westminster place, but this was sold in 1920.

Honorary pallbearers will include President D. R. Francis and surviving directors of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. Among the honorary pallbearers will be Harry B. Hawes, Fred C. Lake, F. A. Cramer, A. F. Becker, Nathan Frank, F. C. Zeibig, J. F. Farish, J. B. Kennard, George W. Wilson, Joseph D. Bascom, James M. Franciscus, James L. Ford, Dr. Ellsworth Smith, C. W. Scudder, C. C. Wolff, George D. Markham, P. C. Scanlan, Lewis Tune, Lyman T. Hay, Aaron Fuller, Thomas W. Garland, A. B. Lambert, J. H. Hobelman, C. W. Bates and Festus J. Wade. Employes of Nugent's will be active pallbearers.

To Man New Plane Carriers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Captains H. V. Butler and Walter R. Gherardi have been ordered to Pensacola, Fla., next month to take the naval aviators' course, a step which is regarded as preliminary to their assignment to command the new aircraft carriers Saratoga and Lexington, which will be completed late this year.

RETIRED MERCHANT WHO IS DEAD AT 70

DAN C. NUGENT.

SUES OIL FIRM FOR $30,000

Filling Station Manager Charges False Arrest, Following Burglary.

Ralph W. Weeks, 28 years old, 5349 Theodosia avenue, yesterday filed suit for $30,000 damages against the Standard Oil Co., its superintendent, A. W. Mitchell, and George A. Thompson, supervisor, alleging false arrest.

Weeks formerly was manager of a Standard oil filling station at 3938 West Wine boulevard, and following a burglary at another filling station the night of Dec. 30 last, he alleges, he was wrongfully arrested in connection with the burglary and held in jail. Subsequently, he was discharged when a warrant was refused, he says.

COAL AND IRON MERGER IN TENNESSEE $30,000,000 DEAL

Bon Air, Chattanooga and Rockdale Companies Combined.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 16.—With the filing this afternoon in the office of the Secretary of State of an application for amendment of the charter of the Bon Air Coal & Iron Co., was marked the successful completion of a $30,000,000 coal and iron consolidation engineered by William J. Cummins, former president of the Carnegie Trust Co. of New York, who served a term at Sing Sing as the result of the collapse of the trust company. In the merger are included the Bon Air Coal & Iron Co., the Chattanooga Coke & Gas Co., the J. J. Gray Jr. Furnace of Rockdale, Tenn., and minor companies. The consolidated corporation is to be known as the Tennessee Products Corporation.

Robert J. Immerfal, formerly of Chicago, is president of the consolidated corporation. Frederick Leak of Nashville is secretary. Directors of the corporation listed on the charter amendment application are: William Wrigley Jr. of Chicago, John McE. Bowman and Col. Jacob Ruppert of New York.

150 DEATHS IN MEXICAN FLOOD

Relief Committee Says 15,000 Homeless Need Food.

By the Associated Press.

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 16.—A report, received today by President H. B. Titcomb of the Southern Pacific of Mexico Railroad, from the committee in charge of relief of the recently flood-stricken state of Nayarit on the west coast of Mexico, states the loss of life is fixed at 150, property damage $5,000,000 and 15,000 persons are homeless.

"Malaria and other diseases are developing fast," the report said, "among the homeless because of exposure and contaminated water. All crops are destroyed."

Medicine is badly needed to combat the diseases, the report said.

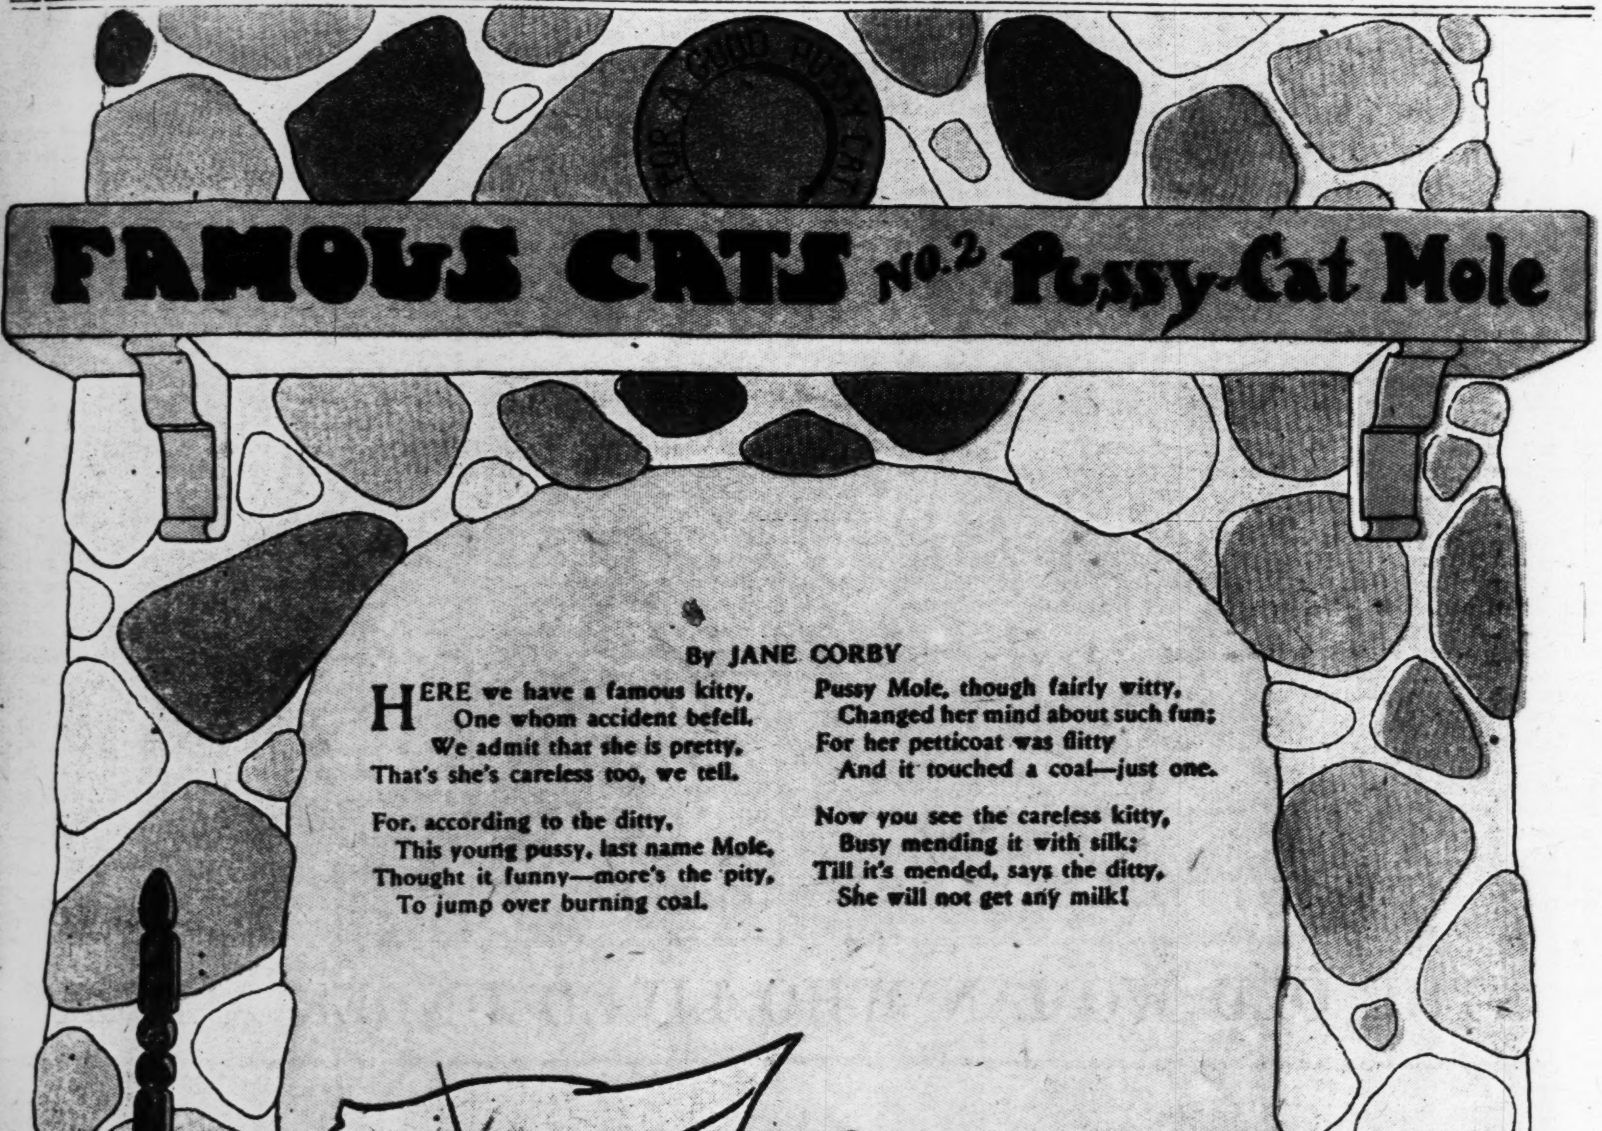
FAMOUS CATS No. 2 Pussy-Cat Mole



FOR A GOOD PUSSY CAT

By JANE CORBY

HERE we have a famous kitty,
One whom accident befell,
We admit that she is pretty,
That's she's careless too, we tell.

For, according to the ditty,
This young pussy, last name Mole,
Thought it funny—more's the pity,
To jump over burning coal.

Pussy Mole, though fairly witty,
Changed her mind about such fun;
For her petticoat was flitty
And it touched a coal—just one.

Now you see the careless kitty,
Busy mending it with silk;
Till it's mended, says the ditty,
She will not get any milk!

Ann Determines to Conquer the Nomes

"THAT seems to me something of a job," said the dragon, addressing Queen Ann, and closing his eyes sleepily. "But go ahead, if you like, and I'll wait here for you. Don't be in any hurry on my account. To one who lives thousands of years the delay of a few days means nothing at all, and I shall probably sleep until the time comes for me to act."

Ann was provoked at this speech.

"You may as well go back to Tititi-Hoocho now," she said, "for the Nome King is as good as conquered already."

But Quox shook his head. "No," he said; "I'll wait."

Shaggy Man had said nothing during the conversation between Queen Ann and Quox, for the simple reason that he did not consider the matter worth an argument. Safe within his pocket reposed the Love Magnet, which had never failed to win every heart. The nomes, he knew, were not like the heartless Roses and therefore could be won to his side as soon as he exhibited the magic talisman.

Shaggy's chief anxiety had been to reach Ruggedo's Kingdom and now that the entrance lay before him he was confident he would be able to rescue his lost brother. Let Ann and the dragon quarrel as to who should conquer the nomes, if they liked; Shaggy would let them try, and if they failed he had the means of conquest in his own pocket.

But Ann was positive she could not fail, for she thought her Army could do anything. So she called the officers together and told them how to act, and she also instructed Tik-Tok what to do and what to say.

"Please do not shoot your gun except as a last resort," she added, "for I do not wish to be cruel or to shed any blood—unless it is absolutely necessary."

"All right," replied Tik-Tok; "but I do not think Rug-ge-do would bleed if I filled him full of holes and put him in a ci-der press."

Then the officers fell in line, the four Generals abreast and then the four Colonels and the four Majors and the four Captains. They drew their glittering swords and commanded Tik-Tok to march, which he did. Twice he fell down, being tripped by the rough rocks, but when he struck the smooth path he got along better. Into the gloomy mouth of the cavern entrance he stepped without hesitation, and after him proudly pranced the officers and Queen Ann. The others held back a little, waiting to see what would happen.

Of course the Nome King knew they were coming and was prepared to receive them. Just within the rocky passage that led to the jeweled throne-room was a deep pit, which was usually covered. Ruggedo had ordered the cover removed and it now stood open, scarcely visible in the gloom.

The pit was so large around that it nearly filled the passage and there was barely room for one to walk around it by pressing close to the rocky walls. This Tik-Tok did, for his copper eyes saw the pit clearly and he avoided it; but the officers marched straight into the hole and tumbled in a heap on the bottom. An instant later Queen Ann also walked into the pit, for she had her chin in the air and was careless where she placed her feet. Then one of the nomes pulled a lever which replaced the cover on the pit and made the officers of the Oogaboo and their Queen fast prisoners.

As for Tik-Tok, he kept straight on to the cavern where Ruggedo sat in his throne and there he faced the Nome King and said:

"I here-by con-quer you in the name of Queen Ann So-forth of Oo-ga-boo, whose Ar-my I am, and I de-clare that you are her pris-on-er!"

Ruggedo laughed at him.

"Where is this famous Queen?" he asked.

"She'll be here in a min-ute," said Tik-Tok. "Per-haps she stopped to tie her shoe-string."

"Now, see here, Tik-Tok," began the Nome King, in a stern voice, "I've had enough of this nonsense. Your Queen and her officers are all prisoners, having fallen into my power, so perhaps you'll tell me what you mean to do."

"My or-ders were to con-quer you," replied Tik-Tok, "and my ma-chin-er-y has done the best it knows how to car-ry out those or-ders."

Ruggedo pounded on his gong and Kaliko appeared, followed closely by General Guph.

"Take this copper man into the shops and set him to work hammering gold," commanded the King. "Being run by machinery he ought to be a steady worker. He ought never to have been made, but since he exists I shall hereafter put him use."

"If you try to cap-ture me," said Tik- shall fight."

"Don't do that!" exclaimed General Guph, estly, "for it will be useless to resist and you hurt someone."

But Tik-Tok raised his gun and took aim knowing what damage the gun might do the were afraid to face it.

While he was thus defying the Nome King his high officials, Betsy Bobbin rode calmly into royal cavern, seated upon the back of Han mule. The little girl had grown tired of w for "something to happen" and so had come if Ruggedo had been conquered.

"Nails and nuggets!" roared the King. dare you bring that beast here and enter ence unannounced?"

"There wasn't anybody to announce me," Betsy. "I guess your folks were all busy. conquered yet?"

"No!" shouted the King, almost beside with rage.

"Then please give me something to eat, awful hungry," said the girl. "You see, the quering business is a good deal like waiting circus parade; it takes a long time to get and don't amount to much anyhow."

The nomes were so much astonished speech that for a time they could only glare silently, not finding words to reply. The finally recovered the use of his tongue and

"Earth-crawler! this insolence to my shall be your death-warrant. You are an mortal, and to stop a mortal from living is thing to do that I will not keep you waiting so long as you did for my conquest."

"I'd rather you wouldn't stop me from remarked Betsy, getting off Hank's back and ing beside him. "And it would be a pretty King who killed a visitor while she was hun you'll give me something to eat, I'll talk th ing business over with you afterward; only, I you now that I don't approve of it, and never

"There was an old woman lived under the hill . . . ." Do you remember the Old Mother Goose rhyme? Here we see her little built right into the hillside, and some of her animals around the outside, waiting for the old woman to appear. It may take her a time to come home, but we can find her if we look carefully. She and three of her famous dogs are hidden in the picture. Can discover them?

Nome King, although he bore an intense hatred toward all mortals.

"What do you wish to eat?" he asked gruffly.

"Oh, a ham-sandwich would do, or perhaps a couple of hard-boiled eggs—"

"Eggs!" shrieked the three nomes who were present, shuddering till their teeth chattered.

"What's the matter?" asked Betsy wonderingly. 'Are eggs as high here as they are at home?"

"Guph," said the King in an agitated voice, turning to his General, "let us destroy this rash mortal at once! Seize her and take her to the Slimy Cave and lock her in."

Guph glanced at Tik-Tok, whose gun was still pointed, but just then Kaliko stole softly behind the copper man and kicked his knee-joints so that they suddenly bent forward and tumbled Tik-Tok to the floor, his gun falling from his grasp.

Then Guph, seeing Tik-Tok helpless, made a grab at Betsy. At the same time Hank's heels shot out

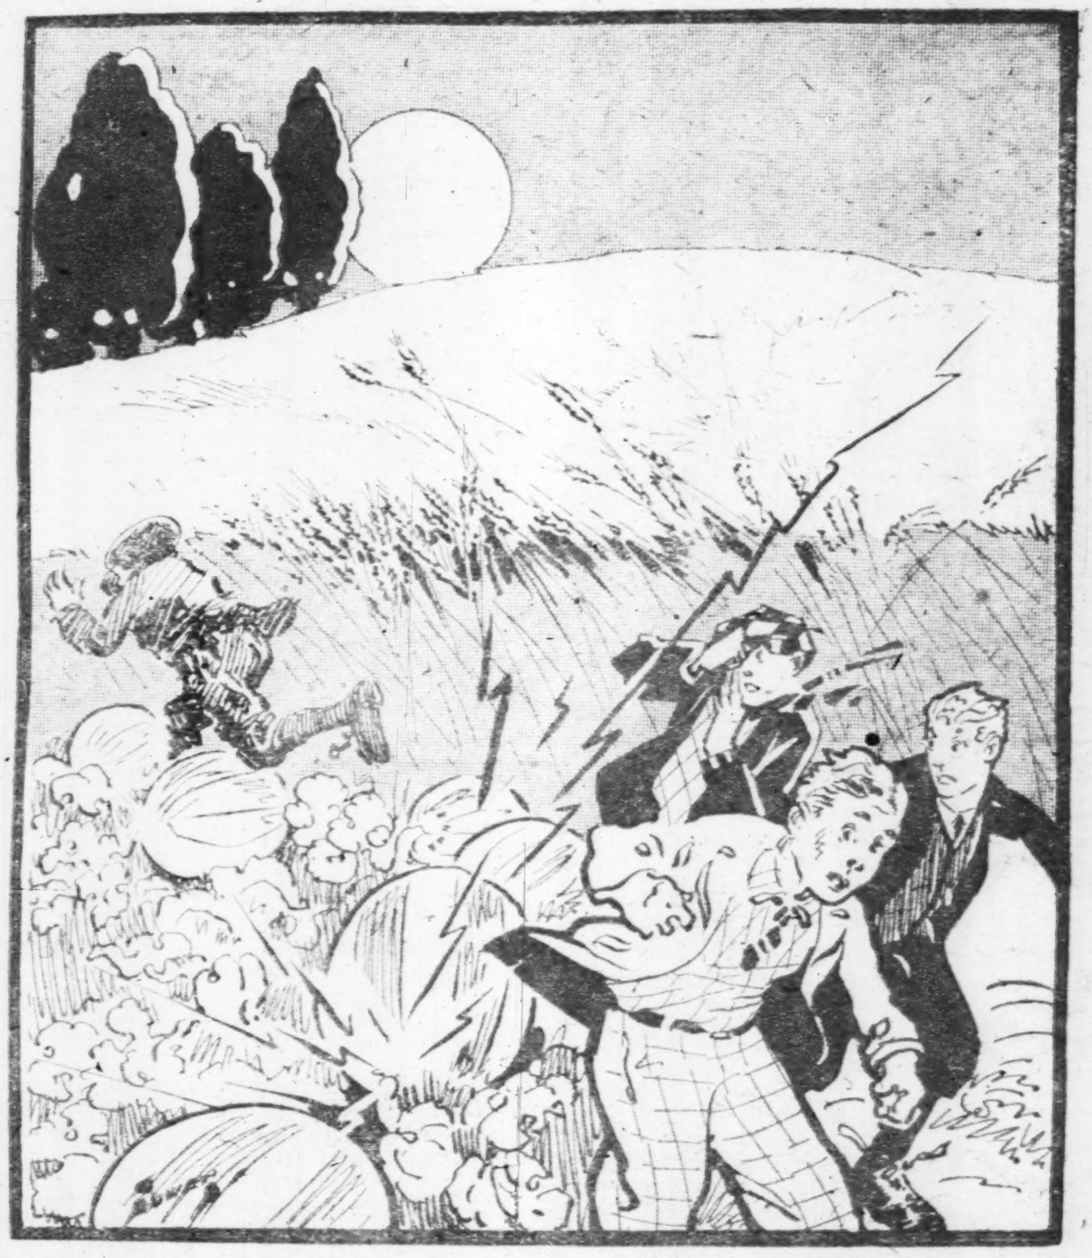
Squire Jobson's Invention

By FRANK A. SECORD



Instantly there was a greasy, crackling sound, a sputtering as of the fuse of a firecracker throwing sparks, and both Bob and Hank yelled with fright.

YEAR after year Squire Jobson raised melons in a patch which he tried to hide by changing its locality so the boys of the neighboring town could not find it. The boys in question were not a bad lot at all, but as the squire was sometimes crusty and never generous, they delighted in showing the old fellow that they could be as smart as he. One season the local paper contained a notice warning trespassers to keep off the property of Squire Jobson, who would not be responsible for what might happen to anybody visiting his acres without permission. "This is the age of invention," the notice concluded. "Beware!"

Bob English and Hank Scott read the notice, gathered a small crowd of their chums together, and the youngsters figured.

"Invention! What can that old skin-flint invent?" Bob sarcastically grunted. "If he can invent, so can we! He means that he has some contraption to keep us away from the patch. Well?"

"He can't scare me!" one of the boys sneered.

With thoughts of some kind of trap or something to give them a fright the boys set out one evening for the squire's farm, not far from town. The melon patch had not yet been located, but Hank Scott remarked, on the way out, that if there was a man who could hide an acre, more or less, of melons from him, such a man would have to get up earlier than Squire Jobson ever crawled out of the hay of mornings.

"Now," spoke Hank, when the boys left a road and approached a wire fence that enclosed the Jobson acres, "there is nothing to watch out for until we get into the fields. He is as likely as not to have the melons right in the heart of a clover patch, it might be in the center of a field of corn, it might be in his small grain—the wheat or oats—nobody knows; but somebody is going to find out. Hope it's in the corn, for we can sneak through tall corn easily without being seen from the road, while to get through clover or small grain would be quite a job, for the moon is pretty busy just now and in the dark we couldn't do anything anyway. Hurrah, now!"

The boys were rather bold. Before leaving town they "checked up" on Squire Jobson and found that worthy seated in the dining room of his home reading a paper; therefore he couldn't be out at the farm. The squire also had, clamped to his ears, a pair of radio receivers; and Bob English giggled that the old man evidently was "listening in" for footsteps on his land. "He evidently thinks," Bob added, "that because his notice was in the paper today, there will be a gang after his old melons tonight and he'll fool them. Well, he's figured partially right, but hanged if I can understand why he didn't come out here and 'plant' himself somewhere!"

"Invention!" laconically drawled Hank Scott.

These lads were all radio bugs and each of them was pretty well up on other more or less common electrical contrivances; therefore the first thing that Bob English did, when he essayed to part two strands of the barb wire fence in order to crawl through to the other side, was to wet a finger with his tongue and gingerly feel of the wires.

"Any juice?" one of the boys inquired.

"Don't feel any."

"How could there be juice on the fence," another ventured. "Nobody could charge a whole farm of barb wire without a power plant, and then he'd have to put on a good-and-plenty dynamo."

"He couldn't 'ground' a section of it, could he? I guess yes!" Bob observed.

"But how'd he know where to do it," Hank asked, "so as to catch us?"

None could answer, but Bob laughed that he wasn't much afraid of any grounded portion of the fence, but would take no chances. "The only ground that old guy knows," added Bob, "is the ground of his farm—especially the melon patch."

Bob stood holding two of the strands of barb wire in his hands, one of his legs being inside and the other outside the fence. Just as he finished speaking the lad let forth a yell, danced several very agile steps and then, tearing his clothing as he got away from the wire, gasped.

"What is it?" several of the boys inquired a little anxiously.

"It's alive!" Bob answered. "The fence is alive."

"Bosh!" Hank Scott growled, touching a strand with one hand and, feeling nothing, grasped another strand with the other hand. "I feel nothing. You're crazy, Bob. Stuck your fingers on a barb and imagined the rest."

Others tried the wires, felt nothing and Bob owned that he guessed he was a little excited.

However, when the boys—most of them at the same time—parted the wires, thus causing the two strands so held to touch others, the whole bunch of them felt just what Bob English did, and all of them ceased their efforts to get over into the field, backed up and looked at one another.

"Well?" Bob grunted.

"Stand back!" Hank cried, snapping one finger against a single wire. Then he tapped two fingers against two wires. His eyes opened wide and the lad exclaimed, "Say, fellows, talk about inventions! That old geezer has us buffaloed, that's what I say about it. There's not a bit of juice on the wires!"

"All right—then go on through and we follow," Bob said, backing up a step. "Lead on, Hank."

And Hank led on. He also led off, for no sooner did he grasp the wires and start through, than once more he received a good hard shock—enough to make him dance a lively jig.

"Enough's enough!" Hank shouted, very angry now. Running to the road he picked up an old post lying loose at the side of the thoroughfare and with this placed against the top wire of the spooky fence, walked over. "That's one way to skin a cat!" he laughed from the other side.

All the others cleared the fence in a like manner and all breathed easier when over.

Before proceeding to locate the melons the lads bunched up to speculate on what happened and how. They could not figure it out, however. Said Bob English, "Well, we're here because we're here. Come on!"

Quickly enough the melon patch was discovered right in a little hollow square of a wheat field, not far from the fence. The moon shone brightly as the boys, none of whom wished to do any real damage, carefully moved among the vines, now and then stooping to thump a likely sample of the fruit.

Not many melons were ripe enough to pick. The boys were not inclined to pull any green ones, so when two large and promising prizes were selected, Bob reached to snap the stem of one, while Hank did the same with the other. Instantly there was a greasy, crackling sound, a splattering as of the fuse of a firecracker throwing sparks, and both Bob and Hank yelled with fright. Dashing through the patch, fire flying in several directions as they went the two lads hurried to ground not covered with melon vines. Following, each moving at a pace that would have done credit to so many frightened rabbits, the others of the crowd got out of the patch, over the fence without stopping to touch a wire or even to think about it, and careened into the middle of the road, where they stood, wild-eyed and with chattering teeth.

"Anybody bring any melons?" finally Bob English inquired.

"Did you?" Hank sneered.

"No, but I brought a couple of scorched fingers."

"So did I, and I also got a sprained knee getting over that fence. Talk about climbing—say, I could have cleared that fence if it had been 10 strands high, I believe!"

Just then old Squire Jobson, in an automobile with a friend, drove up from town. The two men grinned, looked the boys over and, without speaking a word, turned and hurried back to town again.

"And now how did he know?" the boys gasped as with one voice.

There hadn't been a single vehicle on the road in half an hour and neither had anyone passed on foot. Squire Jobson had some means of knowing when things happened in the field, knew just where to come and was satisfied, evidently, that the lads would stay out of his patch, else he'd not have gone back home so readily.

"And old Squire Jobson, of all the men in the world!" dismally exclaimed Bob, when the little crowd of beaten, out-classed, shame-faced boys returned home. On the way Hank Scott solemnly declared, lifting his cap, "I take off my lid to the squire. What'll we do?"

Well, the upshot of a conference was that the boys, all of them, caps in hand, paid a visit to Squire Jobson's home. Bob knocked and acted as spokesman. Said he, when the old man, grinning and taking from his head the radio receivers, appeared at the door:

"Squire, we are here to open our hearts and confess that you are some inventor. We went to your melon patch to get some melons and to show you that we could do it. We own up to that, but we do not own that we would have harmed any green ones or destroyed any vines. We also went to see what sort of an invention you had to spring upon us. You sprung one all right—no question about it. Now we have played square, promise never to bother you again and manfully ask what you did and how you did it. Are you on the level with us, squire?"

The old man didn't grin any more. "Boys," said he, "I admire you for coming here, and we will get to a better understanding now, I hope. Listen:

"When you fellows touched one wire of the fence you got no current, for the very good reason that there was none; but when you touched two and crossed either to another in the fence you closed a circuit to the starter battery in my automobile stored in the old shed at the farm and not far from the melon patch. I put the machine there for the purpose. As soon as the starter operated it pulled a belt on a small shaft and to the shaft I have fastened a telegraph key so that it clicks as it

"Are they," I said,
"Re-lat-ed to,
Dan, Nan, and Ann,
And La-dy Lou?"

"They are," she said,
"They're sis-ters three,
And just as sweet
As they can be."

"My three new dolls
That came to-day,

would if a person were to juggle it fast by hand. This little wireless telegraph set put to the air the vibrations made by the opening and closing key and I picked them up in my receiving set here. That's how I knew just when you fellows were fooling about the fence. See?"

"Um, huh!" grunted Bob, backing towards the door.

"Yes, but what happened in the melon patch, when we got into a nest of live wires?" Hank inquired.

"You didn't get into any 'nest,' but ran into just exactly two wires, which I lightly fastened to stems of the two likeliest melons in the patch, knowing you'd pick on them soon or late. When you boys touched the wires they touched you a little, then fell to the ground where the partial grounding of them made some spluttering, I take it."

"I say it did!" Hank offered.

"The two wires extended from the shed where the auto is, but you got the current from a couple of cells of storage battery. Didn't you notice the wires are covered, except for the ends from which I removed the insulation?"

"We didn't stop to get acquainted with them," one of the lads confessed.

"Anyway, when the bared ends hit the ground or you touched them with fingers, they fused and not till then!" roared the squire.

Next day Squire Jobson sent to Rob English and Hank Scott the two melons the boys failed to get from the patch; and, after that, nobody bothered the farm.

"Glorifying the American Girl"

MRS. Frank Tinney Has Just Been Granted a Divorce. Therefore, Now It Can Be Told—the Amusing Story of "Bubbles" Wilson and the Very Eccentric Frank.

IT WAS in the spring of 1924 that Miss Imogene "Bubbles" Wilson, lady of the ensemble of Mr. Ziegfeld's Follies (that national institution whose purpose it is to glorify the American girl), began to make it hot for Frank Tinney because Bubbles declared Tinney had knocked her cold. Bubbles also asked the metropolitan police to take action, apprehend Mr. Tinney, and bring him into court, there to have him do penance for having lowered her temperature. Mrs. Tinney heard about it and thought the whole affair one of the flattest of the blackface comedian's jokes.

The other day Mrs. Tinney got her divorce and $200 a week, or $200 a week and her divorce.

But in between these two events one discovers the following interesting remarks: What Bubbles said about Frank, and what Frank said about Bubbles, and what Mrs. Tinney said, and the Prosecuting Attorney said, and what Bubbles' maid said, not to forget learned Magistrate Levine's dissertation on how to make prohibition liquor possible to the palate. And much more.

BUBBLES WILSON was not the least comely of the ladies of the ensemble of the Ziegfeld revue of 1924. In fact she was so keen to gaze upon that she was voted the most beautiful of the Ziegfeld girls of 1923, when she was of the tender age of 20.

Oh, she deserved the honor. Rather. She was tall, and there is nothing lovelier than a girl who is tall. Her hair, to coin a phrase, was golden. And there is nothing nicer than a girl with golden hair. Also her lips were full and warm. Although, of course, the reputed warmth is only hearsay. And her eyes were wide spaced, her hands were small, and she walked with a balanced step. She also looked intelligent and had any number of other negligible qualities. All in all, she wasn't the kind of girl one ought to knock cold. SHE could knock 'em cold, and undoubtedly often did—but only in a metaphorical sense.

So Bubbles Wilson, being as beautiful as she was, had no right to commit suicide, though, of course, she didn't. No matter how unfortunate, miserable or displeased with life in general and Frank Tinney in particular Bubbles Wilson might have been, the only gentlemanly thing for her to do was to go on living and being beautiful and glorifying the American girl and the Ziegfeld strong box.

But Easter Sunday, 1924, Mary Imogene Bubbles Robertson Wilson (Robertson being her real name, and she changing it to Wilson, probably because Wilson is so much more uncommon)—on that Easter day Bubbles went through a few of the preliminary motions of committing suicide, then procrastinated and decided to put it off until the next evening.

ON this next evening there was held in Bubbles' New York apartment what is vulgarly known as a drinking party. Everyone was having an awfully good time when Bubbles suddenly remembered that she had neglected to kill herself.

At that time she had known Frank Tinney for about two years, from the time she had been a chorus girl in "Tickle Me," a musical show Tinney and his wife, Edna Davenport Tinney, had starred in. So on this evening, remembering Tinney of a sudden, she remembered her contemplated suicide, the same one she hadn't completed the evening before. And she arose and announced she was wretchedly unhappy, and was about to take her life, and her guests laughed.

Present at this bottling fete, as such things are vulgarly known, was a newspaper reporter. He informed Bubbles (drawing from his store of professional knowledge) that if she were going to commit suicide she'd better hurry if she wanted to catch the next morning's editions, for it was getting late and the papers were about to go to press. There were other newspaper men present, and they all thanked her for her proposed leave-taking because that day had been a bad day for news and the papers needed a good death to liven them up.

Bubbles fled to her bathroom. Soon she returned, white and defiant. This delighted her guests. They told her she was almost as funny as Frank Tinney himself. And they gathered round her in a circle, and danced a slow and solemn funeral march. And presently they danced themselves out of her apartment, leaving Bubbles with her Herculean Negro maid, Carrie Sneed.

Bubbles turned to Carrie Sneed.

"I—— feel—very—ill," said Bubbles, drawing her graceful hand over her graceful brow. "So—ill."

Carrie Sneed rushed into the street. She found Patrolman Alles of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, and Carrie Sneed and Officer Alles rushed back to Bubbles. The policeman, having studied first aid, duly administered milk and eggs, the eggs raw because Patrolman Alles didn't have time to cook them, though he might as well have for all Bubbles needed an antidote for poison—considering her hemlock was nothing but a couple of liver pills. And then Alles looked around and found, beside a photograph of Frank Tinney, a note addressed to "My Sweetheart," Tinney being the lucky (?) gentleman in question.

TINNEY IN CHARACTER—with his famous smile.

THIS was what the note said:

"Don't ever look for me, because you will never find me. I've gone far away, so far that God is the only living thing that can reach me.

"I know how terrible you are, but I love you in spite of yourself. I tried to give you the things in life that are worth while, which are nothing more than love, happiness and truth, things that even your money cannot buy, because, dear, the things that money can buy soon wear out, while love goes on and on through all eternity.

"Sweetheart, eternity is a long, long time, but remember all things lead to love. I can't forget, and I can't live without you, so that is why I am dying.

Your

BUBBLES."

But Bubbles didn't die, although there was a lot of truth in some of the things she said, especially about eternity being a long, long time.

NOW Bubbles' second attempt at not committing suicide had got into the papers. But would another such negative attempt get into the papers, would it be worth getting into the papers, would it have any more news value? Some ambitious reporters profoundly considered the question. They decided that Bubbles and her gay little suicide pacts with herself had been so intriguing that something should be done to perpetuate Bubbles name in print. So they suggested that Bubbles have somebody write the story of her life and her sugar pill death, and that was how Bubbles one day happened to sit in a Magistrate's Court in West Fifty-fourth street, Manhattan, and declare that Frank Tinney had "knocked her cold."

The courtroom was one of the biggest houses Bubbles had ever played to. And undoubtedly one of the most interested. The visitors' benches were packed and jammed and crammed with men and women, so were the corridors; there was standing room only. For everyone wanted to hear Bubbles, the Follies queen, tell her story of Frank Tinney's attempt to mortify the American girl.

And presently Bubbles, in black, with a flash of white at the throat and a flash of white on her hat, took the witness chair and the curtain was up.

"He beat me," said Bubbles.

"Ahhhh" went the courtroom, and once again Bubbles had pleased an audience.

"How old are you?" inquired Magistrate Levine.

"Twenty-one," said Bubbles.

"Proceed," said the Court.

"Well," said Bubbles, "on the night that Frank Tinney knocked me cold, I came home with a newspaper man. I came home with him because we had dinner together, and we had dinner together because he was going to write the story of my life and we had been talking it over. Well, Mr. Tinney met us at the door of my apartment. He came out of my bedroom. He was dressed in my blue silk kimono and my maid's earrings."

The Court gasped.

"Dressed in what?" cried the Court.

"Earrings—and my blue silk kimono," Bubbles told him haughtily.

"Proceed," said the Court.

"MR. TINNY got angry. He accused me of being too friendly with the reporter, especially after I told him we had been out for dinner together. But the reporter told Mr. Tinney we'd gone to dinner together because he was going to write the story of my life, and offered to show his credentials to Mr. Tinney, and he apologized to Mr. Tinney for having caused any trouble. Then he left and Mr. Tinney took him to the elevator."

Then Bubbles told the Court how Tinney on this particular night had beaten her, knocked her down, and then deftly kicked her. Then, said she, he took a swing at her with a cigarette stand. After that, according to Bubbles, the comedian called it a day, retired to the bedroom and sank into a peaceful slumber. But she, she picked herself up and examined her bruises. She wanted to flee but her examination had revealed to her that she had nothing on but her shoes and stockings, which was too little apparel even for a Follies girl. And all of her clothes being in the bedroom, where Tinney lay enjoying a peaceful sleep, and she, not wishing to go into this bedroom, occupied as it was and by whom it was, decided that the only thing to do would be to put on the nearest clothes she could find regardless of their sex.

The nearest clothes she could find were Tinney's. So Bubbles slipped into Tinney's trousers and his monogrammed shirt and his coat and vest and his gay necktie, because persons in a hurry always "slip" into clothes, and gathering Carrie Sneed to her side, Imogene Bubbles fled to the newspaper reporter who had been the cause of it all. As Bubbles and the reporter had had dinner once that evening, and as Bubbles wasn't attired for much anything else, Bubbles and Carrie Sneed and the reporter got into a taxicab and rode around New York while they considered what was best to be done. After a solemn conference it was decided to have Tinney arrested. Such was Bubbles' testimony.

IMOGENE "BUBBLES" WILSON—of the Follies. She appears to have been Frank Tinney's most ardent admirer.

FRANK TINNEY—famous black-face comedian. His jokes at home seem to have fallen rather flat.

MRS. TINNEY — she doesn't find Frank's antics as funny as they once were. But how she loved the JUDGE'S wise crack: "Alimony—$200 per week."

"BUBBLES" AGAIN—She has been called the most beautiful girl on Broadway.

CAME Carle Sneed to the stand.

"Are those the earrings, Carrie?" the Court wanted to know.

"Indeed they are, Boss," said Carrie, proudly rattling the long jet pendants.

"Why," asked the Court, "didn't you help your mistress, if Mr. Tinney was harming her? You must weigh 180 pounds, Carrie. If Mr. Tinney had your mistress on the floor and was beating her so badly that she was bleeding at the mouth, why didn't you come to her rescue a pull him off immediately?"

"Well, Boss, I don't feel no call to interfere when they fights without she calls for help and he's a-killing her," Carrie calmly and philosophically remarked, and Carrie left the stand.

All the time Carrie Sneed was giving her testimony and philosophising, Bubbles, or the "little broken flower" as the Assistant District Attorney called her, sat in a front row seat murmuring "Oh, isn't it terrible—oh, isn't it awful."

AND it became the defense's turn and they entered equipped with a blue plush chair, a huge carpet, an icepick and Frank Tinney.

"When I saw Miss Wilson and the newspaper reported together," the defendant testified, "I said to her, 'what are you trying to do? Frame me?' "

Then, said Tinney, the reporter gone, instead of Miss Wilson running to kiss him, and instead of him answering her alleged exhibition of affection by "knocking her cold," instead of all this, Bubbles and her 180-pound ally, Carrie Sneed, rushed at him, Bubbles reached for defense's exhibit A, the icepick, he grabbed Bubbles' hands so she could not get the icepick into play and into Tinney, but valiantly as he fought he went down before the concentrated attack.

At this point of the trial he pulled up his trousers and revealed his shinbone which he said had suffered when he went to the floor.

Then the defense introduced a surprise witness, which was a potato knife, said to have been taken from the pocket of Bubbles' coat by a former valet of the comedian, on the occasion of an unexpected visit by Miss Wilson to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tinney at Baldwin, Long Island.

"The apartment isn't hers anyhow," said Tinney. "It's mine. But I can't keep her out. She breaks in.

"The reason I went to see her that night was because Mrs. Tinney had asked me to, after hearing of her 'suicide party.' I waited for her to come home. Carrie gave me some Scotch and ginger ale and it was a terrible drink."

"Try a little lemon peel in it next time," suggested Magistrate Levine.

TINNEY acknowledged the suggestion and went on. He said when he heard Bubbles and the reporter coming home he thought it was his old friend George O'Brien's voice he heard, so he put on the blue silk kimono and the earrings because he thought "Georgie" would enjoy that kind of joke. When the reporter, who he thought was "Georgie," left, Miss Wilson told Tinney he'd have to stay there "tonight," he said.

" 'I've got your clothes locked up,' she told me. "But I didn't strike her. I never raised my hand to Miss Wilson. Well, I waited in the bedroom while Carrie quieted down Miss Wilson. And soon I didn't hear anything, and I came out and everybody had gone and I didn't have any clothes. When she came back with two reporters, the reporters suggested I leave. I told them that was the one thing I'd been trying to do."

"Are you married?" asked the Judge.

"Very much, Your Honor," replied Tinney.

"Georgie" O'Brien testified, too, and told the Court he had seen Bubbles slap Tinney in the face and put her foot through a taxicab window at the Pennsylvania station the week before.

When the trial was over Magistrate Levine ordered Tinney held in $2500 bail for the grand jury. But the grand jury did not hold him.

And about that time Mrs. Tinney decided it would be a pretty good thing if she began her suit for separation. In August of that year Tinney left to play an engagement in London. But Mrs. Tinney, evidently feeling that as the courts hadn't taken any action on the case of Tinney versus Tinney, the only wifely thing to do was to pack his suitcase for him, so she did, although there are those who will attribute her action to a different motive.

TINNEY was to sail on the good ship Columbus. Hours before the ship sailed he went to his stateroom. And with him was Bubbles. Florenz Ziegfeld had sent word to Bubbles that if she went to see Tinney off, as far as he was concerned it would mean she had gone to her last fire. But Bubbles went, and after the ship sailed she told reporters, "Frank hadn't had a drink and was his sweet natural self. Of course, I do like notoriety, but love is too sacred to be discussed in the papers."

Bubbles hung around New York for a few weeks, because Ziegfeld had found he could glorify the American girl without any aid from Bubbles. Then she danced at a roadhouse near Boston for a few weeks at $900 a week. And Tinney sent for her and Bubbles gayly left. If the papers Mrs. Tinney filed in her divorce are correct, Tinney met Bubbles in London and then they went to Scotland. Rumor has it that an enterprising pickle manufacturer tried to inject himself into the proceedings, but the story is denied by all hands. Then 'tis said Bubbles took herself to Paris, only to leave it for Germany, where, by last accounts, Bubbles is in the movies, and it is said Bubbles must like that a lot.

TINNEY got back in November. Mrs. Tinney was suing him for divorce. Tinney pleaded with her to give him that other chance, but Mrs. Tinney didn't think that was such a good joke, either, and told him to let the Judge take care of it. The Judge did, and gave Mrs. Tinny the divorce, $200 a week and the custody of their small son.

However, business is after all business, and the Tinneys have a business agreement. Mrs. Tinney will play with Mr. Tinney if they can get a vaudeville act, and as soon as he gets a job with a musical comedy she is going to take charge of his affairs.

It is even considered a good winter book bet that the Tinneys will be married soon again. Just before the divorce was granted Mrs. Tinney said, "Personally, I don't care whether this divorce goes through or not. If it does, I wouldn't be surprised if Frank and I were married inside of a year."

For, after all, marriage, like divorce and the Ziegfeld Follies, is a national institution.

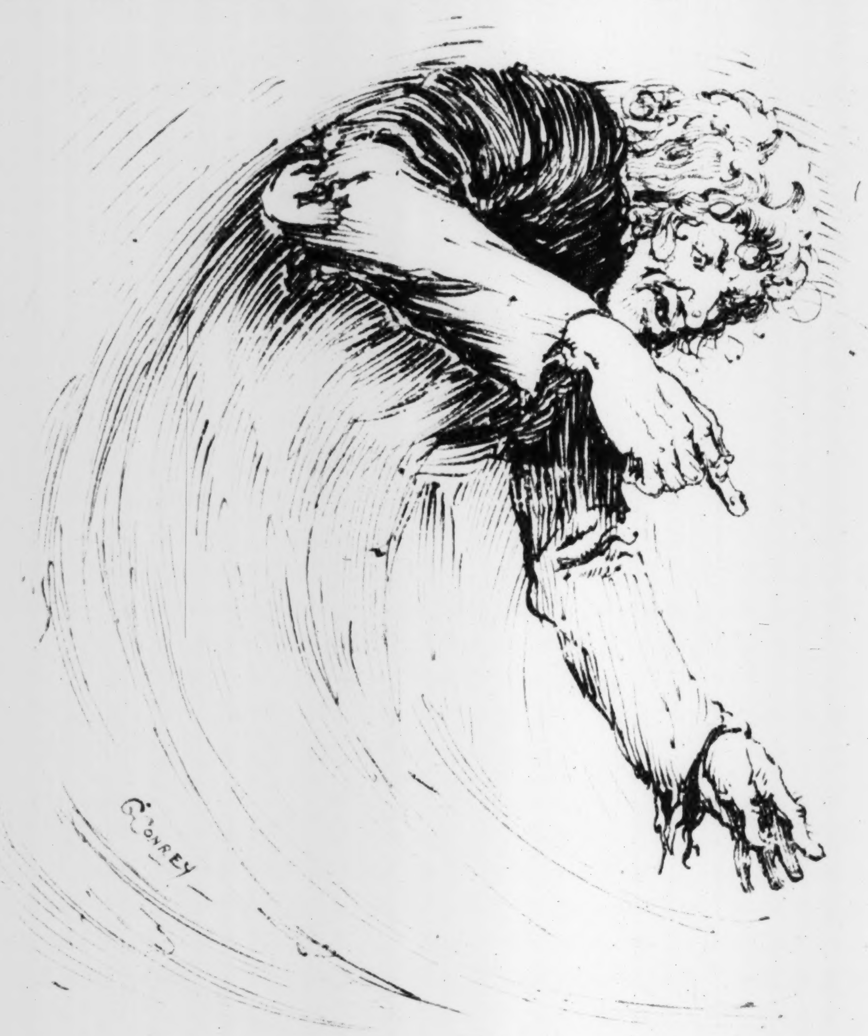
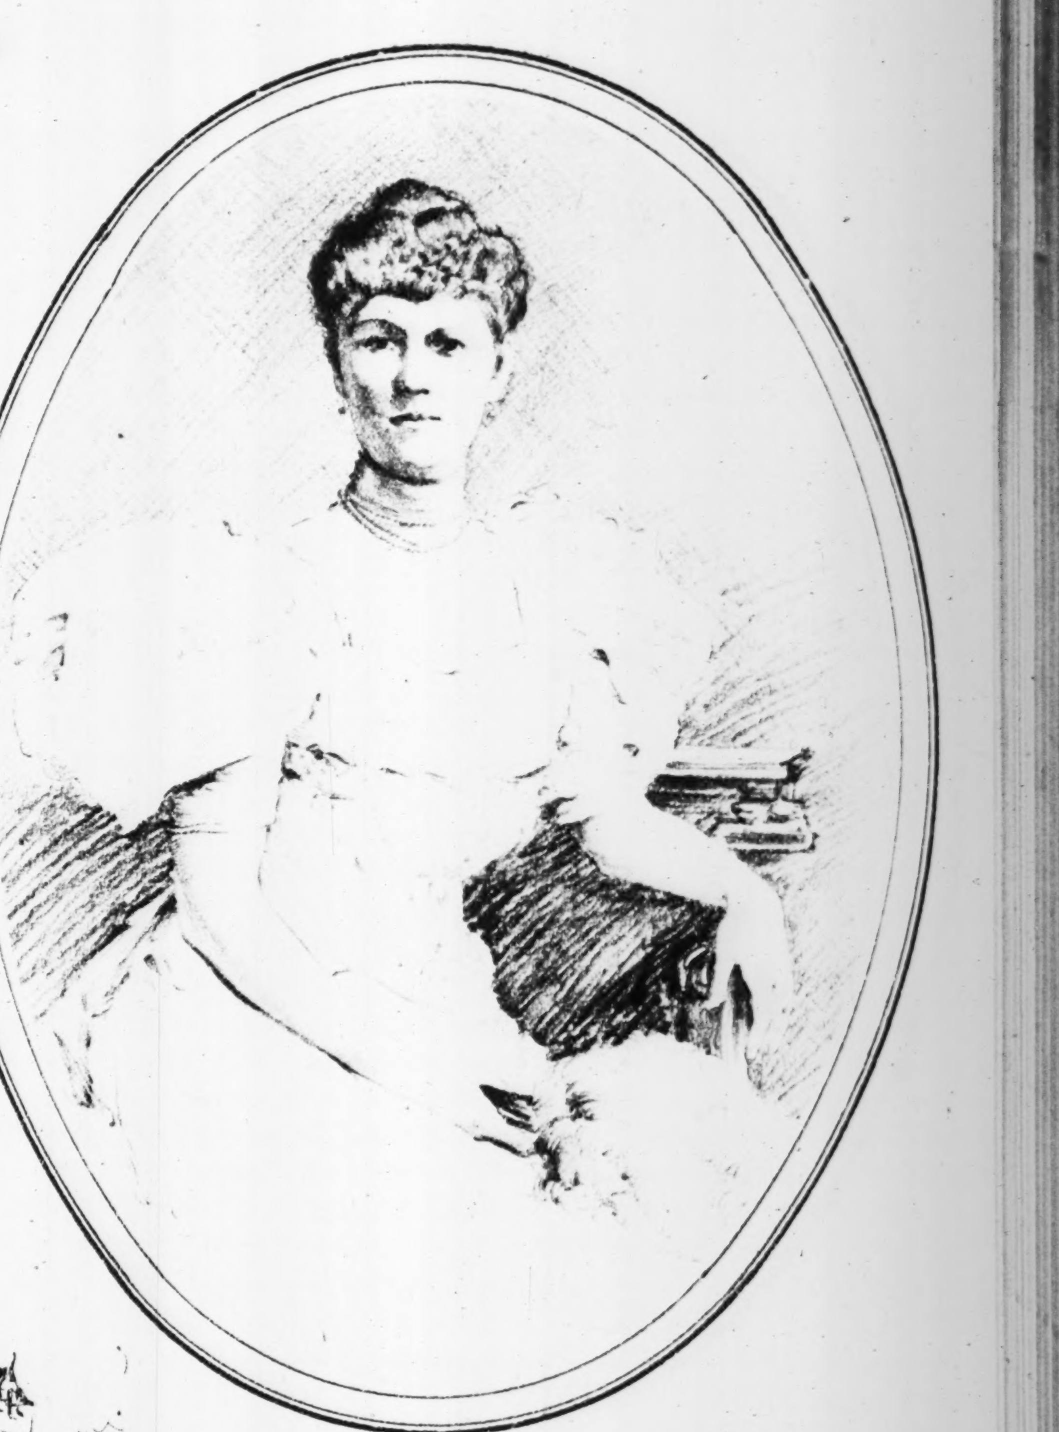
"THE BEGGAR'S CURSE"



And How It Affected Mary Louise January of St. Louis and Her Noble Husband, Lord Alexander Leith, Who Has Just Died Childless—as the Curse Predicted.



MARY LOUISE JANUARY LEITH, formerly of St. Louis, as she appeared when she went to Scotland as the wife of the late Lord Alexander Leith of Fyvie.

By ELLWOOD DOUGLASS

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

TO THE outside world the recent death without heirs of Lord Leith of Fyvie, husband of the former Miss Mary Louise January of St. Louis, was significant only because his station was high and his life a three-fold romance. To the folk of the Southeastern Highlands it was the result of a Scottish curse striking straight through six centuries to the matter-of-fact light of today with a baneful shadow of the old time.

For Alexander John Forbes-Leith was a formidable personality. Nowhere had life seemed inclined to balk him. As an obscure Navy Lieutenant he saw and conquered the St. Louis heiress in a two months' courtship. Within ten years thereafter he made a fortune on the St. Louis and Chicago steel markets. Upon his retirement he purchased Fyvie Castle, Aberdeenshire, one of the oldest and finest of Scotland, in fulfillment of a once hopeless vow to regain his ancestral home. There the beauty and accomplishments of his American wife, attracting royal guests, and his own acts of generosity and public spirit counted Lord and Lady Leith among the favored of the land.

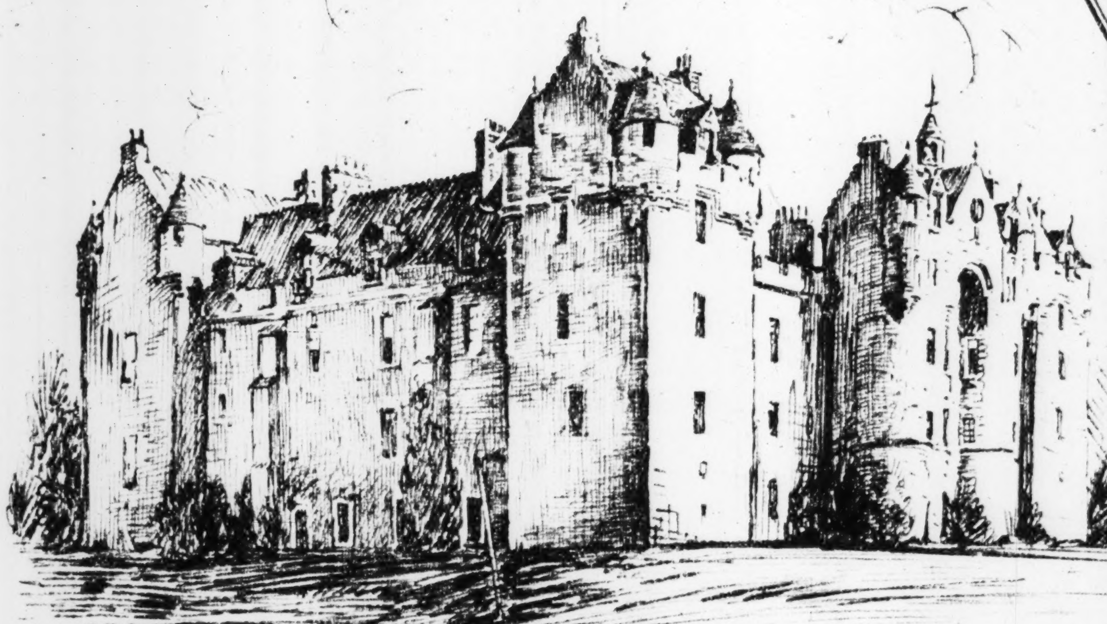
All the same, say the canny ones who know of the Third Stone that lies lost at the bottom of Ythan, Lord Leith died without a living son to succeed him, just as Thomas of Erseldoune—Thomas the Rhymer, True Tammas of the prophetic gift, greater in Scotland than Merlin the Wise—had predicted, about the year 1290, for all the Lairds of Fyvie to come. Many another before the first Baron Leith had gone without male issue. You could not lay yourself open to thoughtless ridicule by downright faith in the fey, but neither would a man of caution be prepared to say it was all coincidence.

IT is 55 years since H. M. S. Zealous, flagship of the British Pacific squadron, was anchored for two months at San Francisco, awaiting the outcome of expected "complications in the Pacific" in connection with the Franco-Prussian War. The actual outcome was two months of shore leave and the best that San Francisco could offer for the officers of the ship—and tremendous complications in their affairs of the heart.

Very popular among the girls of the port was Lieutenant Alex Leith. He was 25, red-haired and strapping, well bred and, for an agonizingly long time, agreeably responsive but not a bit overwhelmed by the coy flapperisms of 1870. That air of pleasant aloofness was to last less than a minute when it encountered the charms of Miss Mary Louise January of St. Louis at a messroom ball. Before the few weeks' stay had ended they had come to an understanding, and a year later they were married.

Alex Leith, who had entered the navy at 13, to follow in the footsteps of his father, a Rear Admiral, and had won, among other distinctions, the Royal Humane Society's medal for saving life at sea, resigned to take an inconspicuous place in the steel business of his wife's father, Derick Algernon January of St. Louis. Cool judgment and invincible will soon made him secretary of the Missouri Furnace Company. He and Mrs. Leith took a fashionable residence at 2923 Washington boulevard. In a few years he became president of the Joliet and Illinois steel companies in Chicago, and founded the Federal Steel Company. Ten years after he had resigned from his obscure lieutenancy in the navy he joined his interests with those of Andrew Carnegie and retired a millionaire, to return to Scotland.

Now, the story goes that the Leiths, numerous and long established about Aberdeen, had lost Fyvie some 300 years ago, and that Alexander Forbes-Leith (a matter of estates had caused him to take his mother's name) had sworn a great oath to regain it. He seemed then to have as much chance of possessing Castle Fyvie as he had of reigning in the sacred palace of a Lama of Tibet.



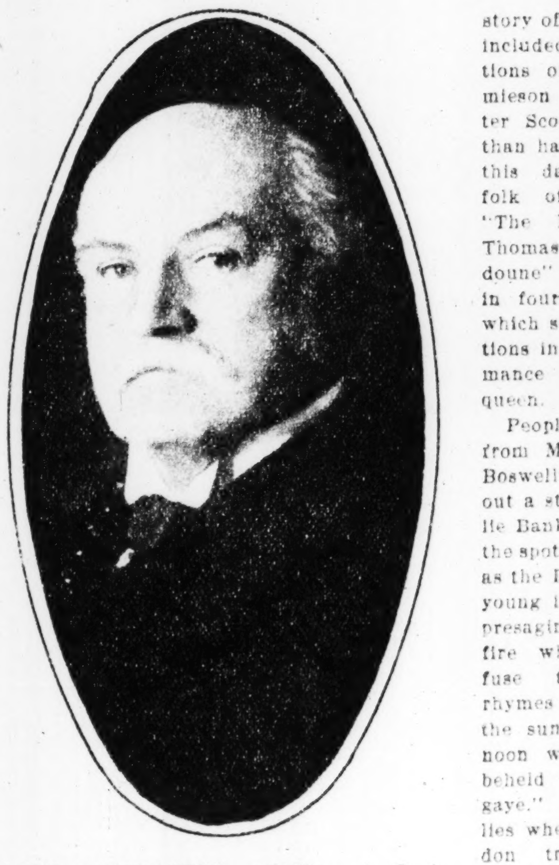
FYVIE CASTLE (from a photograph), the seat of the Leith family and the spot upon which the beggar Thomas the Rhymer cast his remarkable curse in the year 1290

FYVIE CASTLE, on the River Ythan, was one of the first built when Norman and Flemish soldiers of fortune spread through Scotland under David I. Its holders bore some of the greatest and oldest names of Scotland, and their guests numbered the great of Christendom. The oldest tower now standing was built by Sir William Preston about 1400, and two scarcely less ancient are known as the Seton towers, after their builder, Sir Alexander Seton, Lord Fyvie and Earl of Dunfermline. It has stood very much as it is now since 1596. It is generally considered the finest example of Scottish castellated architecture, even above Glamis, of which a royal guest said in 1715 that there was none on the Continent to compare with it.

Quite beyond the reach of a Lieutenant in the Royal Navy—or even an Admiral—the ancient seat of Fyvie was quite accessible to a multi-millionaire. Immediately upon his return to Scotland Lord Leith purchased the castle and estate for 175,000 pounds, or more than $800,000, and proceeded to restore it handsomely. That fulfilled his oath, but it tossed the shiny and cocksure New and the dark and malevolent Old between a retired ironfounder with his American heiress wife and a ragged bard of old Scotland, whose unknighted name was a terror and his tatters a robe of greatness.

THE days of Thomas of Erseldoune were the days of the poet and the warrior, far, far remote from this day of the "captain of industry" and the "genius of finance." Predatory Barons waxed fat and many because they were warriors, but the acquisitive instinct had not yet come into its own—and everybody's else. Some merchants were poets, most were adventurers, and nearly all were warriors at necessity of defense from robbers, or at opportunity for a little profitable robbing for themselves, but they were known for their songs or their skirmishes, and not for their salesmanship. Hence it is easy to see that the job of True Tammas, poet, prophet and patriot, less vassal than friend of the great Earls of March, was one of the best in the land.

By his stirring songs and ringing prophecies, not by the latest bulletin of a medieval Morgan's or Rothschild's, rose and fell the morale of that warlike and warring country. He became a sort of George Creel for the defense of Scotland, with powers over "free spirits of the air" as well as free speech. Sometimes, even, his name was linked with a prediction of defeat and spread by the enemy, and then the hopes of Scotland fell. As the story became famous that he had foretold the calamitous death of Alexander III, which closed a dynasty of peace, the mention of his name was enough to throw wide the gates of any Scottish keep, and his displeasure was feared like excommunication. He had power as great as nearly any soldier, and—though the Bruce was soon to rise like a lion and Bannockburn to run red with blood, and already a broad-shouldered young fellow named Wallace was chuckling blithely amid the crags of Cairtland whilst flat-footed loons across the Border cursed him from the safe low ground—he held that power with little chance, in common with the powerful of today, of getting his head broken. His enemies were numerous but respectful, for when he spoke direfully of Inverugi or Fyvie all Scotland expected direful things to happen to Inverugi or Fyvie, and they did happen.



LORD ALEXANDER LEITH of Fyvie. When he died recently and left no heir the country people about his ancestral home recalled the curse of Thomas the Rhymer.

IT was repeated widely and with awe that when one Earl of Buchan called True Tammas a liar the minstrel pronounced this curse, and that it was fulfilled to the letter:

"Tho' Tammas the Lyar thou callst me,
A sooth tale I shall tell to thee:
By Alky side thy horse shall ride,
He shall stumble and thou shalt fa'.

Thy neckbane shall brake in two,
And dogs shall thy banes gnaw,
And, maugre all thy kin and thee,
Thy own belt thy bier shall be."

The gifts of prophesy and of bane were given him by the Queen of the Fay, runs the story of a folk ballad included in collections of Robert Jamieson and Sir Walter Scott, and more than half believed to this day by simple folk of Tweedside. "The Prophesie of Thomas of Erseldoune" is preserved in four manuscripts which set the predictions in the same romance of the fairy queen.

People on the road from Melrose to St. Boswell's still point out a stone on Huntlie Banks that marks the spot where Thomas the Rhymer lay in young idleness, little presaging the terrible fire which was to fuse the polemic rhymes of his age, on the summer's afternoon when he first beheld that "lady gaye." The stone lies where stood Eildon tree, beneath which "almost anything was rather more than likely to happen." Several things did happen that afternoon, the "true prophesie" relates, before and after——

"Downe than lyghte that lady bryghte, Vndir-nethe that grenewode spraye."

IN the cool of the evening he rode away with her to be her lover for seven years, then to come back and use for Scotland's sake—and sometimes for easing his own hatred, as against Fyvie—the gifts she gave. But he did not return for aye. Still do wide-eyed children about the firesides of Earlston, which once was Erseldoune, listen to the story of how one night Thomas made merry in his Tower of Erseldoune (which yet stands, though in ruins), when a breathless lad came running in to tell that a hart and a hind had come out of the depths of the forest and were walking unafraid down the streets of the village. Thomas rose and followed them into the forest, and that was the last they saw of him.

All that seems very far removed from the enlightenment of 1926. Our Visitors from Beyond come to us by quite different machinery, such as ouija boards, crystal balls, trances, or holding hands in a circle while an oily spinster who seems to wear a bustle turns out the lights. Lord Leith of Fyvie was somewhat inclined to laugh, notwithstanding the tragic example of the Earl of Buchan's broken neck. Alexander John Forbes-Leith had had good luck all his life. He was among the skeptics, along with the late Robbie Messer of Earlston, who related this story of Thomas' disappearance:

"BUT ma granfaither uist to say—an' nae doot he had it handit doon—that Leader was i' great fluid at the time, an' that Thomas the Rhymer had been robbit an' murdert an' his body thrawn into the water, whulk micht take it to Berwick. An' that's likker-like than the fairy story! Sae ye hae'd, as aw had it, frae thaim 'at was afore us."

Such skeptics, however, were in the minority. Lord Byron guarded his life against Thomas' prophesy that the "auld brig o' Don" would fall into the river whenever the only son of a mother rode the only colt of a mare across it. The prophecies came into great renown when the union of England and Scotland, which he had foretold, was accomplished by the accession of James VI. The old Kirk at Kelso has been deserted since 1770, when the fall of a piece of plaster from the ceiling seemed to signal to an unusually large congregation that Thomas' prediction that the church would fall when at the fullest hour was about to come true. One of the halls he doomed was his own:

"The hare shall kittle (litter) on my hearth
stane
And there will never be a laird Learmont again."

And, wrote Andrew Currie of Darnick: "I saw it, with my own eyes, fulfilled in 1839. . . . The rumor spread in Earlstoun that one of the Rhymer's most celebrated prophecies had been fulfilled, and I well remember running, with all the rest of the town, to see the hare's nest."

THE Aberdeenshire tradition of his curse against Fyvie is that once, when it was known that he was journeying that way from his home, more than 100 miles south, and all Fyvie, from the Lord and Lady to the lowest boy of the kitchen, made ready to receive him, he tested the hospitality of the castle by failing to give his name. Hospitality is a dangerous thing to test. He was, putting it mildly, kicked out as a bum. Nobody but he knew what they had done, and so they kept the gates open for seven years and a day, awaiting the arrival of the great bard and fearing to offend him by any appearance of inhospitality. "At length," continues the account, "he suddenly appeared before the fair building, accompanied by a violent storm of wind and rain which stripped the surrounding trees of their leaves, and shut the castle gates with a loud crash. But while the tempest was raging on all sides, it was observed that close by the spot where Thomas stood there was not enough wind to shake a pile of grass or move a hair of his beard."

There he pronounced the curse against the filial succession to Fyvie, which, tenants of the estate believe, has not failed to this day. A fragment of the original verses survives:

"Fyvie, Fyvie, thou s' never thrive,
As lang's there's in thee stanis three:
There's ane intill the highest tower,
There's ane intill the lady's bower,
There's ane aneath the water-gett,
And thir three stanes ye s' never get."

It is said that two of these stones have been found, but that the third one, the one beneath the water gate in the River Ythan beside the castle, has not been found. Never until it is, runs the talk of a winter's evening in the humble cots about the great castle, shall the curse cease to work, and never until then shall a Laird of Fyvie pass the castle on to his own son. These of the cottages used to look with pity upon the beautiful lady of the castle, coming all unawares from far-off St. Louis into the blight of an ancient bane.

But as the good fortune of Lord Leith seemed to increase with the years, and he had a son whose stalwart frame seemed as substantial as the castle itself, the curse faded and faded from his reckoning until it became something very dim indeed. His castle was The castle, his wife The belle, he, himself, The philanthropist and patriot, and his yacht club The yacht club—so exclusive that even Sir Thomas Lipton could not get into it because he was a tradesman.

Then, in the Boer War, his only son died.

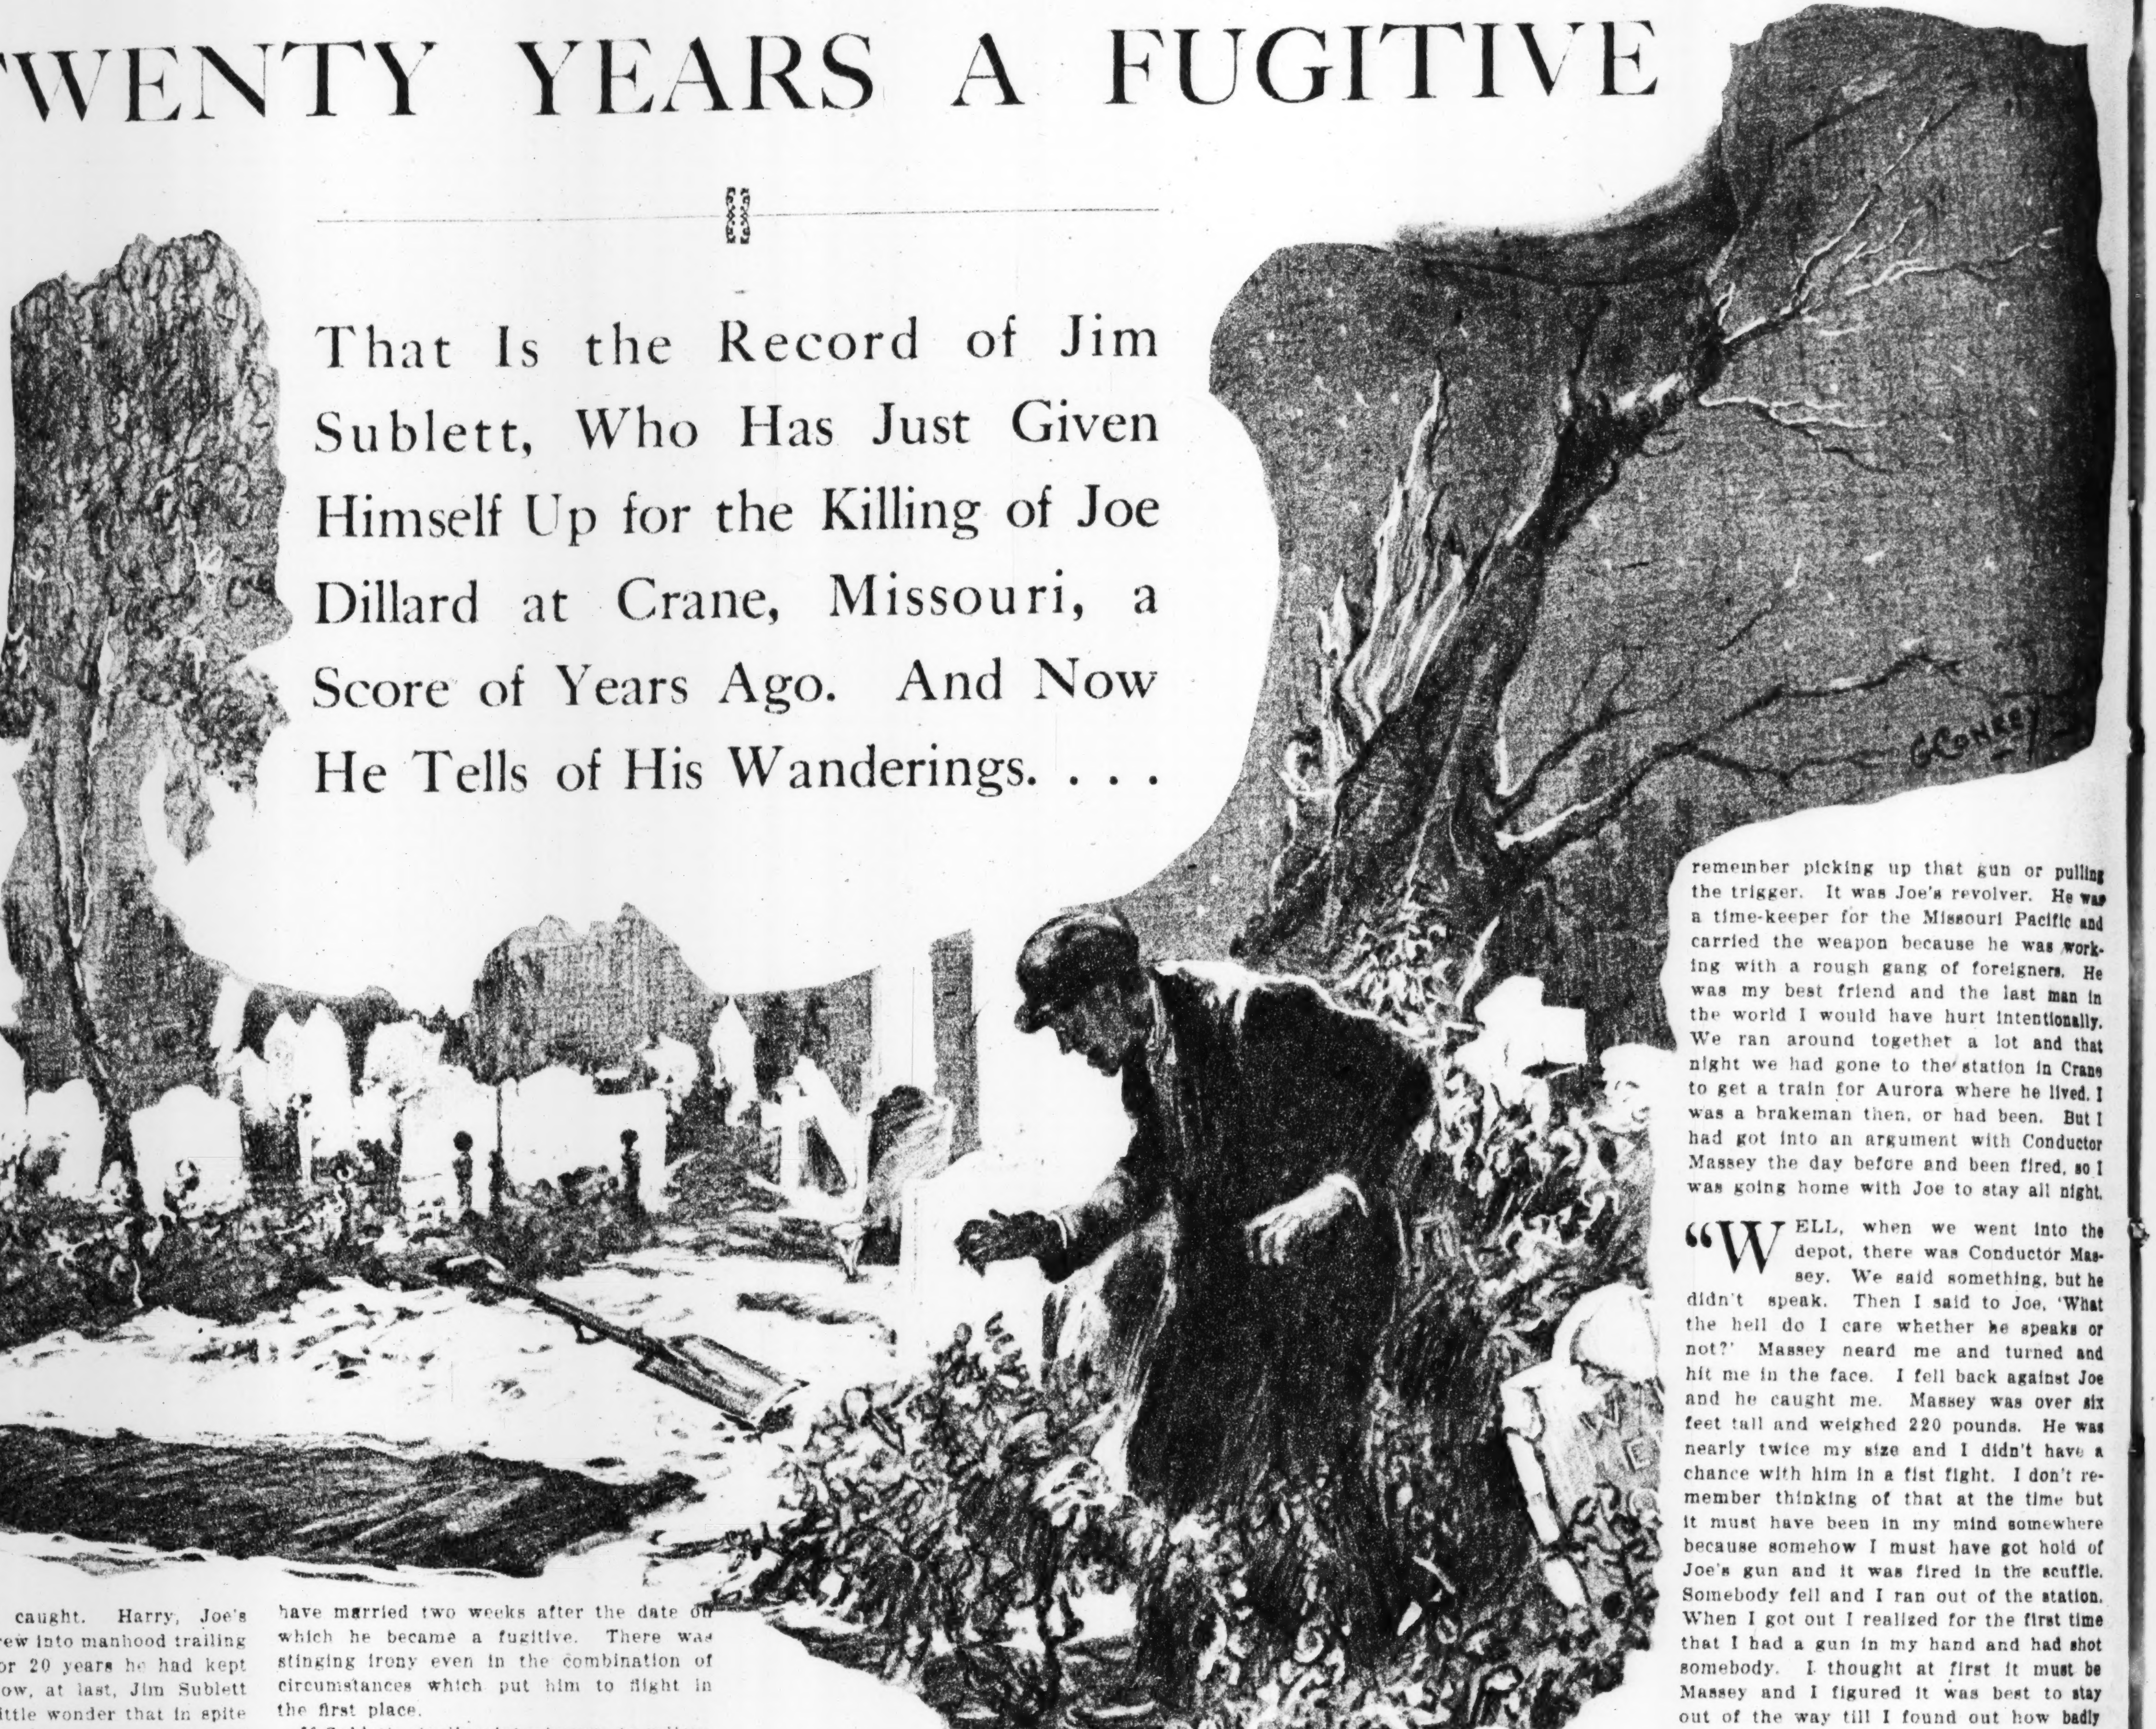
THAT did not mean, to Lord Leith of Fyvie, whom life had never seemed inclined to balk, that the curse was to be fulfilled. He built a magnificent soldiers' home in Newcastle, South Africa, in memory of his son, and went on supporting two regiments for the remainder of the war, which service was a considerable factor in his being raised to the baronage. His disbelief in tradition was not shaken even by reported appearances of the famous "green woman" ghost of the castle—linked up with True Tammas in some accounts as an innocent and lovelorn victim of the curse of the Third Stone—which persisted as late as 1920. He redoubled his acts of generosity, and even his womenfolk won decorations for their services in the World War. Good fortune seemed, as ever, on his side.

On November 14 last Lord Leith died without an heir. He never had a second son. And, whisper folk of Aberdeenshire who have no castle to pass on to their sons, but only the stories of an older day, you could not lay yourself open to ridicule by downright faith in the fay, but neither would a man of caution be prepared to say it was all coincidence.

TWENTY YEARS A FUGITIVE

JIM SUBLETT, who killed his best friend and hid for twenty years.

That Is the Record of Jim Sublett, Who Has Just Given Himself Up for the Killing of Joe Dillard at Crane, Missouri, a Score of Years Ago. And Now He Tells of His Wanderings. . . .



"IF HE hadn't found a newly dug grave in the cemetery, he might have surrendered."

By GUY FORSHEY
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

GALENA, Missouri.—Harry Dillard was busy with the duties which come to his hand as proprietor of Stone County's leading feed store a few days ago when late one evening he was startled by the arrival of a telegram. Telegrams are not matters of every-day occurrence even for leading business men in these little towns of the Ozarks. They are received with misgiving and a lurking fear that ill tidings of death or serious illness are in store, so Dillard was nervous and wondered what could be the meaning of that communication as he hastily tore open the envelope. With no little surprise he read the following query:

"Was Joe Dillard killed in 1902, '03 or '04 and if so is the slayer wanted?"

The message was signed by J. E. Tines, Police Judge of Chaffee, Missouri.

Harry pinched himself. Could it be possible that the man who had killed his brother Joe 20 years before and fled to the hills was at last in captivity after two decades of fruitless search? It was 20 years, wasn't it? Yes, fully that. Harry remembered well that date. It was on September 11, 1905, that the killing occurred and Jim Sublett, Joe's best friend and pal, had been the killer. Wonder if this could really be Jim Sublett who had eluded the authorities of every state in the Union for so long? Harry quickly answered the telegram, stating the facts of the case, now almost forgotten except by the Dillard family, and wound up with the declaration that "the slayer certainly is wanted." The next day back came the reply:

"Jim Sublett being held for the killing of Joe Dillard."

They had got the right man. Wonder how they caught him?

IT'S an unpleasant memory for the Dillard family—recollection of that September night of 1905 when Joe, then just a boy of 21, was brought home to Aurora, "up the railroad," bleeding and gasping with a .45-caliber bullet through both lungs. Poor Joe. He was such a docile and peaceable youth, the last fellow in the world one would expect to find the victim of a shooting affray. Just how it happened they had never known, beyond the fact that Joe had been shot with his own revolver in the railway station at Crane, Missouri, between Aurora and Galena on the Missouri Pacific Railroad. Three men had been in the room at the time—Joe Dillard, Jim Sublett and James Massey, a burly railway conductor. There had been a fight and Sublett had seized Joe's revolver from its holster and shot him down, fleeing to the woods with the weapon still in his hand. Joe had died the next day without clearing up the mystery, except to say that Jim had shot him and he didn't know how or why. Thirst for revenge had rankled deep in the souls of the Dillards after that. Joe's father, B. W. Dillard, swore he would kill Jim Sublett with his own hands if the slayer were ever caught. Harry, Joe's younger brother, grew into manhood trailing the fugitive and for 20 years he had kept up the search. Now, at last, Jim Sublett was a prisoner. Little wonder that in spite of unhappy memories there was a feeling of satisfaction in the Dillard home the night that telegram arrived.

But that was the feeling that existed before the prisoner's story had been told.

Today Jim Sublett sits in Stone County's little jail at Galena, facing trial in March on a charge of second-degree murder. But he was not "captured"—not even after a 20-year man hunt. He is there because he "came in" by himself. Frail and haggard is the prisoner after his two decades of flight and he hasn't quite shaken off the hunted look of the fugitive; but there is hope in his eyes and in his step is seen a joyous spring uncommon in a man facing trial for murder. It is easy to single him out from the half-dozen gloomy moonshiner suspects who share his prison quarters. He looks one squarely in the face. A terrible burden is at last off the mind of Jim Sublett and he is at peace with his conscience. But the strangest fact of all is that the Dillards, who craved vengeance for 20 years, are now his best friends and defenders. When the trial comes up in March they will do all in their power to gain his acquittal and freedom.

"FOR 20 years we didn't understand," they say, "but now we do and we feel that this man has been punished enough."

It is not hard to see that whatever may have been his degree of guilt, the prisoner really has suffered enough to satisfy the spite of any ordinary vengeance. That fact shows in his face, and his story corroborates the testimony of his countenance. Even though the mists are lifting a little at last, and the likelihood of early acquittal offers the prematurely aged man a prospect of living what remains of his wasted life in peace, there is irony in the fate of Jim Sublett—an irony of the sort that a Thomas Hardy would have relished in his grimmest mood. His flight from justice was unnecessary from the first, only he didn't know it until after years of remorse and suspense and weariness of hiding behind a false identity, had driven him to invite punishment for an act he thought must surely send him to the penitentiary.

He knew, of course, that the shooting of Joe Dillard had been unintentional, but he didn't know he could make the Dillards and a jury believe that. He was on the verge of trying it a dozen times but had always backed out at the last moment. How could he know that the Dillards would spend all that time and money trying to run him to earth, only to turn friends and sympathizers when he needed friends most? For that matter, how were they to know it themselves?

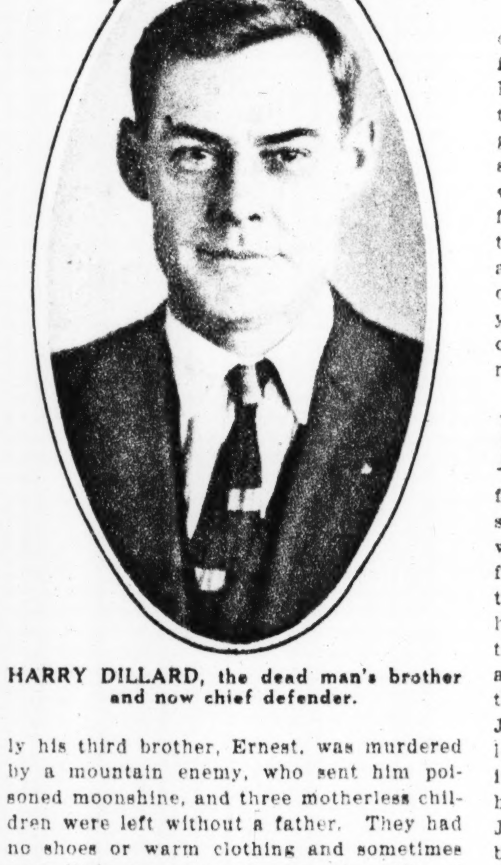
Since the flight was needless, it was also unnecessary that he should have abandoned his romance and then wandered through 20 lonely years without knowing what ever became of Laura Schluter, whom he was to have married two weeks after the date on which he became a fugitive. There was stinging irony even in the combination of circumstances which put him to flight in the first place.

If Sublett, stealing into Aurora to relieve his anxiety on the night after the shooting, hadn't found a newly dug grave in the cemetery he might have yielded then to an urge that told him to give up and have it over with. But the sight of the grave threw him into a panic. He jumped at once to the conclusion that the tomb was yawning for the body of Joe Dillard—his victim. As a matter of fact, Joe Dillard was still alive at that moment, although he died the next day and was buried at Springfield.

THEN, tramping across the hills toward Piney, Arkansas, where he planned to seek the advice of his father about surrendering, he came upon a copy of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch lying on the Frisco right-of-way, where somebody had thrown it from a train. On the front page a news dispatch told of the death of Dillard and related that a posse had been formed to hunt for the slayer. That filled him with terror. To his befuddled and terrified mind a posse meant the same thing as a mob, and a mob meant lynching. He saw visions of trailing bloodhounds, vengeful pursuers with rifles and shotguns, a long rope and a horrible creeping death from strangling. What hope had he of convincing a blood-crazed mob that he had shot his friend by accident? No wonder he quickened his steps and changed their direction from the parental cabin on the Arkansas River to the wilds of the Osage country in Oklahoma.

Once safely out of reach of a posse, Jim Sublett became Ed Tharp and began his long and losing fight with suspense and his conscience. The tide of battle turned first one way and then another during those 20 years. There were times when Jim was hungry and cold and miserable, like he was on the day after the shooting, when he hid all day in a corn field near Aurora and lay there in a cold drizzling rain, longing for one of the great red apples which farmers were packing in barrels in a nearby orchard. There were times when he felt that he was being watched by unseen pursuers. Vague fear of detection caused him to keep apart from his fellows and avoid any acquaintanceship that might lead to exposure of his real identity. He never held long to one job or stayed long in one locality for the same reason and he never tried to salvage his romance because he felt it wouldn't be fair to ask Laura Schluter to marry a fugitive from justice, and he didn't want to be married under a false name, anyway.

He remained a wanderer, a drifter and a lonely outcast, hiding from the world and even trying to hide from himself. Twice, under cover of darkness, he stole back to his old home on the Arkansas for an overnight visit to his father. Then his father died. That was in 1910. Then two of his three brothers died. Later one of his two sisters became a sufferer from tuberculosis and had to be taken to a sanitarium. Finally his third brother, Ernest, was murdered by a mountain enemy, who sent him poisoned moonshine, and three motherless children were left without a father. They had no shoes or warm clothing and sometimes very little to eat in the humble cabin of their maternal grandparents, and they looked to "Uncle Jim" for help. But Jim Sublett was powerless. He couldn't help them at home because he didn't dare to show his face there, and he couldn't help them from a distance because his scattered jobs as a migratory railway construction laborer barely provided him with his own living.



HARRY DILLARD, the dead man's brother and now chief defender.

ONCE, about six months ago, he did go back to Piney, determined to try, but his stay didn't last 24 hours. The night after his arrival he was frying some fish in the cabin fireplace and the hungry children were waiting for their supper when a friendly Deputy Sheriff knocked at the door and told Jim he had better get out at once, that somebody had wired Harry Dillard he was at home and Dillard had wired back to the Sheriff's office to hold him. The deputy was really supposed to arrest him, but he hated to do that, and he thought it would be all right if he went back to the office and reported that Jim had gone. So Jim went.

On that flight he probably came nearer giving himself up than he ever had come before. Hardly was he out of reach of the officers of his home county when he headed for Stone County, Missouri, determined to have it over with and throw himself upon the mercy of the Dillards on their own ground. He almost got there and then something kept him from going through with it. What it was, he doesn't know—fear, perhaps, or the very human tendency to cling to a known lot, even though it be an unhappy one, rather than venture into one obscured in dreadful uncertainty. For years it had been that way, some mischievous fate always keeping him on the run when he might have had it over with.

HE WENT to East St. Louis on that trip, and, after visiting a sister there, drifted down to Chaffee, below Cape Girardeau, on the Mississippi River, where he got another job with a construction gang. He had worked for several weeks with the memory of those orphaned children weighing upon his mind, when finally the pressure became too great. Abandoning his wagon and team at 10 o'clock one morning, he walked into the town and gave himself up to Police Judge Tines. He had been a fugitive for so long he couldn't even remember how long it was and wasn't sure whether the shooting had occurred in 1902, '03, '04 or '05. The Judge refused at first to believe his story, but when Sublett insisted it was true, the official agreed to keep him as a boarder until he could communicate with Harry Dillard at Galena.

Judge Tines and his boarder were at the station when Dillard arrived two days later, but neither Dillard nor Sublett recognized the other until Dillard had established Judge Tines' identity by inquiry. Then Jim Sublett's first words to the brother of his victim were these:

"Can you tell me how I ever got hold of that gun?"

Sheriff "Big-Foot" Parker had just closed a big week chasing moonshiners in the hills and his office was filled with confiscated liquor, dismantled stills and a vast array of whisky-making accessories when this writer called at the Galena courthouse and jail to make acquaintance with Jim Sublett and hear his story. A jovial fellow is Sheriff Parker, big and hospitable. After endeavoring to make the visitor feel at home among all those captured mountain-dew containers, he brought Jim out from among the moonshiners and, over a barrel that had contained sour mash, Jim told of his 20 years of exile and of the inner forces that compelled him at last to bring himself in.

"The strangest thing about that shooting," he began, "was that I never could remember picking up that gun or pulling the trigger. It was Joe's revolver. He was a time-keeper for the Missouri Pacific and carried the weapon because he was working with a rough gang of foreigners. He was my best friend and the last man in the world I would have hurt intentionally. We ran around together a lot and that night we had gone to the station in Crane to get a train for Aurora where he lived. I was a brakeman then, or had been. But I had got into an argument with Conductor Massey the day before and been fired, so I was going home with Joe to stay all night.

"WELL, when we went into the depot, there was Conductor Massey. We said something, but he didn't speak. Then I said to Joe, 'What the hell do I care whether he speaks or not?' Massey heard me and turned and hit me in the face. I fell back against Joe and he caught me. Massey was over six feet tall and weighed 220 pounds. He was nearly twice my size and I didn't have a chance with him in a fist fight. I don't remember thinking of that at the time but it must have been in my mind somewhere because somehow I must have got hold of Joe's gun and it was fired in the scuffle. Somebody fell and I ran out of the station. When I got out I realized for the first time that I had a gun in my hand and had shot somebody. I thought at first it must be Massey and I figured it was best to stay out of the way till I found out how badly he was hurt. But about midnight when I went back to my boarding place the woman there told me it wasn't Massey, but Joe Dillard that had been shot; that he was dangerously wounded and had been rushed to Aurora on the train.

"I didn't know what to do then. I was scared to death. But I started walking to Aurora intending to see Joe's family and try to explain it. First I would decide to do it and I would decide I wouldn't because I was afraid they wouldn't believe me, or if they did believe it was an accident, would say I was shooting at Massey and so was guilty of murder anyway. When daylight came I hid in a cornfield close by where they were gathering apples. I hadn't eaten anything since noon the day before and I thought I would starve before night came again. It was cold and rainy, too, and that made me hungrier and more miserable. When it finally got dark I got some of the apples and walked on to Aurora intending to listen around a little before I went to the Dillard home. Then I sneaked out to the cemetery trying to satisfy my curiosity about whether Joe was dead. About the first thing I saw was an open grave. I don't know whose grave it was, but I never knew until the other day that it wasn't Joe's. I have been seeing that open grave for 20 years just like I have been seeing Joe Dillard. When Harry and the Sheriff brought me back here from Chaffee we stopped in Aurora and they took me to see Joe's mother and father. I couldn't bear to look at Mrs. Dillard because she looked so much like Joe. I had to turn and walk away."

Then continued the prisoner's story of his wanderings; of how he sold Joe's gun at Fort Gibson, Oklahoma, to get something to eat; of how he drifted from one state to another, working wherever he could get a job, going hungry sometimes, suffering from cold and loneliness sometimes, and always harassed by a haunting fear of detection.

JIM'S greatest desire now is to get the trial over with as soon as possible so he can go back (the Judge and jury permitting) to the little cabin home on the Arkansas River in time to put in a crop for his brother's orphaned children. After all it was the memory of those children that had most to do with turning his steps toward the office of Police Judge Tines at Chaffee.

"It's pitiful the way them pore little fellers need somebody to look after them," he says. "They hardly ever knew their mother or father either and I couldn't do anything for them running over the country. I'm 43 years old now and I just figured that if I was ever going to get this thing off my mind and do any good in the world, this was the time to do it. I hope the court will see it that way and let me go back to Piney, but I'll tell you what. If I could have it my way, I wouldn't be tried by any court at all. I would go on trial before the Dillard family."

Grettir Algarsson, Who Headed a Recent British Polar Expedition, Seems to Have Confused Himself With Grettir the Strong, an Icelandic Mythical Hero. The Story of the Expedition's Weird Trip, as Told by Cinematographer Bee-Mason, Is an Amazing Chronicle.

THE SHIP'S WALLS too weak to stand the pressure of an Arctic winter's ice pack, her propeller lost and at the bottom of the sea, grub so poor the sledge dogs turned up their hungry noses, clothes so inadequate the crew was forced to make mittens out of sailcloth so their hands might function at their bitter jobs, and this unfortunate polar expedition's leader, a lad of 24, who sang parodies to the ship's cook when his craft was beaten 40 hours by a gale that threw the brigantine over on her side till her lifeboats filled. This is the story the ship's cinematographer, J. C. Bee-Mason, told when the voyage was over and all were safely back in England.

And when his ship had clear and pretty sailing, when the crew and the captain, the scientists and the doctor, were thanking their lucky Northern stars for a few hours' brief respite, this romantic adventurous boy Grettir Algarsson would find no joy in his Arctic venture; for him then there'd be missing the morbid swashbuckling bloody glow of those old Icelandic sagas. And, taking command of the bridge, he'd crash the brigantine's nose into a mass of ice—and shout for the cinematographer to take a picture. That's what he did, say his notes.

Now, once there was another Grettir, if the ancient Norse folk-tales may be believed. This Grettir, too, like Grettir Algarsson, was of Icelandic parentage. He was a brave man and a lazy, but so brave that he was as often called Grettir the Brave or Grettir the Strong as he was called Grettir the Outlaw. This Grettir was a boisterous poet, singing derision at his fellows, and berating them, if they took exception to his cynical verse, with a two-handed sword. He was a lazy lout unless his work included a battle ax; he was a romanticist but a Far North romanticist whose glow was as cold and hard as the blinding glare off an ice mountain; something of a Cyrano without charm, with but a semi-gallantry, a hard-boiled, hard-knuckled adventurer.

In Grettir Algarsson there is an aroma of Grettir of the Northern sagas. There is the same craving for blood and adventure in the frozen Arctic wastes, the same half-mad dreams, the same attempts at impossible feats. But in the days of Grettir the Outlaw brazen feats and gigantic trolls were much easier to find than to avoid, while in this day, the day of Grettir Algarsson, blood battles and ogres to conquer are happily far easier to avoid than to find. So if Grettir Algarsson wanted filibustering it was up to him to go out of his way to find it, and if he wanted to engage in fantastic schemes, it was up to him to invent these schemes. And so he did, and this boy's attempt to be heard, to hope for the Kingship of Iceland, which he believed he was rightful heir to, his roisterous plans of revenge in the more or less sane year of 1925, make a tale as fascinating as it is weird.

GRETTIR ALGARSSON was born in Canada. His parents were Icelanders. Just a year ago he went to England and tried to interest anyone who would listen to him in an expedition to the Pole. He was only 24, but he was stanch and broad-shouldered, he talked well, his manner was more than engaging, and his appearance topped off these attributes nicely, for his forehead was high and broad, it was topped by blond hair with a wave in it, he had good eyes, a full mouth and a fine, sensitive nose.

It was his plan, he told persons who would stop long enough to listen to him, to start early in the summer for the Polar areas. All he required was a small brig, steam-propelled but equipped with sails; a small but experienced crew, a few scientists and a small light airplane.

Grettir Algarsson was so sincere and so enthusiastic that in a very little while he had collected $10,000 and obtained the use of the little ship Island, a brigantine steam-propelled and rigged in the queer manner of British brigantines—square-rigged foreward and schooner-rigged aft, which means that the sails of the first mast run with the beam, or across the ship, while the sail of the second or after mast runs with the ship's length.

It was in February, 1925, that the plans of the Algarsson Polar Expedition were made public. The boy from whom the exploration party took its name needed a capable seaman, experienced in the navigation of ice seas, to be the officer in charge of his ship, Island. And he was fortunate in finding for that place "Depth Charge Bill" Worsley, and the others who embarked on that strange and fantastic voyage were still more fortunate that "Depth Charge Bill" was the Island's skipper, for if he hadn't been it is doubtful if any there'd been to tell the Island's curious tale.

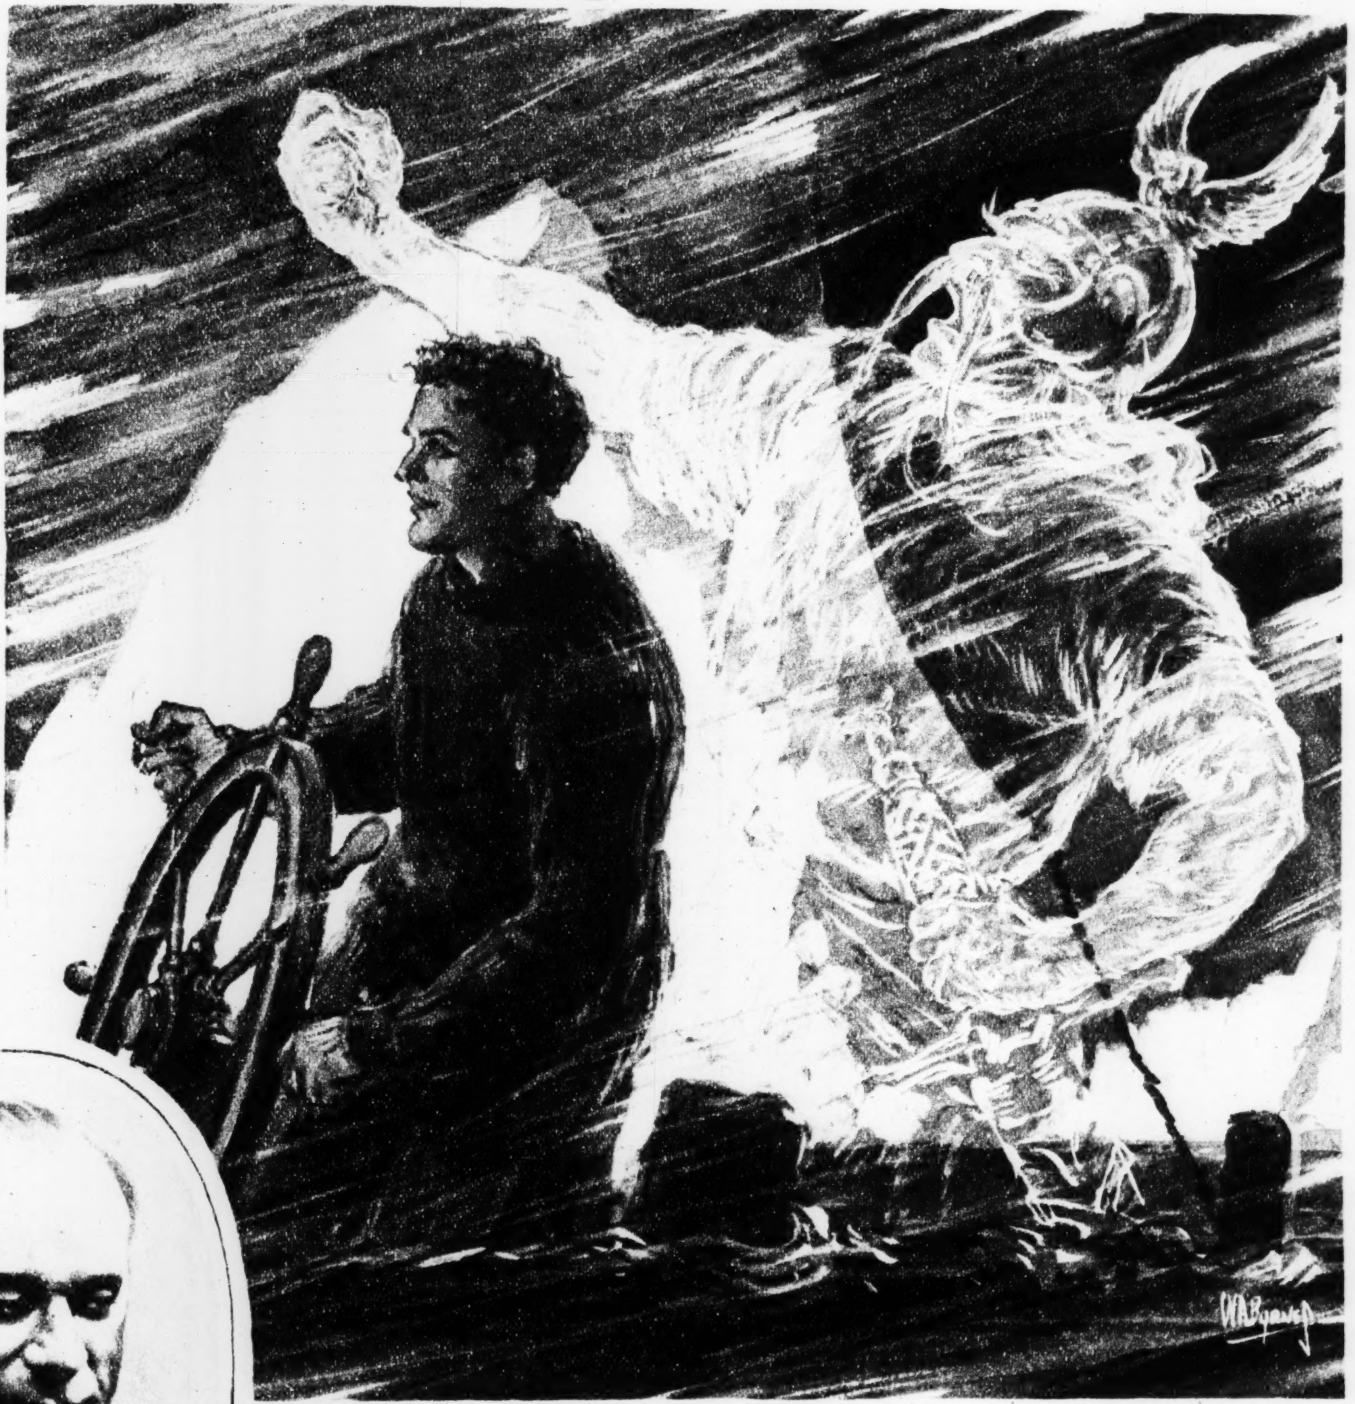
DR. A. WALLACE SINCLAIR, the ship's surgeon.

ALL in all, the Island had a full complement of 15 experienced officers and scientists aboard, and early in June it was announced she would shove off from Liverpool any day, and on the twenty-second of that month she weighed anchor and steamed from the Mersey. There were the usual cheers and bravos, the hand-claspings and the good wishes, the dull baritones of the whistles of great ships in the harbor and the squeaky falsetto shrieks of the small towing craft.

And the men on the Island laughed gayly and made nonchalant salutes, but under their slouchy insouciance was a feeling of uneasiness. Already there was something ominous in the air. There was nothing a man of them could put his finger on, so each man kept his feelings to himself and badgered himself as a superstitious sailor man, as a man who was sailing away from ships and men for months to depend alone on the resources of himself and his 14 fellows. Each man told himself he was but touched with that feeling of awe that settles on one to make a long and strange and unprecedented voyage. But the feel of something ominous in the air still persisted. Men told themselves matters aboard the Island would not go well.

And then the evanescent clouds of superstition began to take shape, and these airy masses were discovered not to be clouds of superstition. It was something about Grettir Algarsson that seemed wrong. Just what? Nothing quite definite. Perhaps the way he talked, perhaps little mannerisms. It might even have been an almost imperceptible swagger in the lad as he made his way down the deck. But it was not long before one man had something to touch his finger to and the feel was cold and clammy and unpleasant.

On the fifth night out Mr. Bee-Mason, the cinematographer, was standing on the deck gazing into the ocean when someone touched him on the shoulder. Turning around he saw Algarsson.



Young Grettir Algarsson saw in himself, perhaps, a reincarnation of that old Icelandic hero, Grettir the Strong.

"Can you come into my cabin, Buzz?" the young commander asked him, calling Bee-Mason by the nickname Shackleton had given him years before.

Bee-Mason nodded and followed Grettir Algarsson to the lad's little cabin, its interior only half visible in the yellowed light. Then Algarsson turned to his cinematographer and said: "Bee-Mason, do you know that I am really the Earl of Akureyri? Well, I am. Let me tell you Akureyri is one of the chief towns of Iceland. And in Akureyri I claim vast estates.

"Sit down, Bee-Mason, and listen to me. For, man, this is—but listen. This expedition is not intended as a money-making concern. And it isn't intended as a scientific affair. This expedition, Bee-Mason, is political. Political! I want to cement the good feeling between Iceland and England."

Mr. Bee-Mason could make nothing of young Algy's declamation at the time. "He is a silly, romantic boy," he decided. And so the next day, when Algarsson cornered the cinematographer on the after deck and declared he had sparred with Jack Dempsey, who subsequently told him he was the quickest man he had ever met, Bee-Mason put the whole business aside with the decision that young Algy was a boaster, fond of extraordinary statements and fantastic ones.

Mr. Bee-Mason had never chanced to hear of Grettir the Strong, Grettir the Outlaw, Grettir the Brave. He wasn't aware of how Grettir, when a boy playing ball on the ice with others older than himself, became angry with the opponent who outplayed him and struck him in the forehead with the ball so hard that the skin was broken. And how Grettir was hurled on his back for his pains.

But the cinematographer was soon to have a very similar experience. The Island had steadily been proceeding northward and was a few days out of Spitzbergen, when one afternoon young Algarsson sauntered into the ship's saloon and, slouching in a chair, declaimed his ability as a wrestler. "I am better, too," he said, "than any Japanese jiu-jitsu man, for I have met Japan's best and thrown them. All of them."

And so boasting, he cast about for someone to wrestle with him, and finally Mr Bee-Mason, 25 years his senior, accepted. The others formed a ring around them, but not for long, because soon the cinematographer had put young Grettir on the floor and counted ten.

But the lad was not disconcerted. He told them of his two-handed sword, and such a sword he had with an edge of unusual keenness. He bragged he could toss a penny in the air and, letting it fall on his sword's sharp edge, split the penny in two. He was often asked to perform the feat. He would never do it.

THE weather was getting intensely cold, the Arctic voyage had begun. There was much to do, but Grettir Algarsson amused himself by telling the officers and scientists and men that Commander Worsley was very jealous of him because he, the rightful heir of the Earldom of Akureyri, held a shipmaster's certificate that was far better than the one held by Commander Worsley.

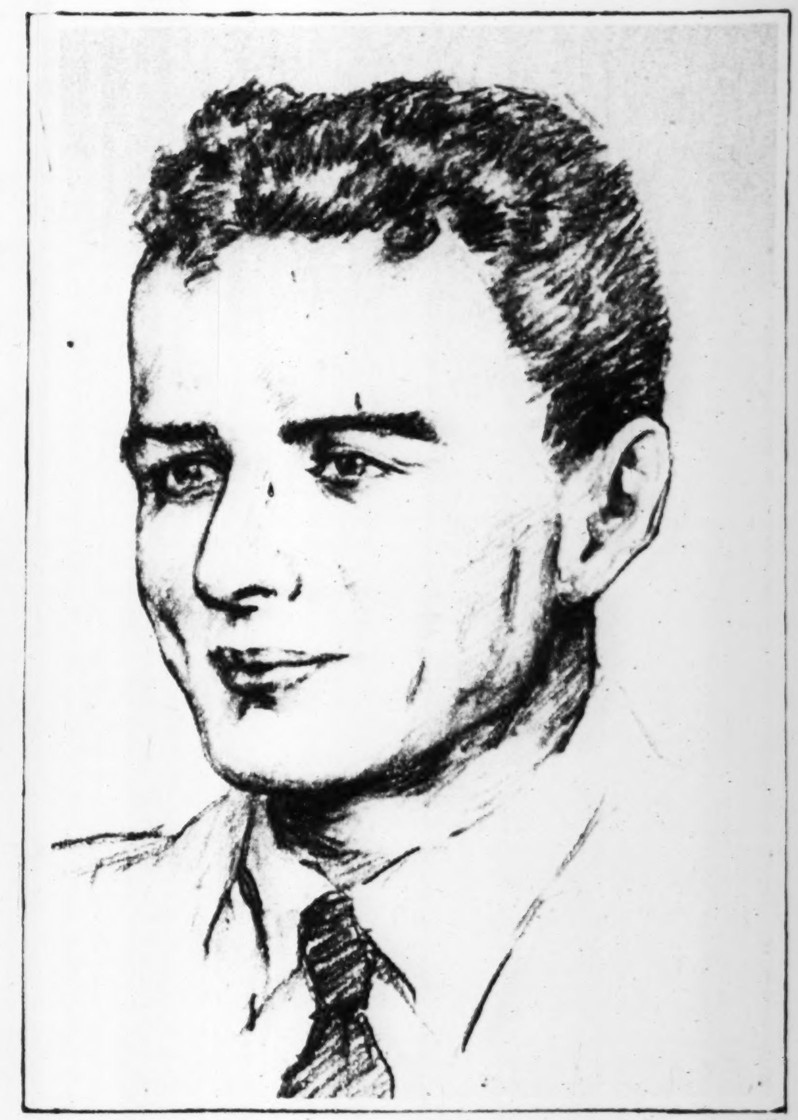
Such were the tales he told when he came above decks, which was seldom, for 18 to 20 hours each day he spent stretched out on his bunk in his cabin, and on those rare occasions when an officer or a seaman sought him out for instructions they found him lazily drawing pictures of ships or airships on scraps of paper or on his cabin table. When Mr. Bee-Mason asked him once why he didn't pitch in and do his work, Grettir replied he was used to a life of luxury, and turned over in his bunk.

The officers and the men, the scientists and the surgeon, began to take no notice of the boy explorer. They found he was utterly untrustworthy of helping his expedition, and they looked askance at what they termed his remarkable behavior. It was very cold, the thermometer registered 20 degrees of frost, the ice packs were becoming dangerous, there were constant watches to be kept, and men could not be kept at the watches long. But Algarsson gave no heed to the dangers of his expedition. Instead he would burst into Bee-Mason's quarters and relate strange tales, for it seemed he had decided on the cinematographer as his confidant.

And so one night he told this man of his wonderful palace at Akureyri, where he had entertained the King of Denmark.

"WHEN His Majesty arrived," young Algy declaimed, "I was standing on my palace steps. Suddenly I struck my drawn sword three times against the face of my shield, and at the third stroke 3000 armed men sprang at attention and saluted the King."

And on another occasion Grettir told another member of his expedition that with 90



GRETTIR ALGARSSON, the 24-year-old boy who was much more romantic than scientific, according to his subordinates' reports.

brave Icelanders he some day meant to capture a town, which he refused to name, situated on the Red Sea, for to revenge a kinsman who had been killed there.

It was Grettir the Brave who spent great parts of his life avenging the deaths of his kinsman, it was Grettir's half-brother who traveled to Constantinople to avenge Grettir's death; avenging the death of a kinsman was the plot round which most North sagas were wound; no Icelandic saga was complete without it.

One day Grettir Algarsson, finding an officer alone, announced he was the only surviving heir to Iceland's throne. "When I have ascended my throne," he declared, "I shall make war on Portugal and capture all of her colonies."

On a small ship, dangerously picking its way through the Arctic ice, with but a total of 15 men aboard it, rumors spread fast. Algarsson's stories, his declarations and his astounding attitudes, threw the ship's personnel into that state which on such a voyage becomes precarious. Then it was found that no adequate clothing had been brought along, the food was so poor the men were often compelled to go hungry, but young Grettir bothered himself not a whit. He instead ordered the 12 mugs on board ship cut to four, and so the men coming off night watch had to wash their own mugs and light their own fires before they could have a hot drink.

Thus far the lad's talk had been boisterous, romantic, melodramatic. It had made everyone uneasy; but there had been nothing to fear in it, nothing to be really afraid of. Till Algarsson told something to the cinematographer which put him on his guard.

The Island was making its way toward Northeast Land, the general direction of Dove Bay. Algarsson came to Bee-Mason. "At Dove Bay," said Algarsson, "I will land a sledge party. In it will be you, Bisset and me. We will be gone three days, I'll tell them. Now, Bee-Mason, you pretend to injure your back. Bisset and I will leave you in a tent. I'll leave you my rifle, so you won't be afraid of the polar bears. On the way back I'll have Bisset pretend he has been injured in some way. Then I'll make it back to the ship for assistance. They'll think I'm a great hero, Buzz, who fought his way back through terrible hardships to save his companions."

Mr. Bee-Mason at once reported the conversation to Commander Worsley. The Island did not touch at Dove Bay.

THE end of July found this strange expedition far north. The Island had got into that maze of ice where a ship finds but little open water. Algarsson came out of his cabin and told the officer of the watch that he would relieve him. Suddenly from the bridge telegraph he signaled the engineer "Stop her." The next moment, "Full speed ahead." Immediately, "Full speed astern." And over and over until the engineer, nearly crazed, ran up the ladder demanding to know what the trouble was.

Then came a worse experience and one which nearly meant death for every man aboard. Algarsson took the wheel one day, as the fancy moved him. He announced he had taken charge of the ship. The ship was in open water, there was place for fair sailing, but near about was exceptionally heavy pack ice. And Algarsson, putting the ship hard about, deliberately drove the ship's nose hard into the ice. The crash was so terrific the ship's bow was near stove in.

ALL this time the scientists and officers of the ship were making important discoveries and observations. And the supposed leader of the expedition had turned out to be nothing but a hindrance and a menace. The Island got to within 60 miles of the supposed Gilleslland. The ship could proceed no further, and then it was found Algarsson's airplane was not sufficiently heavy to carry the loads needed for the work. Everyone had accomplished something but the young commander. The ship put about and made for the south. The next day it was caught in pack ice. It was September, the Island was without necessary provisions, necessary clothing, she could not have stood the ice pressure of an Arctic winter. Desperately the men fought to free the brigantine from the ice. All but Algarsson, who spent his time shooting polar bears. Putting nine shots into an animal who had been killed by the third. On September 7 came a stiff southwester, Worsley crowded on all sail, bumped his ship through the ice and announced he was heading for Spitsbergen.

Then the climax. Off Cape North, on September 19, the Island was struck by a terrific gale. Worsley ordered the lifeboats swung for launching. Twice she rolled so heavily the starboard lifeboat filled with water. While the crew, officers and scientists fought desperately to keep the ship afloat Grettir Algarsson stood in the galley singing, to the cook: "We won't be sick until morning." And other parodies and other funny songs.

In the year 1000 had another Grettir reclined at his ease in a ship about to sink, and replied in biting songs to the pleas of his fellows to lend his hand in bailing out.

THE gale weathered, Worsley called a meeting of the officers and scientific men. Surgeon Sinclair was chief spokesman. He recounted all of Grettir Algarsson's misdemeanors, interrupted by Grettir Algarsson shouting, "That's a lie" to each of the doctor's statements. There were shouts, denials, affirmations. Algarsson challenged the doctor to a fight. The physician took off his coat. Bee-Mason jumped up and said if Algarsson fought the doctor he would have to fight him. Another officer stepped in between. Dr. Sinclair continued. He told of how Algarsson had painted the flag of Iceland on a piece of wood and tried to nail it to the ship's mast, which the British expedition, fitted out with British money, resented. Sinclair told of Algarsson's plan to leave Bee-Mason and Bisset on the ice. It was Bisset's first knowledge of it. Another fight was barely prevented. The meeting deposed Algarsson as leader of the expedition.

Today the Island and all her crew are back in England. And upon reaching England Mr. Bee-Mason told the tale that is related here. Commander Worsley calls it exaggerated, so does First Officer Dunn-Taylor. Young Grettir Algarsson denies it. Mr. Bee-Mason says of Worsley's denial: "Worsley is as incapable of treasuring resentment as he is of remembering a gale after he has gone through it." And to bolster the cinematographer's story is a letter written by Captain Dunn-Taylor to his parents, in which he says: "We have superseded Algarsson as leader for acts which you would scarcely credit."

It is related in the old Icelandic saga: "Many there were who bade Grettir farewell, but few bade him come back."

Here Is an Intimate Interview With Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt, Who Manages Biggest Federal Government Job Ever Held by a Woman—She Is Assistant Attorney-General. In This Article We Are Given a Colorful Close-Up of Her Unusual Personality.

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In the Department of Justice there are six Assistant Attorneys-General. Should you ask a dozen well-informed lawyers and politicians to name them, it is safe to say that at least 10 — probably all — would fail to name the six correctly, yet each would recall that Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt is the Assistant Attorney-General in charge of prohibition, tax and Federal prison cases. Continuing your questioning, should you ask lawyers who have opposed her in court and politicians who have sought special favors of her, what they think of Mrs. Willebrandt, the masculine answer would be: "She has a clear logical fearless masculine mind."

Still seeking facts about this remarkable woman, who, at the age of 30, was given the highest and most responsible position attained by a woman in the Federal Government, should you ask what sort of woman she is outside her office, what her tastes are, what are her recreations and amusements, the answers would be vague and indefinite or would deal with such externals as her quiet taste in clothes, her calm voice and gracious demeanor, all of which are in contrast with her steel-trap mind and her reputation for dealing with harsh facts in a harsh way.

THERE are reasons for the difference between Mrs. Willebrandt's reputation in public life and the haziness which surrounds her nonprofessional interests. She is known throughout the land for her official acts; they are a matter of record. As a public official she feels that the people who pay the taxes have a right to know what is going on under her direction. She is one of the most interviewed women in Washington, and she will talk freely, yet not boastfully, about her part in breaking up the Savannah rum ring, which was supplying the Atlantic coast states with illicit liquor; how she put George Remus, the Cincinnati bootleg king, behind the bars at Atlanta, and how she directed the investigation in the Jack Daniel distillery case. But only on rare occasions will she talk about herself—a much more interesting topic—and tell of her interests outside the Department of Justice.

Her reticence concerning what she considers her personal affairs was illustrated by her unheralded adoption of a 2-year-old girl. Last May she brought to Washington a pretty little orphan, whose mother, a friend of one of Mrs. Willebrandt's former clients, had just died. Not until September, when she had a picture made of herself and the child, did the news come out.

To hear her talk about and see her pride in this adopted child, Dorothy, would prove to the most cynical that the Assistant Attorney-General is not a rabid feminist or a ruthless career seeker. She is, in fact, a normal woman with an exceptional mind—if that is not a contradiction of terms—whose nonprofessional life is that of a modern intelligent woman who has a clear idea of what she knows, what she wants and how she can direct her life to obtain the greatest measure of happiness.

MRS. WILLEBRANDT is 34 years old. Some say she looks younger. That may be the flattery of friendship. None says she looks older. That is the truth, although four years as director of prohibition prosecution might well give anyone gray hairs. There is not a trace of gray in her heavy dark hair. Some friends also say that she has a "slight girlish figure." It is girlish, but that of an athletic girl who is fond of hiking, horseback riding and fishing. Her eyes are grayish-blue. Her complexion dark but clear.

At her office and in court she almost invariably wears gray or blue tailored suits, but by her own confession she loves to "dress up" in the evening and is fond of bright colors. Being dark, she formerly leaned toward the Spanish in colorful evening dress and wore a high Spanish comb.

When asked why she favored the inconspicuous in her business clothes she replied: "I don't want to be conscious of my clothes and I don't want others to be distracted by them. I couldn't work or conduct a case if I thought anyone was paying attention to how I looked."

"Is that the reason you haven't bobbed your hair?"

"I fancy it is. I'd love to have a shingle bob," she replied.

The writer had interviewed Mrs. Willebrandt several times and on many occasions had sought information from her on routine departmental matters. Invariably, she had answered questions with quick decisiveness. At this interview, however, when the purpose was explained, she seemed actually nonplussed. She didn't know how to begin. But when she got into her subject she leaned over her broad-topped desk and talked with the fluency which had marked her other answers.

Her life has been one of struggle. Along the route from the sod house in the Texas Panhandle, where she was born; through Missouri and Kansas, where she received her education; into Michigan and into Arizona, where she taught school; into California, where she made her reputation as a lawyer; to the Department of Justice—all along this route she has had to recognize the facts and take forceful action. She makes decisions and she knows why she makes them. The result is that when she is asked a question, either about her work or herself, she has an answer ready. Secretary Hoover has the same type of mind—the facts have been studied, the causes determined, everything is neatly card-indexed in the back of the brain, ready for use when the occasion arises.

Take, for example, the philosophy of life, a most nebulous proposition. Some of us never think about it at all. Few of us can state in comprehensible terms what we are here for, what we are searching for. To some it is a "game." To others it is a stage, where each plays his major or minor role, mouthing words and thinking thoughts put there by a higher power. To Mrs. Willebrandt life is a voyage, not a race. She is still a member of the Christian Church in Kansas City, but she contends that religion cannot be expressed by the tenets of any one denomination.

She believes that there is a Supreme Power which urges men and women on, which permeates their being, which directs their thoughts and activities. Asked if this was not Emersonian Transcendentalism, she replied that even the Sage of Concord couldn't express the feelings which surge within the human breast. If one is to live life to its fullest, according to Mrs. Willebrandt, one must store up experiences of permanent value which will be real treasures when one is thrown upon one's own resources.

"LIFE is not merely the gaining of one objective, of attaining one ambition," she said. "Money and careers are the usual goals, yet it seems foolish to me to spend all the vital energy with which we are endowed to attain these ends. Often these goals are reached, and more often than not those who have attained them have become so warped in their character, so narrow in their outlook, that they cannot enjoy the fruits of their labor or divert their minds to more important and lasting things.

"Some say there is a fate which pursues us. There may be. Yet we can so direct our life, so manage our affairs that we can cheat what others call fate."

This brought the interview to the question of education and present-day youth. Let it be said here that Mrs. Willebrandt is not one who believes the present generation is on the primrose path to the everlasting bonfire. She rejoices in the fact that the modern youth, the girl as well as the boy, has a chance to look facts squarely in the face.

"The young people of today are not raised behind a high fence, as I was," she explained. "They have a chance to learn from the start what was hidden many years ago. Every generation thinks the one succeeding it is wild, loose and irresponsible, and the younger generation thinks the older is dull and hypercritical. But the world progresses and when the present younger generation becomes the older generation it will think the newest generation is going to the bow-wows. I believe that the present generation is learning more about real values, is storing up more valuable experiences, than any generation before it. On our journey from the cradle to the grave we really live an isolated life. Our contacts with others are mostly superficial. Our real life is within ourselves. For many the inner life is as barren and drab as an empty room. Modern education should strive to furnish the inner life with experiences of rare and solid value, just as a connoisseur would furnish a room, a place of repose and content, a retreat from the sham of the outer life.

"The modern youth must determine—or someone else must determine—what sort of experiences shall be stored up. I firmly believe that most of us are directed by the interests of our early youth. The things we learned as children influence us more than we care to admit. We were started on one road or another by the unconscious assimilation of ideas when we were in the formative state."

ALTHOUGH Mrs. Willebrandt did not say so, it is apparent that she intends to follow this line in her education of little Dorothy, who she says, even now at two and a half years old, can repeat verse after verse of the Bible, which her foster mother reads to her every morning.

And to show that she intends to practice what she says about storing up imperishable riches, beyond the mere attaining of a great legal reputation or a fortune, Mrs. Willebrandt promises that when she has a more permanent residence and a larger income she will certainly adopt two more children.

"Will you adopt two girls, or will your views as a feminist permit you to adopt a boy?" she was asked.

"Do I look like a feminist?" she countered. "No, one of the two will be a boy. Perhaps the next one."

It was learned from an intimate friend that Mrs. Willebrandt had desired to adopt a child ever since she came to Washington, but only this year was she able to make suitable arrangements.

When she first came to Washington she immediately became submerged in her work at the department. She stayed on the job night and day in Washington, or traveled about the country helping District Attorneys to enforce the Volstead act. In Washington she lived at a hotel close to the department and had no other thought than to make good in the responsible position in which she had been placed.

AFTER four years she has the work well in hand, but she still retains some of the habits she acquired during that strenuous period, and she is still the despair of her young woman secretary.

"I don't see how she does it," this young woman complained. "When we were traveling she would have a square of toast and some orange juice for breakfast. We would work all morning, and about 3 o'clock in the afternoon she'd remember we hadn't had lunch. We would have a light lunch, but it wasn't until dinner that we had time for a real meal."

But the indefatigable Assistant Attorney-General is leading a more normal life now. Together with Miss Annabelle Mathews, an Assistant Solicitor in the Internal Revenue Bureau, and Dr. Louise Stanley, formerly of the University of Missouri, now chief of the Bureau of Home Economics in the Department of Agriculture, she has a studio apartment just opposite Meridian Hill Park, in the diplomatic section of Washington. Here it is that little Dorothy has been established as queen of the household.

Here, besides Dorothy, she has her books and here she can meet her friends. These three are her chief delight. Since she has come to Washington she has given up athletic pursuits, with the exception of hikes. She told the writer that when she was in Los Angeles her chief delight was to leave the office at 6 o'clock Saturday evening, hike seven miles to a shack in the woods, and spend Sunday walking, horseback riding and fishing. She said that in Washington she tried to play golf, but gave it up.

"It was too slow and I was too nervous," she said. "I have never been able to do anything where it took co-ordination of mental and physical capacities."

SHE said she was not a good bridge player and never would be, because she couldn't "get excited" about any card game.

"I've only been playing bridge for a year," she said, "and it seems such a waste of time when there are so many other things I want to do."

An intimate friend said, however, that Mrs. Willebrandt played bridge "like a lawyer," and was far above the average in skill.

Next to her legal studies she delights in biography and history and reads everything she can find pertaining to Lincoln. Novels she reads only occasionally, and then merely as a diversion.

"Fifteen minutes after I've read a novel I couldn't tell you the plot," she explained. "All I'm interested in is the manner of presentation and the study of the characters."

She doesn't like detective stories—probably they seem tame after her experiences with bootleggers and Department of Justice secret agents. Like many who have been successful in their particular fields, she believes that she would have been happier if she had gone in for something else.

"I REALLY have the scientific mind," said the woman who has impressed every lawyer with whom she has come in contact. "I wanted to be a physician, because I love to study a condition or set of facts, seek the cause and propose a remedy. I know now that I can't be a physician and will have to stick to law, but if I could have my way I'd like to take a year off and study the opinions of Mr. Justice Holmes of the Supreme Court.

"And he has the scientist's mind that goes back of the mere superficial aspects. He unravels all intricacies which appall the average lawyer. He really has been able to make the law, which is an embodiment of property rights, cover the fundamental human rights. He himself is the personification of the idea I tried to express when I said that we should so store up within ourselves rich experiences that we can sustain isolation from others. Think what a wealth of background that great man has!"

THE interview had been interrupted by at least 10 telephone calls. Some were from members of her department, others from officials in other branches of the Government. To each she gave a clear-cut forceful answer. The last call was from a friend from Arizona, lately arrived from New York, whom she invited to come to the studio apartment to see the glorious Dorothy.

And where the five other Assistant Attorneys-General, who are almost unknown to the world, would have invited a friend to have dinner at 7 o'clock, Mrs. Willebrandt, always natural and without the swank that characterizes most of Washington, asked the friend to "come out and have supper."

She doesn't like detective stories—probably they seem tame after her experiences with bootleggers and Department of Justice secret agents. Like many who have been successful in their particular fields, she believes that she would have been happier if she had gone in for something else.

"I REALLY have the scientific mind," said the woman who has impressed every lawyer with whom she has come in contact. "I wanted to be a physician, because I love to study a condition or set of facts, seek the cause and propose a remedy. I know now that I can't be a physician and will have to stick to law, but if I could have my way I'd like to take a year off and study the opinions of Mr. Justice Holmes of the Supreme Court.

"And he has the scientist's mind that goes back of the mere superficial aspects. He unravels all intricacies which appall the average lawyer. He really has been able to make the law, which is an embodiment of property rights, cover the fundamental human rights. He himself is the personification of the idea I tried to express when I said that we should so store up within ourselves rich experiences that we can sustain isolation from others. Think what a wealth of background that great man has!"

THE interview had been interrupted by at least 10 telephone calls. Some were from members of her department, others from officials in other branches of the Government. To each she gave a clear-cut forceful answer. The last call was from a friend from Arizona, lately arrived from New York, whom she invited to come to the studio apartment to see the glorious Dorothy.

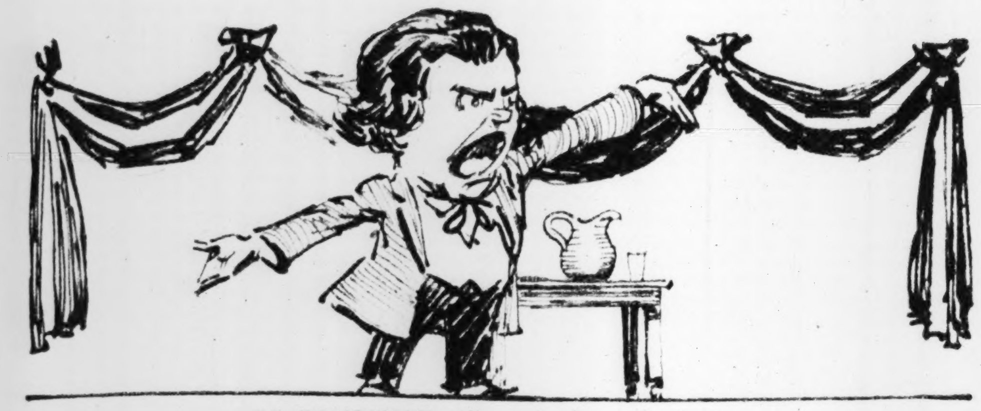
And where the five other Assistant Attorneys-General, who are almost unknown to the world, would have invited a friend to have dinner at 7 o'clock, Mrs. Willebrandt, always natural and without the swank that characterizes most of Washington, asked the friend to "come out and have supper."

"TALK TO YOURSELF!"

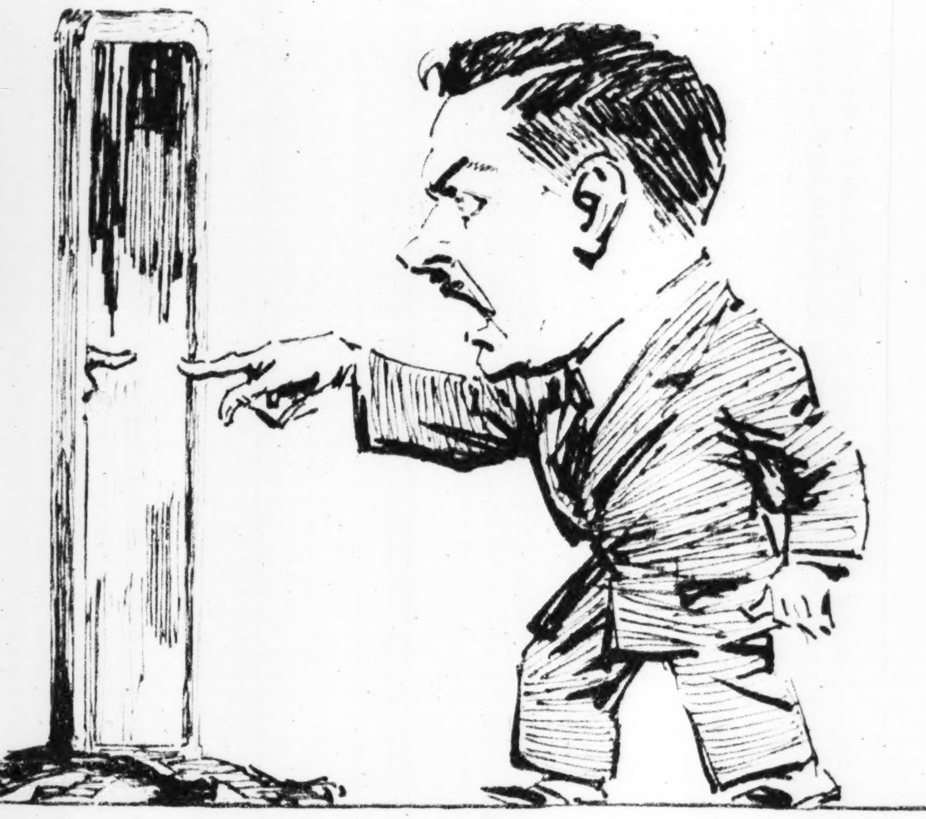
Says This Scientist

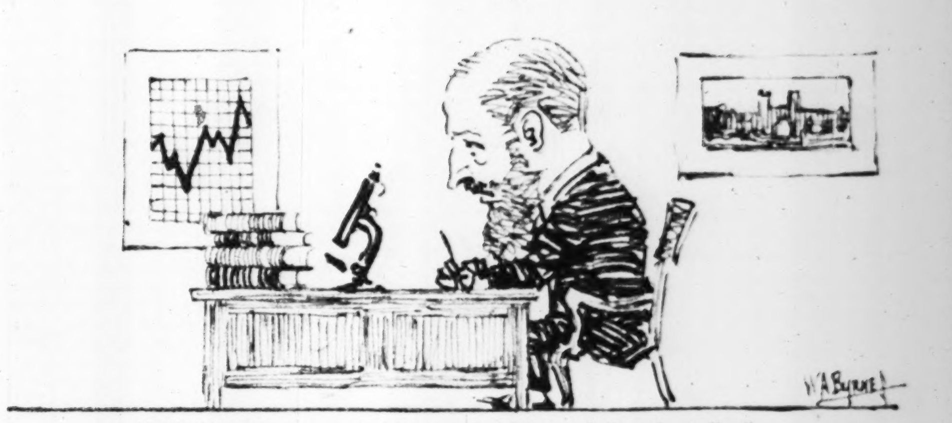
Introducing Chemistry to Business, Dr. Hilton Ira Jones Startled Several Hundred Chicago Business Executives Recently When He Gave Them a Few Amazing Pieces of Advice.

By HARRY R. BURKE
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff



"A POLITICIAN talks and talks and talks."





"A SCIENTIST thinks and thinks and thinks and then he talks."

CHICAGO.—"The one man on earth who needs a good talking to is yourself. And it makes no difference who you are, that's true." In these words Professor Hilton Ira Jones, director of the Redpath Research Laboratories in Chicago, and former director of the School of Chemical Engineering at the Oklahoma Agricultural College at Stillwater, Oklahoma, explained why he had stood before a group of Chicago's big business executives and told them to look themselves in the face in the mirror every morning and start the day by talking to themselves.

Dr. Jones is a chemist, a hard-fact, practical scientist. He defines a scientist by contrasting him with a politician. "The politician talks and talks and talks," he says. "The scientist thinks and thinks and thinks—and then he talks." From his knowledge of chemistry he was telling these big business men how to make themselves the masters of their jobs.

"First you must be masters of yourselves," he said to them. "You must be masters of your mind and masters of your body. When you want a man in your employ to master his job—to do something in a certain way—you talk to him. From your own standpoint there is no man needs a talking to more than you need it yourself."

He was speaking to the members of the Chicago Executives' Club. The presidents, the vice presidents, the general managers of Chicago's biggest banks, manufactories and commercial enterprises. Here, among these practical fellows, was a science-sharp, telling them to stand like a floorwalker before their mirrors every morning.

"Pull yourselves together. Pull yourselves up." He clasped his hands beneath the point of his breastbone and gave an upward lift. "There's where the solar plexus, the great nerve center, lies. Don't let it sag, or you will sag. It controls—or probably controls—a number of little chemical factories in your body. And those chemical factories make you what they are. If they are functioning properly you are master of yourself. And, therefore, of your job."

They knew he was familiar with chemicals—this man. Some of them were acquainted with a few of Dr. Jones' practical discoveries in science; the ones which had a commercial value. Things like that were easy to understand. Perhaps there was something more in this man's talk than appeared on the surface.

"DON'T give yourself just a once-over as you look there in the mirror. Don't bother about the fit of your coat or whether your tie is on straight. Look at the cut of your jaw. Look at the lines of your face. Take an inventory of your physical self. Do it in a hard, business-like way. Just as you would inventory a factory, a stock of goods or an estate. Don't let enthusiasm or friendship carry you away. Be honest with yourself.

"When you've seen and know what you are, think of your job. Think of what you want to do and of what you want to become. Tell yourself that you must. That you will.

"You tell your employes with your conscious mind what you want done. If they are good employes they do it. If you tell yourself what you want done it will prove itself a good employe. It will do it. Impress upon yourself that 'You must!' 'You will!' You will be surprised.

"The subconscious mind controls the activities of those 22 chemical laboratories in your body that I was speaking of. Yesterday I had a jaw swollen to three times its normal size. It didn't seem possible that I could be here to talk to you today." He patted his right jaw tenderly and then continued:

"I looked at myself in the mirror last night. I gave myself a good talking to. I said 'I must!' I said 'I will!' I'll be frank. I had to give myself another talking to this morning. The swelling was reduced but it wasn't gone. But it did go, mostly. This jaw of mine hasn't got an exactly even keel, but it's not too lop-sided.

"If you talk to yourself in that fashion you will accomplish what you want to do. You will set those laboratories to work—as they ought to work.

"Most of you people know the importance of chemistry in modern industry. It is everywhere. But you do not realize the importance of chemistry in your own lives.

"I'm going to tell you something. Suppose things are going altogether wrong in your office. Suppose the people you employ have fallen down on their jobs. You are mad. You call them in and you 'blow them up.' You give them a talking to, and possibly relieve your feelings a little. You tell them 'how stupid they are.

"Now, don't you be stupid enough to go right out and eat a lunch. And if you are, don't be so fatally stupid as to eat a hard-boiled egg with that lunch.

"You might as well eat toadstools. The egg will be just as poisonous.

"Let me explain. The saliva in your mouth is normally alkaline. It always ought to be alkaline. But just get mad. It turns acid immediately. Those little chemical laboratories in your body—the ductless glands of which we have heard so much—are at work. They are fulfilling their normal functions. Among the things they do is turn saliva acid when you are mad. Try with a bit of litmus paper and you will see. It will turn red quickly. Incidentally, it is hard on one's teeth—that acid. It is hard on one's teeth to get mad.

"DOWN in Texas we used to say that the bite of a 'black-gummed Negro' was poison. The bite of any man who is angry enough to bite is a very serious wound. But that is aside from the point. When the saliva turns acid the same thing happens in the stomach. The hydrogen ion concentration of the gastric juice will rise as often as 300 per cent in times of violent anger. When you take an egg into a stomach like that something is bound to happen.

"For in the yolk of an egg there is a substance called Lecithin, which is also found in sweetbreads and brains. Ordinarily in the stomach that digests into glycerine, fatty acids, phosphoric acid and cholin—all of them harmless, but in the highly acid stomach of any angry man the cholin oxidizes into muscarine, and muscarine is the poison of the toadstool.

"Once my little boy came home from school at noon crying. There had been a quarrel. He didn't want to talk about it. We didn't.

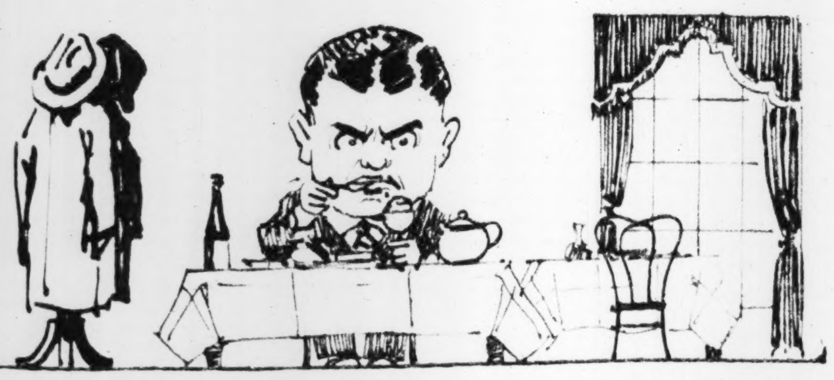
"That day there was an omelet for the luncheon. Nobody thought about it. He ate as usual. We almost lost our boy. It would have been as well to have fed him toadstools.

"Lecithin, as I said, is found in brains. In the University of Chicago I helped analyze 1200 brains, and we found it to be a fact that the intelligence of any animal or individual is virtually measured by the amount of Lecithin the brain contains. But don't think you can eat egg-yolks and get smart. That's not true. We carried out a long and determined research to make sure of it. We know.

"These 22 little chemical factories in your bodies are busy all the time. Some of the things they do are startling. During the war I was working in the chemical warfare section. We were studying tear gas. We wept barrels of tears. It occurred to us to see what the chemical content of tears might be.

"Miss Gladys Trevithick was my assistant. She boarded with a Mrs. Owens, who was in tears upon almost every occasion. She cried from merriment, she cried from joy, she cried from sorrow and she cried from anger. We had devised an instrument for measuring as little as one part of ten million chlorine salts. Incidentally we found that tear gas tears had exactly the same isotonic pressure as the blood. They were filtered blood plasma.

DR. HILTON IRA JONES,
Former Director of School of Chemical Engineering at Oklahoma Agricultural College, who here advances some new ideas.



"DON'T EAT a hard-boiled egg if you are angry. You might as well eat toadstools."

"Miss Trevithick gathered samples of Mrs. Owens' tears. We found that the tears she wept in anger contained just seven times as much salt as the tears she wept from joy. If you have ever been mad enough to cry you may remember that your tears tasted salty.

"These little glands, these little chemical laboratories in your body, regulate your personality, your vital movements. They control the involuntary muscles. They have no brain connection. We know through the researches of Dr. Charles E. de M. Sajous at the Jefferson School of Medicine that the involuntary muscular system of our bodies is controlled by chemicals released into the blood-stream by these ductless glands. 'Hormones' they are called.

"These hormones are not the chemicals themselves. We know little about them except that they make the chemicals already in the blood available to the body.

"For instance, there is the thyroid gland. The hormone it produces releases iodine to the body's uses. If we haven't that iodine available goitre results. There is a certain table salt manufactured from which the natural iodine has been removed in the crystallizing process. If you take a map of the United States showing where goitre is most prevalent you will find the areas exactly coincide with the states in which that salt is marketed. Three years ago the Commissioner of Health at Rochester, New York, discovered the prevalence of goitre, particularly in the schools, and conceived the idea of supplying the necessary iodine in the city's water. In that way he could reach those who wouldn't believe the salt they used was the cause of the disease. So the water was treated with sodium iodide. The development of goitre in three years has been stopped. And it is curious, but true, that the intelligence of the school children shows a distinct trend upward in Rochester as the result of the use of that sodium iodide.

"We can approximate hormone control by certain chemicals, so we have learned. For instance, when you run you pant. There is some reason for it. I can inject an isotonic solution of carbon into your blood as you sit there and you will at once begin to pant as though you had been running 20 miles.

"There used to be what were termed superstitions about the pre-natal environment of unborn children. Expectant mothers must do this or must not do that, it was said, for the sake of the child to come. Then it was decided that was all foolishness. But with the discovery of the functions of these ductless glands we find that pre-natal influence is to be seriously reckoned with. The mother's connection with her unborn child is not of nerve. It is a blood connection. The chemicals the endocrine glands release in her blood carry through the blood of her unborn child.

"In our bodies there are 22 of these ductless glands. Some of them have a very definite connection with our emotions. Consider adrenalin which is secreted by the suprarenal glands. It exerts a hormone control of heart beats. There are instances recorded where an injection of adrenalin has restored to action a heart that has stopped. Incidentally, it is what makes your hair stand on your head when you are frightened. And it also nerves a man up to action, as the saying is, when he fights.

"By testing a man's blood pressure I can tell whether he will make a football player or not. That sounds foolish. It isn't. The blood pressure gives a clue to the adrenalin his suprarenals secrete. It gives a measure of his fighting spirit.

"Take little Johnny Maulbecht, who was coach down at Oklahoma College. Johnny was one of the great ones in football. He was known as the Michigan 'cannon ball.' He only weighed 140 or 145 pounds but he'd tackle any 200-pounder or more, and Johnny would win in the clash. He didn't know how to lose. His adrenalin secretion wouldn't let him.

"I'VE seen his blood pressure rise over 100 when that fighting football spirit got to work. The normal blood pressure, you know, ought to be 100 plus a man's age.

"There are the parathyroid glands. Out at the University of Alberta they have discovered that they secrete a hormone which enables the blood to increase its lime content. That seems to indicate a possible remedy for tuberculosis of the bones, which is the result of too little lime in the blood. There is another of these parathyroids which determines whether we are fat, or lean, by heredity. My family is cursed with fatness. Diet as I will, I only reduce to a certain point. I cannot go beyond it.

"There is a reason, perhaps, as indicated by the fact that one of my relatives, Alfred Daniels, was for many years the fat man with Barnum's circus. I am no small man, but I could have stood in one leg of his trousers. All effort at dieting failed to reduce him. So did exercise. The man was an athlete—and a freak. His parathyroids did not function as they should.

"I have told you something about these 22 chemical factories in your body and what they do. Still, you may doubt whether I can prove that it's a good thing to stand in front of the mirror and talk to yourself.

"Try this and see.

"Take a small vessel, put your hand in. Then fill it with water exactly to the brim. Then stop and think about your hand. Watch the result. See how much water overflows. The more you concentrate upon your hand the more water you will displace.

"That was the basic theory of Sandow's system of physical training. You looked at the muscle and thought of it and the muscle grew strong.

"That rule follows through the procession of life. Inventory yourself. Determine what you want to be. Then talk to yourself about it. It works. Particularly talk about it to yourself just before you go to sleep at night. The endocrine glands will answer to the orders of your subconscious mind while you sleep.

"'As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.' That is good chemical science, as well as good moral doctrine. In the early days of Minnesota my father used to address the farmers' institutes of that state. He was one of the early advocates of planting tame grasses, and for that reason they called him 'Grass' Jones. There went with father on his institute work another man whom they called 'Hog'—shall we say?—Smith. Mr. 'Smith' was a specialist in Poland China hogs. He'd raised hogs for 40 years and he looked like one. Of course he did. That's all he thought about. Hogs comprised that man's ideal. He became like the thought that was in him. Men always do. Haven't you seen two old people who, having lived together past their golden wedding day and having thought the same things, have come to look alike? They do.

"Let's go back to football. Doesn't Knute Rockne get his men together before bedtime the night before the game and give them a talking to—a talking to to sleep over? It's good psychology. It's good physiology. It sets the subconscious mind to work during the hours these men are sleeping. The subconscious mind puts the suprarenal glands to work. The result next day is fighting determination. His men win."

THERE were other things Professor Jones said. Hard-fact business things. About chemistry. He told how the Dupont people had sought to find a use for useless sawdust. To begin with, at Georgetown, South Carolina, they made a very fine grade of grain alcohol—not wood alcohol—out of the sawdust. Then, by a treatment of sawdust with chlorine gas, white caustic soda and bisulphide of carbon, they developed a heavy liquid sawdust which they called viscose. They learned to spin the viscose and produce silk. That is what was known as fibre silk and now is called Rayon silk. Ninety-nine per cent of silk stockings, Professor Jones declared, were made from this product of waste sawdust. Then another treatment of viscose was discovered. It was made into a thick heavy wax. From that artificial ivory was developed. The same substance rolled and spread upon a sheet of cloth became fabrikoid, for upholstering automobiles.

Yeast was used in making the alcohol. The chemists studied that yeast. They found there were "bugs" on it. Miscroscopic bugs. Those "bugs," they discovered, determined whether or not fusel oil was in the alcohol. Fusel oil is the breath of death. That is what kills in "moonshine" whisky. They got a pure culture of these fusel oil microbes. The bugs reduced a can of Karo syrup to pure fusel oil. From that discovery the chemists of the Dupont interests developed a new finish for your automobile. Duco is a first cousin to fusel oil.

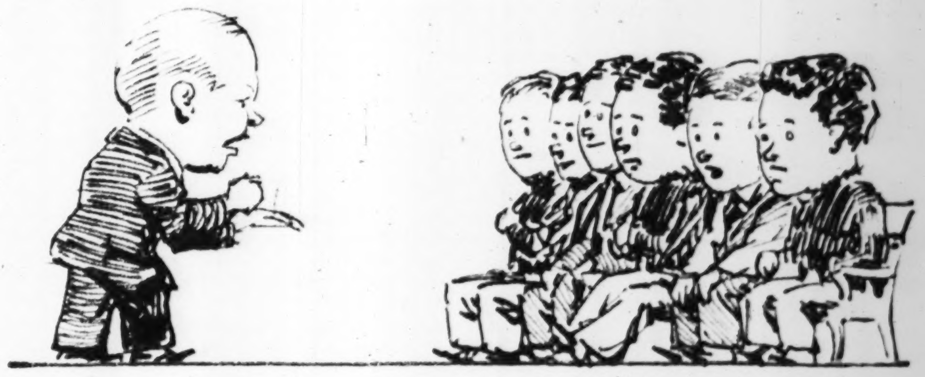
He told of his own experiences. He had sought a process for proofing canvas against mildew. He found it. The cellophane which is its basis has developed into other things. It waterproofs cloth and won't wash out in dry cleaning. It makes a glue that sticks tighter than the fusel oil bugs to the yeast they live on. It has become the basis of a paint. A Chicago packer is using a like basis to make a mayonnaise dressing out of animal fats which he will market in chunks for the housewife to reduce to liquid when she wants to use it.

"A practical man," said the Chicago executives. "He's got good hard business sense."

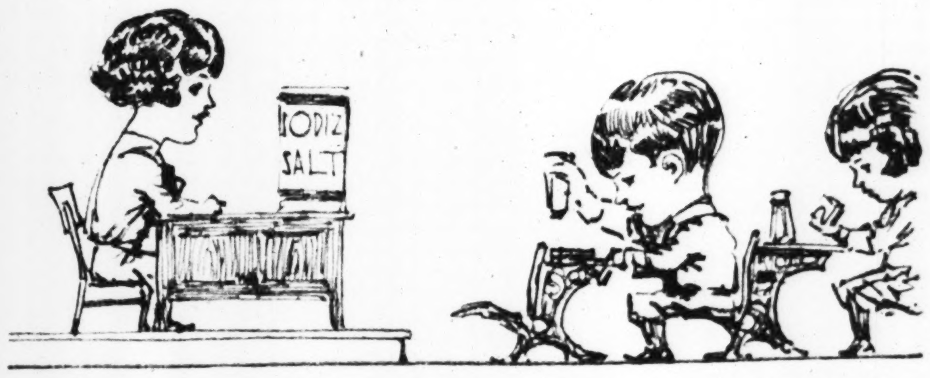
But some there were among them who went further than to just agree.

"Yes," assented one. "But it seems to me the most important chemistry so far as my business goes is that that's going on in me."

And he stopped for a moment in the hotel corridor to appraise himself in the mirror.



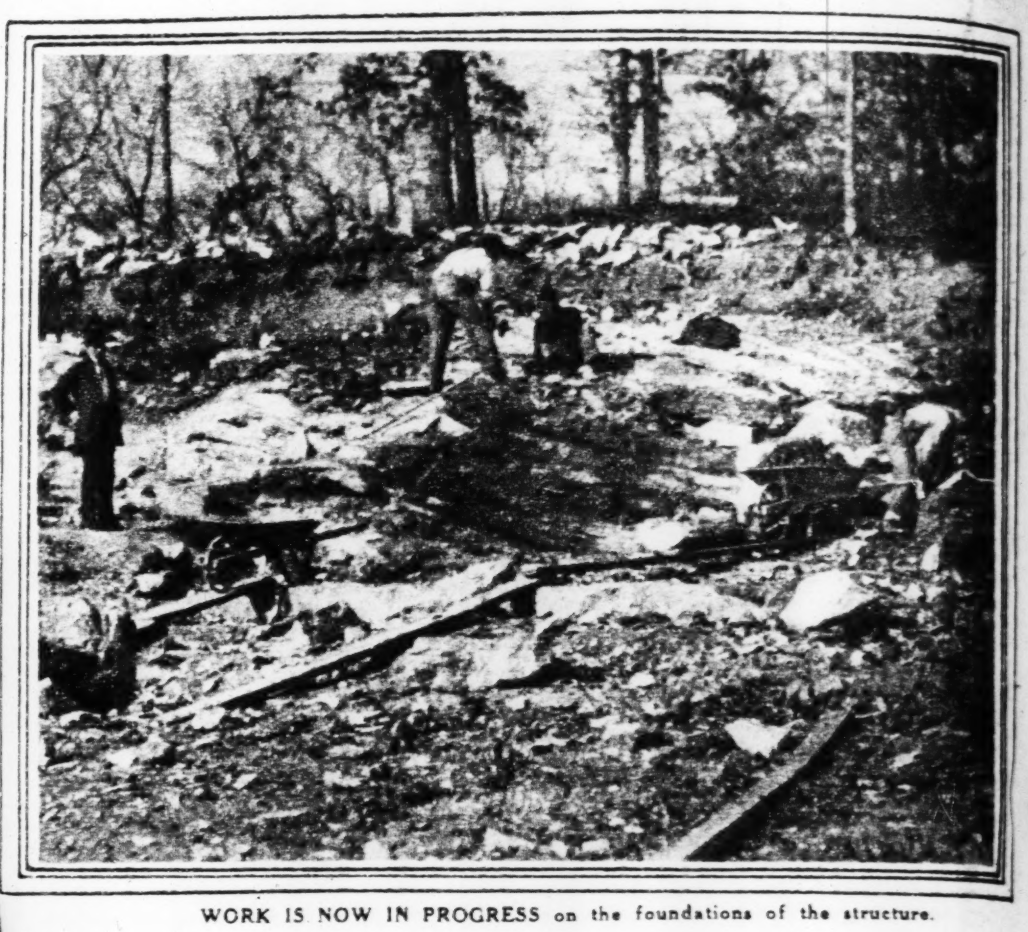
"DOESN'T ROCKNE get his men together before bedtime the night before the game and give them a talking to?"



"THE INTELLIGENCE of school children shows a distinct trend upward in Rochester through use of sodium iodide."

Building a Modern Pyramid

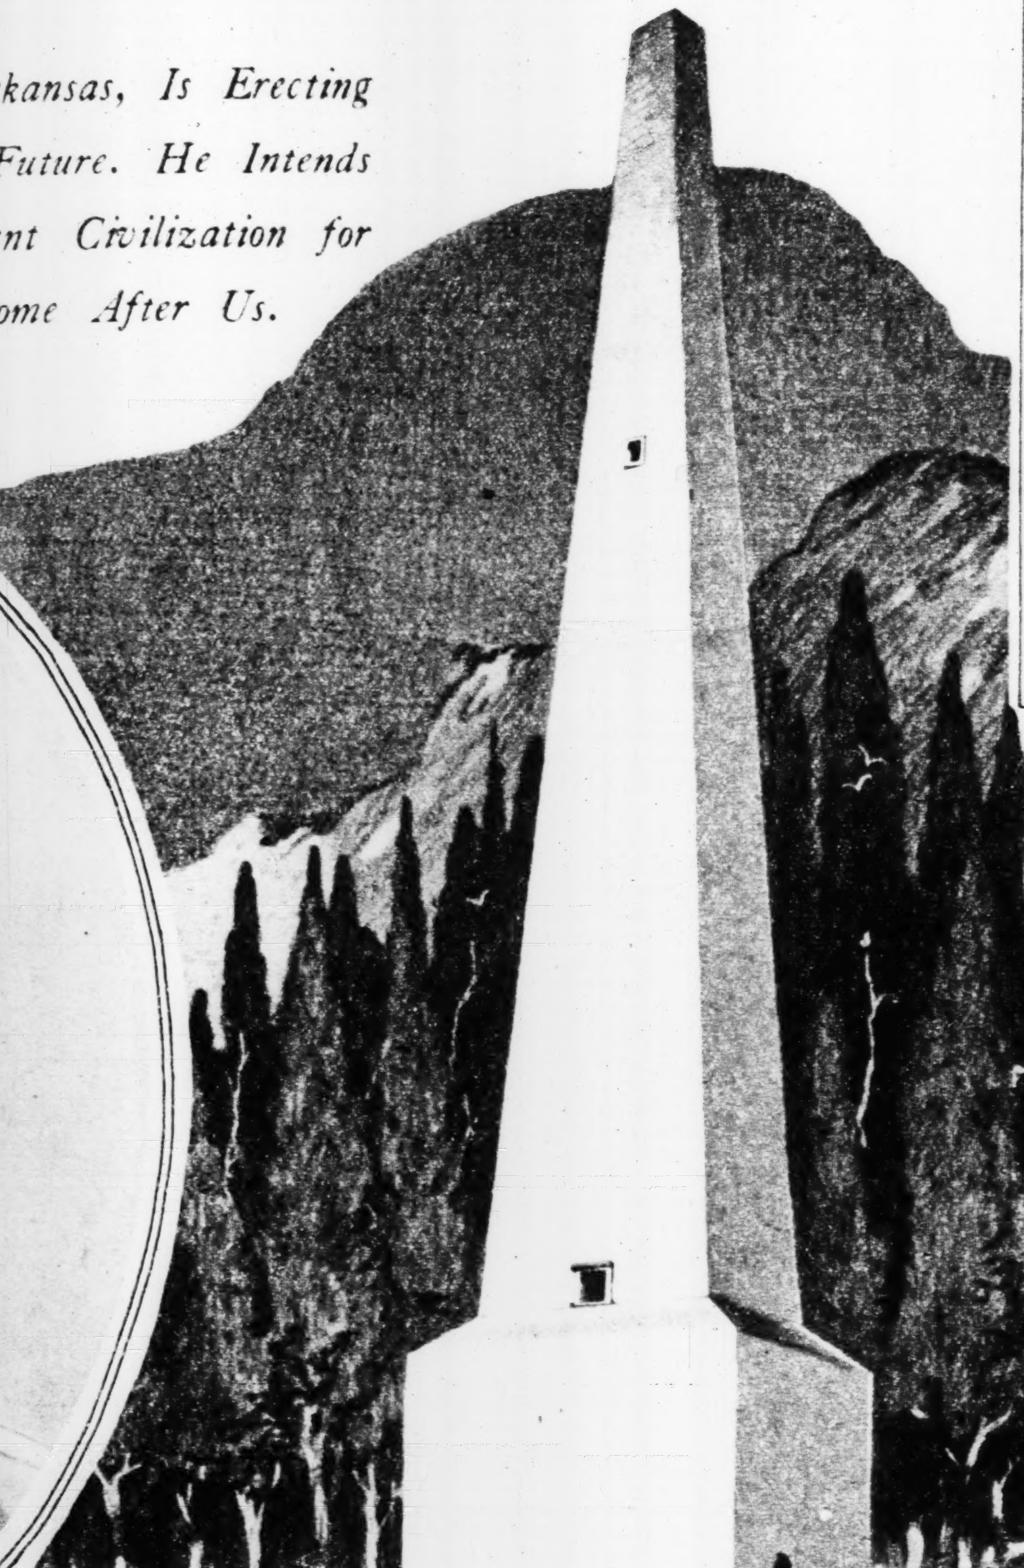
"Coin" Harvey of Monte Ne, Arkansas, Is Erecting a Massive Memorandum for the Future. He Intends to Preserve Accounts of the Present Civilization for the Benefit of Those Who Come After Us.



WORK IS NOW IN PROGRESS on the foundations of the structure.

W. H. "COIN" HARVEY,

A modern Pharaoh, builder of a pyramid to tell the future the secrets of the past.



THE PYRAMID as it will appear when completed.

By a Post-Dispatch Staff Correspondent.

ROGERS, Arkansas.—If this civilization were doomed to perish from the earth as other civilizations have perished in ages past and if it were possible to preserve for future races of man only such literature, historical records and scientific documents as could be sealed up in a vault 16 feet square and eight feet deep, what works would be most deserving of preservation? Or, to put it a little differently, what knowledge do we of the twentieth century possess that would contribute most to the advancement of a civilization that might flourish, say, 10,000 years in the future?

Whether or not this is a foolish question, it is one that is commanding no little interested attention in this part of the State of Arkansas just now because Monte Ne, the picturesque summer resort in the hills five miles south of here, is the scene of preparations for passing along to a remote posterity the written records of this present age of man. Monte Ne is to be the site of a pyramid; it is to become, in a sense, a "Valley of the Kings," inasmuch as it will be a burial place for articles and books which in time to come may be unearthed as relics of a remote antiquity.

IT'S a good deal like trying to shoot a rocket to the moon, this plan of bridging the next five thousand or the next ten thousand years of uncertainty with a library that will benefit our successors upon this part of the earth. Who knows whether there will be any succeeding civilization? Who knows how long the buried documents will have to endure in order to reach that civilization? And who knows what that civilization will lack that we of the twentieth century can supply?

It is especially this last question that seems to be in most pressing need of an answer now. William Hope (Coin) Harvey, author of the unique and daring program, has answered the other two to his own satisfaction and is going ahead with his plans. From his little log cottage at the foot of Majuba Hill and close by a mammoth spring that flows at the rate of 10,000 gallons an hour, he is watching the laying of the foundation for his pyramid. Within the next two years, he hopes, he will witness its rise upward toward the Ozark skies from among the shadows of South Mountain, which looms just across the creek. The woods about the resort already are echoing the sound of pickaxe and shovel as workmen dig the soil away from the great limestone strata which will support the structure. Large quantities of cement and sand are stored nearby for the concrete which will begin taking form in the spring. The structure is virtually assured. There remains now the task of selecting and preparing the things which it is being built to house.

Coin Harvey, author and long-famous exponent of bi-metallism, best remembered perhaps for his writings which figured prominently in the nomination of William Jennings Bryan for the presidency in 1896, is just the type of man one might expect to find behind such a venture as that of attempting to establish communication with races and peoples far in the future—a dreamer, true enough, but a dreamer with the resolution and energy to put his dreams into effect or at least to spend his life trying to do so.

AN AMATEUR philosopher, amateur historian, and amateur archeologist as well as a writer in the field of economics, he is convinced that our civilization is rapidly on the decline; that it must eventually fall victim to the forces of commercialism, greed and intolerance which, he declares, are now gnawing at its vitals. With it, he firmly believes, will perish the bulk of our art, our literature and inventions. Accordingly, he is undertaking the task of storing away for the benefit of another age such fruits of this as may be given lasting protection from time and the elements behind solid walls of concrete. From a spur of Majuba Hill his pyramid, a graceful obelisk, will tower 130 feet above the valley and on its summit will appear this inscription, addressed to the tomb explorer of the distant future:

"When this can be read, go below and find the record of and the cause of the death of a former civilization."

This strange project may be visionary, as many of his neighbors in nearby Rogers declare it is; it may be futile and even foolish to spend $50,000 on such a whim of fancy, but Coin Harvey, in characteristic fashion, is consecrated to his dream. He believes he will do for future races what every archeologist now wishes that peoples of the remote past had done for us.

"ALL civilizations of the past have died," he argues. "They died as a result of the same ills that are attacking this one and bringing it to ruin. Unless an almost incredible change in human nature and human character occurs, this one will die like the others and a new civilization will rise, in time, on its ruins. The chances are that all or most of the inventions we have perfected, the art that we have produced and the lore that we have gathered will die with the race. Then the new race or races which will inhabit the earth will be compelled to advance laboriously step by step to a position of enlightenment, just as we have done since the Dark Ages. If peoples of the past had foreseen the fall of their civilizations and had intentionally left their records for succeeding races, how much more knowledge we would have now. But they didn't. We find only fragments which they left for another purpose entirely. However, exploration of their tombs has taught us that if there is a means by which we can preserve for future races some of the worth-while things of our own world, it should be well worth our effort—not to us, perhaps, but to them. The only way to do this, so far as we know, it to seal up the records in an airtight structure of stone that will probably endure until the new civilization has progressed far enough to dig them out and take advantage of them. This, then, is the reason for the pyramid."

Even if it does seem visionary and possessed of only a slender chance of accomplishing its purpose, Harvey's project is not without an element of fascination. The visitor, however skeptical he may be at first, soon absorbs a bit of the gray-haired author's enthusiasm when he surveys the picturesque locality that is to be marked as a treasure vault for the ages and enters into a discussion of just what is really worth preserving for an age and a people we know nothing about. Selection of the pyramid's contents, only tentatively made as yet, undoubtedly will prove to be one of the most fascinating phases of the undertaking.

The builder expects to take the matter under advisement with the public before time for closing the vault arrives, but in the meantime he is developing a few ideas of his own about what the prospective buried treasure should comprise. First, according to his outline, there will be a volume which Harvey intends to write himself, outlining briefly the attainments of the human race in the last ten centuries and analyzing as far as possible the factors which, in his opinion, are hastening the world's descent toward barbarism.

THERE will be three vaults in the pyramid, one above the other, and each will contain a copy of this work. The printed pages will be covered with a thin transparent paper to prevent the ink from fading, and each copy will be enclosed in an airtight glass case. Other works, to which the protective devices also will be extended, will comprise roughly, an encyclopedia set, a dictionary, possibly a Bible, and some two dozen volumes, each pertaining to some specialized industry or scientific achievement of the age. The writing of these technical works, according to Harvey's present plan, will be placed in the hands of men who excel in their particular fields. For instance, he will ask Thomas A. Edison to write a book on electricity and electrical inventions.

Further items are to include pictures of all important inventions and mechanical appliances, pictures of animals and birds, statuettes of people, showing the styles of dress prevalent in different periods, samples of glassware, chinaware and articles made of metal, and by no means least there will be a ponderous volume yet to be designed, for use as a key to the English language—a sort of "Rosetta Stone" to assist archeologists of the future in deciphering the writings in the event no other record of the present-day language remains when explorers shall have penetrated the concrete walls of the vaults.

Beyond this tentative outline, the builder is undecided upon what literary works will be preserved. He is awaiting with interest whatever suggestions the public has to make, and if the rage for "selecting" the 10 best books runs true to its accustomed form, he will not lack suggestions. Not only is space available for a wide variety of technical books but also for numerous works of fiction and poetry. Possibly a few examples of the painter's art or the sculptor's may find their place in the storehouse if the expense is not too great. Harvey is planning definitely only what he feels able to carry out without financial assistance.

Although he is in comfortable circumstances, Coin Harvey is not a rich man. He has published half a dozen books since 1894, when he first gained prominence with "Coin's Financial School," and some of these works have had a circulation of more than a million copies each, but much of the fortune accruing from his royalties has been spent in beautification of Monte Ne, where numerous quaint cottages, summer hotels and picturesque towers dot the wooded slope of Spion Kop and hover along the creek bank under the shadow of South Mountain. Most of these holdings have been sold now and the builder, past 74 years of age, is devoting what remains of his life to his pyramid.

CONTRARY to general opinion, it was not the exploration of King Tutankhamen's tomb in the Valley of the Kings that inspired Harvey with the idea of entombing records for a later civilization to find. He declares he resolved upon the project as early as five years ago—before King Tut's tomb was heard of. Originally he planned to build the obelisk at his own expense and is still appropriating his pyramid fund according to the restrictions of that arrangement, but now he believes he will be able to equip the strange tomb on a more fitting and elaborate scale than he had hoped at first because contributions to further the work are arriving almost daily in amounts ranging from $5 to $50. The Portland Cement Association, also, has donated the services of one of its experts to assist in the construction.

If his income and contributions from the public prove to be inadequate, Harvey intends to sell real estate, of which he still owns about 350 acres, to carry out the project and has drawn a will to provide for completion of his program in the event his death occurs before the vaults are sealed. Incidentally, the book which he is yet to write on the progress and the probable fall of this civilization will be published for general circulation as well as for burial in the pyramid and the proceeds from it will be used for maintaining a park about the structure and employing a caretaker.

Harvey's reason for selecting Monte Ne as the site for such a project is not without geological as well as sentimental aspects. These mountains, according to geologists, are among the oldest in the world. Once, it is believed, they towered to the prodigious elevation of 14,000 feet and have been worn to their present altitude of 1400 feet by the tireless action of wind and sun and water. Being ancient geologically speaking, they are not subjected to the dangers of earthquakes or volcanic action as the Rockies or the Andes or any other comparative infants among mountains would be. So far as these dangers are concerned, the pyramid might be expected to stand indefinitely. Then, there is another advantage. The hills adjacent to the spur on which the pyramid is to stand are only about 250 feet higher than the valley. Even if they should be leveled by erosion in time to come, the piling up of rock and soil in the valley would not be great enough to cover the top of the pyramid from sight.

The pyramid will be 40 feet square at the base. The pedestal, 10 feet high and containing 18,000 cubic feet of reinforced concrete, will be built solidly upon the natural limestone that forms the backbone of the mountain spur. Upon the pedestal, the first unit of the pyramid will rise perpendicularly to a height of 35 feet and will contain within its walls, eight feet thick, a chamber 16 feet square. This will be the first of the three treasure vaults. Above the first unit, then, a shaft 22 feet square at the base and tapering down to six feet at the top, will reach upward 85 feet farther toward the clouds.

TWO more vaults will be contained in this shaft—one directly above the first large chamber and the other more than half way to the summit. These will be smaller than the first chamber but will provide room for a goodly assortment of books, pictures and maps, descriptions of railroads, the telegraph, telephone, radio, airplane, phonograph, linotype, printing press, circulation of the blood and numerous other discoveries which this civilization has made within the last 400 years. Outside each vault will appear an inscription like that on top of the shaft except the wording will be changed from "go below" to "go within."

The builder hopes that actual construction work will be completed within the next two years. The structure will then be allowed to dry and "set" for a year before the vaults are sealed and the air extracted from them. During this year the builder expects to assemble his records and prepare his book which will attempt to explain why this civilization must succumb. When this is finished the doors will be closed and the vaults and their contents left for the ages.

Upon one thing is Harvey determined—almost as resolutely determined as he is upon the building of the obelisk itself—and that is to keep his work free from anything that savors of personal vanity. The structure is not to be used as a sepulchre for the builder or anybody else. He has refused offers of undertakers to prepare a mummy for the purpose and no individual's name will appear anywhere on the pyramid itself. The only names preserved will be those mentioned in the books and records kept inside and these will include a list of those persons contributing to the building. This list will be made on parchment and placed in a small glass container in the center of the first chamber.

"ALL selfish interests and motives must be eliminated from an undertaking such as this," Harvey declared to the correspondent who visited him recently in his picturesque abode. "Personal selfishness and greed for wealth is what is bringing the world to its inevitable downfall—that coupled with the increase in tenantry, bankruptcy of the masses and the loss of ideals. We are now witnessing an appalling increase in crime, suicide, insanity and divorce, and a disrespect for law which can lead but to one thing—the dismemberment of society. These are the same factors which from the beginning of time have caused other civilizations to perish. We, I am afraid, are in for the same destiny. Oliver Goldsmith, in his 'Deserted Village,' said in a very few words what I am trying to say in a great many:

"'Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
'Where wealth accumulates and men
decay.'

"Selfishness and vanity must have no part in the building of this pyramid for they would defeat its aim. There must be no avenue of profit leading from it. Its only purpose is to preserve for some other possible civilization the knowledge we have gained and might not be able to pass along by any other means. Of course it may be visionary. Of course, it may be futile, but I think the possible good it will do is worth the hazard. Besides, the greatest assets in life are contentment and happiness. I am rich in both in the building of this pyramid."

TWO more vaults will be contained in

"WHAT DOES this mean, Duke? How dare you force yourself on me like this?"

The Duke of Mall Didn't Attempt to Hide From His Wife the Fact That He Was Bored

THE STRUCTURE, economy and polity of our time do not incline the meek and lowly to a particular regard for persons of condition. Nor is the patronage of princes and the favor of lords solicited to any noticeable degree by the poets and scientists of the day. The most superficial survey of history will discover that the condescension of a gentleman of the haut ton was once regarded as almost an essential of a poet's success; while the craftsman, was he ever so cunning and exquisite, must rely for his fame on the caprice of the young men of fashion, who were, it is to be presumed, not the less generous because they were invariably in debt and had not the worse taste because they were nearly always in wine.

In our generation, however, we have progressed so far in the liberal arts that, should a man of letters so mask himself with the impertinence of fashion as to be remarked at Ascot in clothes which, with a deplorable want of faith in the dignity of letters, have been cut to fit his person, he shall at once be convicted by all intelligent people of a lack of feeling for all that is genuine in art and literature. That cannot be altogether just. An effeminate manner and unusual habits should not, on the other hand, invariably be taken for sure signs of genius in the mental sciences; and laymen should be warned against regarding soiled linen as an essential of the successful ascent of Parnassus.

In the face of this illiberal attitude towards the upper sort, the popular interest in the young Duke of Mall is the more surprising; and to that gentleman's familiars and dependents it has for long been a source of gratification to observe how the esteem in which he is held by the people of England is rivaled only by the interest shown in the table manners of the most famous pugilists and the respect extended to the tireless energies of the most beloved prince in Christendom.

NOR was the young Duke's greatness unheralded, his birth without good omen; historians the world over well know the legend of the Dukedom of Mall, how it was prophesied by a sibyl of the Restoration that on the birth of the greatest of that house the golden cock on the weather vane of St. James's tower would crow thrice, and on his death it would also crow thrice. And only those most steeped in the modern vice of scepticism will disbelieve the unanimous evidence of every club servant in St. James's street, that this miracle attended the birth of the seventeenth Duke.

There follow, then, some sidelights on the recent life of the young Duke of Mall and his lady. Than these two, history will say, history must say, there never was a more comely pair; for such is the unknowable wisdom of the All-Wise, that opposites will discover the sweetest harmony. The differences referred to are, of course, those of breeding and nationality, for the lady was an American out of Chicago, in the State of Illinois. But to attempt to describe Miss Lamb were to challenge contempt and defy the limitations set by the gods upon human speech. Let it suffice that she was beautiful: the quality of her color comparable only to that of a garden in tempered sunlight, the texture of her complexion the envy of silkworms, while the glory of her hair has been described by a minor poet as a cap of beaten gold and autumn leaves. As for the lady's eyes, shall a phrase attempt where a thousand photographs have failed?

THE Duke wooed her, was mocked; he entreated, was beguiled; he pleaded, was provoked; he stormed, was dismissed; he worshiped, was accepted. The wedding paralyzed the traffic of London for several hours and the newspapers of England and America for several days.

It should be noted that the wedding present of the bride's father to the young Duke was an ocean-going yacht of gratifying tonnage. White and graceful, the yacht Camelot rode the seas like a bird.

Now, alas, not the most kindly observer can but have remarked that the recent life of the young Duke and his Duchess has been as conspicuous for its private dolour as for its public splendor. There have been rumors, there has been chatter. But it is the austere part of the historian to deal only in facts. The facts are as follows:

South of the lands of the old troubadours, between the heights of the Southern Alps and the languor of the Mediterranean, lies Cannes. The year we tell of was in its first youth. The flower and chivalry of England and America were promenading in the sunlight of the pretty town. The waters slept profoundly in the full kiss of the afternoon sun. There, as a dove on a spacious lawn, rode a fair white yacht. From its stern hung a cluster of golden cherries, for such was the pretty nautical device of the young Duke of Mall.

It must be granted by the most fastidious that the scene was set for enchantment. Yet in the yacht raged a storm: the Duke of Mall was having a row with his lady.

At the moment of our intrusion, my Lord Duke was saying:

"By Heaven, Leonora, I am sick and tired of it!"

That small lovely head, those wide deep gentle eyes! Yet stern Juno herself did sometimes walk the earth in those very eyes. She was not more than twenty-four, this lady, yet with what proud calm and disdain she could at one glance enwrap her husband! Not, however, that it always advantaged her case, for sometimes it might be he was too sleepy to notice or maybe he would be too busily engaged in disdaining her, which on occasions he could do very handsomely.

Gently said she: "You say you are sick and tired of 'it.' 'It,' my dear, my well-beloved? Am I, by 'it,' to understand that you mean me?"

The young Duke pointed his indifference with the application of the match to a cigar. "You may," said he, "understand what you like. I said what I said."

Tenderness was never yet so fitly clothed as by this lady's voice. "Shall I then," said she, "tell you all that I understand by what you said?"

The Duke need not have waved a hand skyward, need not have smiled, have yawned, and said: "Am I a god, to stop you talking! But maybe it is not necessary for me to add that I wish I were, if only for that purpose."

The Duchess said: "However, I will not be provoked. It is too hot. I will content myself merely with remarking that in my considered opinion the ancient Dukedom of Mall does at present grace one with the manners of a boor and the habits of a stable boy."

"Leonora, you go too far!"

SHE said: "Maximilian, I want to tell you that you are the most extraordinary man. In public you are all that is charming; and many who know of our private disagreements can't but think the fault is mine, since in public you seem never for a moment deficient in the manners, graces and consideration proper to a great gentleman."

The Duke expressed a hope that she would put that down in writing, so that he could send it as a reference to any lady, or ladies, to whom he might be paying his suit, or suits.

"However," said the Duchess, "when we come to examine you in the home, your manners are monstrous, your graces those of a spoilt schoolboy, while your consideration for your wife such that, far from concealing from me your preference for the company of low women, you will actually," said she, "bring them on board this yacht."

The Duke sighed.

"And now," she added calmly, "I will say good-by."

"Child," said the Duke softly, "must you go? Can't I tempt you to stay? Very well, then," said he, "good-by."

"Captain Tupper!" the Duchess called. "I am going ashore. You will please see to it at once!"

The Duke opened his eyes. It was an effort, for he was sleepy.

"Captain Tupper," said he, "her Grace will take the fastest cutter to the town to catch the Blue Train to Calais. We, in the cool of the evening, will make for Naples. Thank you."

The Duke closed his eyes again, for he was sleepy. The Duchess stared as though into the heart of the still blue bay. Her eyes darkened, and presently she said, bemused: "I am going now. Adieu, Maximilian."

"LEONORA," he said, with closed eyes, "I wish you all happiness and content."

She said: "Max, we were very happy once. We were lovers once. So happy—once upon a time!"

He sighed: "How I loved you, Leonora! As I had never loved anyone before, as I will never love anyone again!"

"How I loved you, Maximilian! But now!" And she said: "A legal separation is a silly quibble. Besides, you might want to marry again. Or I might."

"Might, Leonora? But you will, must, can't help but! With your beauty, youth, wealth."

"Thank you. I have often noticed that one's friends like one best as one is leaving them. Then, Maximilian, shall I divorce you?"

"If you please, dear."

His eyes were closed against her beauty, else he had seen the sudden smile that touched her beauty, touched it and was going, going, lurked a while in the depths of her eyes like a very small bird in the ferns of love-in-the-mist, and lo! was gone.

She said softly: "You are such a baby, Max! And because you are such a baby, I don't put it beyond you to make love to my sister if you should meet her. She has always been jealous of me, so she would enjoy nothing so much as your making love to her. Promise not to, Max, oh, please! She has just come over to Paris. Max, promise not to make a fool of me to my own sister!"

"She's pretty?"

"Pretty? Are words so scarce, sir, that you must use a copper coin? And she my twin!"

"Ah me! Oh, dear!"

Her voice scarce disturbed the silence of the yacht: "Good-by, Duke Maximilian. Our lives go different ways. I do wish you success, happiness, health. Good-by."

As he lay, with closed eyes, his fingers found her hand and raised it to his lips.

"Good-by," said he. Such was his farewell.

She looked back from the side. He lay silent. She said:

"Courtesy, Maximilian?"

A sea-bird mocked the silence. The cloud athwart the sun was now as large as half the world. The Duchess of Mall said:

"Chivalry, Maximilian?"

The sea-bird screamed and flew away, and Leonora of Mall cried: "I will forgive you all things but your farewell, Maximilian. The very birds are appalled to see chivalry so low in a man that he will take his lady's adieu lying down."

Her maid, hatted and veiled for traveling, whispered to her ear:

"Your Grace, he is asleep."

The time came when the young Duke awoke. Now the winds of the sea were playing about him, the sun was certainly not where he had left it.

"Ho!" cried the Duke. "Where is the land, the land of France? Ho there, Captain Tupper! What have you done with the fair land of France?"

"Your Grace, we are making for Naples."

"Your obsession for Naples seems to me singularly out of place on a windy evening. I detest, I deplore, Naples. Put back to Nice, Captain Tupper. I am for Paris!"

STUDENTS of sociology have made strides in their alleviation of the conditions prevailing among the poor; but is it not a fact that, as a daily paper lately asked, the study of those conditions appears to attract the interest of only the lighter sort of society people and the pens of only the most ambitious novelists? And that the benefits of this study, at least to novelists, are not mean, was proved beyond all doubt only the other day, when perhaps the wealthiest of contemporary writers increased his fortune by writing a tale about a miser in a slum. No one, on the other hand, will deny that achievements of sociologists among the poor are nothing compared with those of students of hospitality who, poor and unrewarded though they remain, have of late years done yeoman work in alleviating the conditions prevailing among the rich. It is to the generous spadework of men such as these that American hostesses in Europe owe the betterment of their lot; and it is by the support of their merciful hands that ladies burdened with great wealth are prevented from sinking down in the rarefied atmosphere to which they have been called.

Mere students of hospitality had not, however, been strong enough to support the burden of Mrs. Omroy Pont when that lady had first come over from America at the call of certain voices that had advised her that her mission lay in European society. It had needed graduates of that brotherhood, lean with endeavor in ballrooms and browned with the sun of the Riviera, to prevent that ample lady from succumbing to the exhaustion of carrying her wealth through the halls of her houses in London and Paris among guests who had failed to catch her name on being introduced. But the Good Samaritans had worked unceasingly on her behalf, and since Mrs. Omroy Pont had both great wealth and infinite insensibility, she was soon in a position to give a ball, at which quite half the guests knew her by sight.

THE morning after the Duke's arrival in Paris Mrs. Omroy Pont was on the telephone, saying: "My dear Duke, how do you do, how do you do? I am giving a party tomorrow night; you must come, you must come; now don't say you won't because I can't bear that, and really I must say, my dear Duke, that your unfortunate inability to accept any of my invitations so far has seemed almost marked, whereas——"

"Really, this is too much!" the Duke muttered, saying out loud: "Dear Mrs. Omroy Pont, you do me great honor, but I am afraid that an extremely previous and decidedly prior engagement—"

"Miss Ava Lamb, who wants to meet you, my dear Duke. She has just come over to Paris. Dinner is at nine. Thank you, thank you."

The Duke, as he acknowledged to himself the morning after Mrs. Omroy Pont's party, had been diverted beyond all expectation by Miss Lamb.

What, of course, had instantly impressed him was the amazing resemblance between the sisters; since the fact that twins are very frequently as alike as two peas never does seem to prepare people for the likeness between the twins they actually meet. Now, between Miss Lamb and the Duchess of Mall there wasn't, you dared swear, so much as a shadow of difference in grace of line and symmetry of feature. But why, as Ava Lamb sensibly protested, why on earth should there be or need there be or could there be, since Leonora and she had been twins as punctually to the second as was possible?

A nearer view, however, discovered a deal of difference between the sisters: in those small gestures of voice, habits of expression, capacity for attention and the like, which, so the Duke had warmly said, contribute far more than actual looks to mark the difference between one woman and another. Nor were they less dissimilar in coloring, for whereas both the Duchess and Miss Lamb had those small white faces and immense blue eyes generally affected by American ladies for the conquest of Europe, the Duchess' hair was of a rich and various auburn shaded here to the deep lights of

Major Fukuda Learns to Cook

In the Kitchens of Hotel Waldorf-Astoria in New York, Tokuzhiro Fukuda, Senior Major of Artillery in the Japanese Army, Has Been Working Incognito—"to Learn the Business." A Strange Profession for One of His Imperial Majesty's Favorite Officers!

By ARTHUR HENRY STRAWN

Special to the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.

MAJOR TOKUZHIRO FUKUDA, now conceded to be not only a splendid army officer, but, as well, a darn good cook.

NEW YORK.—For 14 months the aristocratic Waldorf-Astoria Hotel had been entertaining a distinguished Japanese military officer and didn't know it. For 14 months Tokuzhiro Fukuda had been intimately associated with the Waldorf-Astoria, and it was not until the Japanese had taken his departure that L. M. Boomer, president of the hotel, learned that he had had under his roof the brilliant Senior Major of Artillery of the Imperial Japanese Army, a schoolmate of Prince Asaka, brother-in-law of the Emperor of Japan and—one of the best potato peelers that ever worked in the Waldorf-Astoria kitchen!

"Potato peeler!" you exclaim with surprise. Well, then, imagine the surprise and possibly the embarrassment of the dignified Mr. Boomer when the information was conveyed to him that this brilliant and distinguished military man had been working in his kitchens for more than a year. His secretary, one morning not so long ago, handed Mr. Boomer a neatly engraved card bearing the legend: Major Tokuzhiro Fukuda, Japanese Army. Mr. Boomer was very busy preparing for a visit to his hotel by the President of the United States, but he could not very well refuse an audience to such an important person as a Japanese military officer. "Show him in," he said.

A trim, well-built Japanese, neatly attired in the best civilian fashion, entered the room.

"I WISH to thank you for the courteous treatment I have received while here," he said. "And I regret that I must leave."

"Ah," replied Mr. Boomer with a bow, "it is our great pleasure to satisfy our guests."

"But," replied the gentleman from Japan, "I was not a guest, as you might say. I was your potato-peeler." And when the astonished Mr. Boomer fully recovered from his surprise, Major Tokuzhiro Fukuda told his story.

"A few years ago, after the conclusion of the World War, the Japanese Government decided to reduce the size of our army. After a great deal of thought I determined I would leave the military service and take up a peaceful occupation, one which I figured would be useful and in a way help toward preserving peace. It was difficult for me to leave the army. I had been in military service for 19 years. I had been graduated from the Imperial Military College of Tokio, which is like your West Point, and there I had formed a friendship with Prince Asaka. I had formed many associations during my military career which made it difficult for me to leave the service for a new kind of life.

"But even after I had made up my own mind, it was difficult for me to have my resignation accepted. I had commanded an important post with the Americans in Siberia during the late war. I was the senior of my rank and it required the influence of several generals and other important persons before I succeeded in having my resignation accepted.

"ONE of my military brothers is a shareholder in important Japanese hotels and he invited me to associate myself with him. I accepted the offer, thinking at the same time that in connection with hotel work, if done properly, I might be able to do some propaganda for international peace; to show our friends, the Americans and others, for instance, that the Japanese are not essentially a warlike people, but take an interest in the pursuits of peace. By making them feel perfectly at home, while in Japan, I thought, foreigners would be able to obtain a better impression of the country and have a friendlier feeling toward it.

"I was introduced to many of the leading hotel men of Japan and, as many of my friends who had retired earlier from the army were in important civil positions, among them Mr. Asano, president of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, Japan's largest steamship company, my plan to devote myself seriously to the hotel business was very favorably received. Then it was that I formed the plan of coming over to America to make a study of American ways of living and American hotel keeping."

From Major Fukuda's matter-of-fact recital of the above, one would have received the impression that it was an easy and almost usual thing for a Japanese military officer to decide to do menial work for the sake of knowledge. As a matter of fact, it is almost revolutionary for a high ranking army officer to descend to scullery work, especially since Japan has a marked reverence for rank and tradition. But more recently the Japanese have become noted for their patience, an Oriental characteristic, and for their extreme aptitude in imitating the more advantageous customs and methods of the Occident. And thus, while violating the older tradition, Major Fukuda was following the more recent one at, however, no small sacrifice of comfort and pride.

When Major Fukuda reached San Francisco, he immediately called on James King Steele, editor of "Japan," to whom he had letters of introduction and who was in a position to advise the stranger as to how he should proceed in obtaining the kind of work he wanted. The two men parted, and Major Fukuda set out on his task. He had a short stay at a California hotel before he decided that probably the best way to start would be by learning how a prosperous American family lived at home. So he took a position as butler in a Los Angeles household where he learned about American housekeeping.

IT HAPPENED that, while serving as butler in this home, a formal dinner was given one evening. To Fukuda's surprise, he recognized among the guests this same James King Steele, although the latter failed to recognize him. Finally, when the dinner had been ended and the guests were departing, Fukuda astonished the American by whispering in his ear: "Well, I'm getting away with it, don't you think?" Steele then recognized him and both enjoyed the situation immensely.

Then Major Fukuda went east and obtained a job at the Waldorf-Astoria. What was the job? It was of handy man and general flunkey whose tasks included sweeping the floors, mopping up, polishing metal and other such exercises not of a nature calculated to delight a military officer. "Did I find it difficult to take orders from other men and to do disagreeable things?" he repeated in answer to a query. "Well," he went on with a smile, "a man who can give orders well can also take them, you know. I made myself agreeable to the work."

He was efficient at his work and was promoted to store man. "This meant," he explained, "that I handled the provisions, supplying the kitchen men, learning how to keep cheese in good condition, and other such work. Then I managed to work for the hotel butcher from whom I learned how to cut up meats of various sorts. I must have done well, for when, after a few months, I sought to get transferred to another department, the head butcher asked me not to go, and then told me that he would guarantee to get me a job as butcher doing that sort of work in any good New York hotel at $40 a week."

Next came several months in the Garde-Manger where Fukuda spent most of his time learning the exacting art of making salads. "I am very proud," he says, "of the fact that I know how to compose ninety-five different salads." Next came a turn at learning how to make fancy sauces and all kinds of soups, and then experience in the pantry taught him how to select vegetables and judge them; to compose fruit and oyster cocktails. Here it was that he learned how to peel potatoes by hand as well as by machine. "I spent many hours peeling potatoes," he said, "or what you call 'spuds.' It is not pleasant work."

AND all this time, whenever he could get a chance, Fukuda was helping in various departments of the kitchen, learning how to roast, to broil and to do all sorts of cooking. His willingness to help and the rapidity with which he became skillful made him a great favorite downstairs and as a result it was with little difficulty that he had himself transferred from one department to another in his effort to learn the business completely.

Next he worked in the steward's department where he could watch the service, learning how trays were arranged, the method of waiting on a table and the various fine points of good service. From the steward's office he was taken into the office of none other than the great Chef Eugene, the sanctum sanctorum of the cuisine. There he learned how to test meats and how to make out statistics.

In July he asked for a leave of absence. It was granted and he went to Boston, where he spent a month at a school studying home cooking of which American travelers seem so fond. During that time, with the aid of students of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he made a study of the chemistry of food, although his scientific training for the army came to his rescue there.

BACK at the Waldorf-Astoria again, he entered the Housekeeping Department and studied the work of the floor clerks, the chamber maids and housemen. To say that he studied their work is not quite a complete description of what occurred. Most of his study consisted of a liberal application of the trial and error method, by means of a broom, carpet sweeper, dust cloth and metal polisher.

Major Fukuda had almost completed the arduous course he had planned for himself at the Waldorf-Astoria, when he learned that the Prince and Princess Asaka were coming there for a short visit.

"The morning after the arrival of the Prince and Princess" says Fukuda, "I saw my old friend, Colonel Fujioka, the Prince's aide—two years ahead of me at the military college—and Colonel Morita, the Military Attache at Washington, whom I had known in the artillery. They told the Prince and Princess of my being there, and they expressed a desire to see me, and so I was received by their Royal Highnesses. On my way to their suite an amusing thing occurred. I started to walk past one of the police stationed outside as a guard. He had seen me earlier in the day pushing a carpet sweeper, and he remembered that.

"'Say, where do you think you are going?' he asked, stopping me.

"'I AM going to see the Prince and Princess,' I replied. 'They are expecting me.' The guard burst out laughing. 'Ha, ha, ha!

"'A flunkey like you? How do you get that way?'

"And then my friend Colonel Morita came by, took me by the arm in a friendly way and brought me into the royal presence. It was very embarrassing for the policeman.

"After exchanging greetings with the Prince, he said he was very surprised to find me, an officer of artillery, in this country doing menial work in a hotel. But when I told him of my ultimate aim, he approved of the plan heartily and said he hoped it would prove a success."

By the time Fukuda had finished his 14 months at the Waldorf, he had made a number of friends in the kitchen, several of whom expressed regret on seeing him leave. Chef Eugene, who later described him as "very intelligent and a willing worker," told him that he thought he had the makings of a great chef.

And all during his career at the Waldorf-Astoria, none of his fellow workers, none of the executives of the establishment, knew that he was an army officer or a man of distinction. And they probably would never have known it, either, if Major Fukuda hadn't by chance encountered his friend James King Steele, the day after he gave up his job at the hotel. It was Steele who urged Major Fukuda to let the president of the Waldorf-Astoria know that his erstwhile flunkey, handy man and expert potato peeler, was a Major in the Japanese Army.

THE THREE-CORNERED MOON

Renaissance bronze and there to the glow of Byzantine amber—the Duchess' hair was, in fact, fair to fairish, while Miss Lamb's was as near black as is proper in anyone with blue eyes who is without Irish blood.

The Duke thought it only fair to tell Miss Lamb that he and her sister had decided, for each their sakes, to break their marriage, and he had thought it only fair to himself to point his confession with a sigh.

"You mustn't for a moment think," he'd added wretchedly, "that I am trying to enlist your sympathy against your own sister, but——"

"Please!" Miss Lamb had protested, quite unhappily to that. And here was another and the sweetest difference of all between the sisters, for Miss Lamb's was the prettiest American accent imaginable, whereas the Duchess had long since and all too completely achieved the cold and ironic monotony of the mother-tongue.

To be with Ava Lamb, the Duke had gratefully reflected at that moment, was to look on all the beauty of his wife in atmospheric conditions undisturbed by his wife's sarcastic habit of mind. Miss Lamb hadn't a touch of that irony and sophistication which is so often mistaken by American ladies for European culture; she was perfectly that rarest of all visitors to a bored continent, a fresh and simple American lady.

AND "Please!" was all she had said about her sister! But to the young Duke that one word had meant so much, forced as it had been so unhappily from her lips, as if half to shield her pert sister against the consequences of her folly, half to prevent him from seeing how deeply she disapproved of that sister, and wholly and sweetly to stay his tongue from exploring further into that misguided sister's character—it had meant so much that he had been content to wait on her understanding even before she quietly added: "Oh, I understand!"

"But do you, do you?" he had cried emphatically, and she had let silence present him anew with her deep sense of understanding. She had a delicious talent for silence.

"MY DEAR"—it had just slipped out of him like that, quite naturally, quite wonderfully—"if only other women were like you! To understand, I mean, just to understand!"

The music and the dance lay in the halls behind them. They were alone on the formal terrace high above the marvelous sweep of the Champs Elysees.

Up and down the broad avenue between the trees prowled the beasts of the cosmopolitan night, these with two great yellow eyes, those with one small red eye closely searching the ground. In the middle distance the Seine shone like a black sword, and the horrible gilt creatures that adorn the bridge of the night to the dignity of fallen archangels driving chariots to the conquest of the heavens. And a three-cornered moon lifted up an eyelash from the beau quartier about the Place Victor Hugo.

And as over his coffee the next morning, the young Duke reflected on yesternight, he found himself enchanted by a gay memory. Oh, to be enchanted again, to be thrilled, to be exalted—and all, by companionship? What fun there was in life when women didn't grow so confoundedly familiar with one's habits. To be with Ava Lamb was to renew all the joy he'd once had of loving his wife, to renew it and to increase it, for wasn't he now older and wiser, wasn't he now wise enough to appreciate enchantment? Why, oh, why wasn't his wife like this girl, why, since they were both alike in so much, hadn't Leonora a little of Ava's warm attention and quick understanding?

And again the Duke cast back to yesternight, how he had warmed to the beautiful stranger and had told her the legend of the house of Mall.

He said: "It tells, sister, how the golden cock on the weathervane of St. James' Tower shall crow thrice at the birth of the greatest of Dukes of Mall. And, although I say it who shouldn't, this very miracle attended the birth of him who now stands before you. And the legend further tells that when the golden cock again crows thrice, the greatest of the Dukes of Mall shall die. Tonight I find myself in fear of my fate. I am troubled with the foreboding that the second crowing of that beastly cock is not very far distant. I've never but once before been vexed with this depression, and that was on the night of the day I fell in love with Leonora Lamb."

So it happened that the Duke awoke one morning to recognize that he could not, try as he would, do without the one enchantment that was called Ava Lamb. Those American sisters were fated, it appeared, to ravish his imagination to the exclusion of the whole race of womankind. And he had all the more leisure in which to contemplate his dilemma insomuch as Miss Lamb, pleading the importunity of friends, would sometimes not see him for days at a time.

IMPATIENTLY the Duke at Paris waited the wire which would tell him that he was no longer the husband of Leonora Mall; and when it came he delayed only long enough to instruct his valet to telephone his London florists to send the ex-Duchess a basket of flowers before calling on Miss Ava Lamb at her hotel.

However, she was not at home. Her maid said she was resting before the ardors of the night journey to Cherbourg, whence she would embark for New York. The Duke scarce waited the end of the astounding news. Miss Lamb was lying down. Calm and cold, she said:

"What does this mean, Duke? How dare you force yourself on me like this?"

Fair, tall, intent, the Duke further dared her displeasure by raising her unwilling hand to his lips. Twilight filled the room. Outside, the motors raced across the Place Vendome. The Duke said:

"I have dared everything on this one throw. Ava, I love you."

HER face was like a pale white flower. But he could not see her eyes, because they were closed. The dress she wore was black. The hand that lay outstretched on her black dress was as soft as a temptation, and he said: "I have a ring for that hand that has not its peer in the world. I love you, Ava. Will you marry me?"

He could not see her eyes, because they were closed. But still the dusk lacked the courage to steal the red from her mouth, and the Duke saw that her mouth was parted in a queer sad smile.

"Why do you smile?" he whispered, and he said unsteadily: "I know why. You do not believe I love you, you do not believe I know how to love, you think me the shallow vain braggart that I have shown to you in the guise of myself until this moment. But I love you, Ava, more than life. I love you, Ava, with all the youthful love I had for your sister increased a thousandfold by the knowledge I now have of myself; for it is by loving that men come to know themselves, and it is by knowing themselves in all humility that men can love with the depths of their hearts." Ava, I do love you terribly! Won't you speak, won't you say one word, do you disdain my love so utterly as that? Yet I can't blame you, for I have spent my life in proving that my love is despicable. I have been proud, pitiless, impious. I am soiled. But, Ava, even a fool may come to know the depths of his folly; and I who know so much of desire, dearly beloved, know that I have never loved until this moment. Still you won't speak? Ava, I did not think you so ungenerous when in my vanity I first fell under your gentle enchantment. Dear, your silence is destroying all of me but my love. Won't you give me even so much as a queen will give a beggar, that, had he been another man in another world, he might have kissed her hand?"

Now night had extinguished all but the last tapers of twilight, and in the dark silence the maid whispered to his

Got Entirely Rid of the Disease After Suffering 17 Years.
Asthma sufferers will be deeply interested in a letter recently written by Mrs. Mary Bean, Nashua, Iowa. She says: "I had asthma for 17 years, coughed most of the time and couldn't rest, day or night. I tried everything, but grew so weak I could hardly walk across the room. After taking part of one bottle of Nacor, I could do most of my housework. That was 8 years ago. I recovered completely, am still feeling fine, with no signs of asthma."
Hundreds of other sufferers from asthma, bronchitis and severe chronic coughs have reported their recovery, after years of affliction. Their letters and a booklet full of valuable information about these stubborn diseases will be sent free by Nacor Medicine Co., 542 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind. No matter how serious your case seems, write for this free booklet today. It may give your whole life a new meaning.

ENDED HIS RHEUMATISM!
"I am eighty-three years old and I doctored for rheumatism ever since I came out of the army, over 50 years ago. Like many others, I spent money freely for so-called 'cures' and I have read about 'Uric Acid' until I could almost taste it. I could not sleep nights or walk without pain; my hands were so sore and stiff I could not hold a pen. But now I am again in active business and can walk with ease or write all day with comfort. Friends are surprised at the change." You might just as well attempt to put out a fire with oil as try to get rid of your rheumatism, neuritis and like complaints by taking treatment supposed to drive Uric Acid out of your blood and body. It took Mr. Ashelman fifty years to find out the truth. He learned how to get rid of the true cause of his rheumatism, other disorders, and recover his strength from "The Inner Mysteries," now being distributed free by an authority who devoted over twenty years to the scientific study of this trouble. If any reader of The St. Louis Post-Dispatch wishes "The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism," containing facts overlooked by scientists for centuries past, simply send a post card or letter to H. P. Clearwater, 20 T street, Hallowell, Maine. Send now lest you forget! If not a sufferer, cut out this notice and hand this good news and opportunity to some afflicted friend. MAJOR TOKUZHIRO FUKUDA, now conceded to be not only a splendid army officer, but, as well, a darn good cook.

I was received by their Royal Highnesses. On my way to their suite an amusing thing occurred. I started to walk past one of the police stationed outside as a guard. He had seen me earlier in the day pushing a carpet sweeper, and he remembered that.

"'Say, where do you think you are going?' he asked, stopping me.

"'I AM going to see the Prince and Princess,' I replied. 'They are expecting me.' The guard burst out laughing. 'Ha, ha, ha!

"'A flunkey like you? How do you get that way?'

"And then my friend Colonel Morita came by, took me by the arm in a friendly way and brought me into the royal presence. It was very embarrassing for the policeman.

"After exchanging greetings with the Prince, he said he was very surprised to find me, an officer of artillery, in this country doing menial work in a hotel. But when I told him of my ultimate aim, he approved of the plan heartily and said he hoped it would prove a success."

By the time Fukuda had finished his 14 months at the Waldorf, he had made a number of friends in the kitchen, several of whom expressed regret on seeing him leave. Chef Eugene, who later described him as "very intelligent and a willing worker," told him that he thought he had the makings of a great chef.

And all during his career at the Waldorf-Astoria, none of his fellow workers, none of the executives of the establishment, knew that he was an army officer or a man of distinction. And they probably would never have known it, either, if Major Fukuda hadn't by chance encountered his friend James King Steele, the day after he gave up his job at the hotel. It was Steele who urged Major Fukuda to let the president of the Waldorf-Astoria know that his erstwhile flunkey, handy man and expert potato peeler, was a Major in the Japanese Army.

Lardner's Weekly

by RING LARDNER

VOL. II. No. 111. (Copyright.) January 17, 1926.

FAMED WIT REFUSES TO AFTER-DINNER-SPEAK AT VERMILION, SOUTH DAKOTA

Lardner Denounces After-Dinner Speeches.

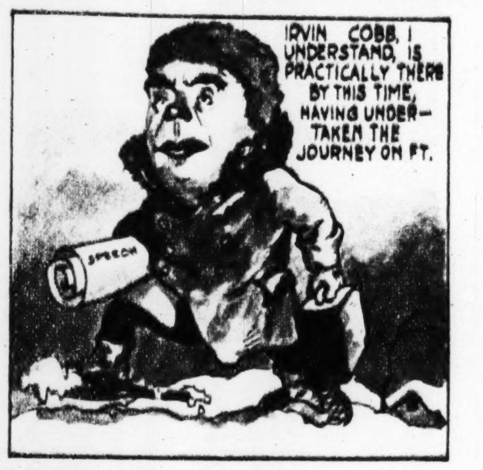
ALL HE EVER SAYS IS: "I HAVE ETT TOO MUCH"

By RING LARDNER.

THIS is the season of the yr. when the great American public reaches its sublimest heights and goes in for a orgy of banquets, and the demand for after-dinner speakers is so much greater than the supply that even the undersigned gets 3 and 4 letters per wk. asking me will I address the Yuma Women's Pressing and Cleaning Club, the Amalgamated Beard Chewers' Association of Lancaster, and etc. and please state fee for same and this in spite of the fact that I have repeatedly give out statements making it clear that I don't talk after dinner except in my own and the mortgage company's home, where I generally always deliver a eight word oration entitled "I wish I had not eat so much."

HE HAS A PAST.

This decision to keep my mouth shut in public except for drinking purposes was arrived at after some deliberation assisted by the advice of a good many admires in Cincinnati, O., and Peoria, Ill., where I talked for money and thereby ran the risk of arrest for grand larcency and fraud. Not since the San Francisco convention in 1920, when everybody caught the disease from constant and unavoidable association with Democrats, have I answered tearful pleadings for a speech and my response on that occasion, a dinner at Tait's given for Damon Runyon for no reason, was so eloquent that the native sons excused themselfs during its progress and went out to the telephones to get their wife out of bed and tell her not to set up. Numerable times since then I have said, in writing and in no uncertain terms, that my speech making days was over before they had fairly began, and nothing has occurred or will occur to shake this holy resolution.



IRVIN COBB, I UNDERSTAND, IS PRACTICALLY THERE BY THIS TIME, HAVING UNDERTAKEN THE JOURNEY ON FT.
SPEECH

THE FACTS.

But it seems hard to believe, and maybe people's skepticism gains support from items like the following, which I take the liberty of clipping from the Sioux Falls, S. D., Argus:

> Vermilion, S. D., Dec. 20.—Ring W. Lardner is to be the main attraction at the first annual Gridiron dinner, to be given the evening of Journalism day, January 22, by the South Dakota Chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, men's professional journalistic fraternity, the Voltante announces. A definite announcement to this effect was authorized by the fraternity upon the strength of a telegram received from Lardner himself stating that he would be able to come to Vermilion for that occasion.
> The telegram:
> Long's Island, New York
> Dec. 3, 3 p.m.
>
> Sigma Delta Chi,
> University of South Dakota,
> Vermilion, S. D.
>
> In reply to yours date would be glad to speak at Gridiron dinner Vermilion January 22 stop my price is 100 dollars plus expenses stop write me further.
>
> Ring Lardner.
> The fraternity is also making an effort to bring Irvin S. Cobb to Vermilion as an added attraction. To date no reply has been received from the famous short story writer and humorist.
>
> According to the present plan, the creator of "You Know Me Al" will be asked to preside as Roastmaster for the evening. In the event he accepts that position the success of the dinner will be assured, as Mr. Lardner has acted as Roastmaster in the annual Gridiron Nights in Washington, D. C., sponsored by the Washington Press Club.

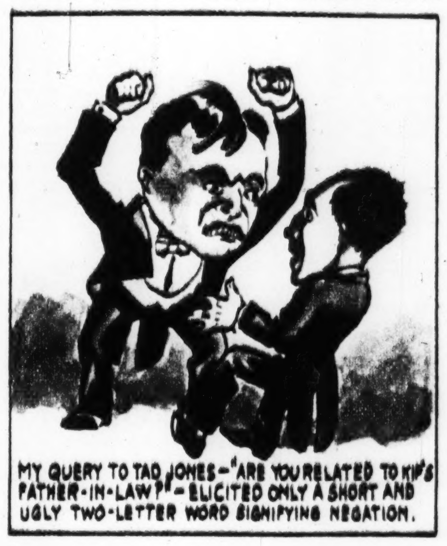
EXCEPTIONS.

Now the above item is substantially true except as follows:

1. I did not send no telegram at no time as stated, but did write them a letter and say I could not be present on the date mentioned as that is our nurse's night out.

2. The sum of $100.00 and no hundreds dollars would not buy the trousseau required for the trip, such as snowshoes, a sleeping bag, team of dogs, and etc.

3. Mr. Lardner has never even been invited to act as "Roastmaster" (what a funny word) at the Gridiron dinner in Washington and to date has recd. only one invitation to even attend same.



MY QUERY TO TAD JONES—"ARE YOU RELATED TO KIP'S FATHER-IN-LAW?"—ELICITED ONLY A SHORT AND UGLY TWO-LETTER WORD SIGNIFYING NEGATION.

HE WILL BE EASY.

I will take this occasion, however, of advising the boys not to worry about Mr. Cobb's failure to reply. Mr. Cobb, I understand, is practically there by this time, having undertaken the journey on ft. His regular price for a function like this is $50.00 and expenses, but he only soaks you $25.00 when he is an added attraction, and his expenses won't be nothing to speak of as Mrs. Cobb put him up a nice lunch.

HARD TIMES.

No, my friends and admires, I must ask your indulgents to try and get along without me as a spellbinder. I can't even spell, let alone bind. And I am in the hopes that you will take this little article as a blanket demurrer and not keep on asking me as it only means heartache for both of us. Not only is public speaking a physical and moral impossibility as far as I am concerned, but I am under the impression that it is becoming tougher and tougher even for those who can and will speak. I gathered this impression at the last banquet I attended, an affair given by Christy Walsh at which the guests of honor was Babe Ruth, Fielding H. Yost, Knute Rockne, Glenn Warner and Tad Jones. The Babe didn't say more than fifty words, that is different words, and Christy made an effort to help the other speakers by requesting we boys to ask each of them a question, the answering of which would give them something to say. Now when it becomes necessary to give a football coach something to say, it means we are headed for a long and prosperous era of lockjaw.

A GRILLING.

Personly I am afraid I was as much of a flop as usual. I couldn't think of nothing to ask Messrs. Yost, Rockne and Warner and my query to Mr. Jones—"Are you related to Kip's father-in-law?"—elicited only a short and ugly two-letter word signifying negation.

The Three-Cornered Moon

ear: "Your Grace, she is asleep."

The Duke told his chauffeur that he would not need him again that evening. But he had not walked about a dozen yards across the Place Vendome when the breathless voice of his valet detained him.

"This telegram," the valet panted, "came the minute after you had left this afternoon. I took the liberty to follow you."

The Duke's face paled as he read. The telegram was from the hall-porter of his club in St. James' street. The valet, an old servant, was concerned at his master's pale looks.

"I hope I did right, your Grace?"

"Quite right, Martin." And suddenly the young Duke smiled. "You have brought me this wire at just the right moment. I can't, Martin, thank you enough. Meanwhile, old friend, go back and pack. We are for Mall tonight. Paris is no place for an Englishman to die in. For pity's sake, Martin, don't look so gaga—but go!"

MISS LAMB'S maid did not attempt to conceal her surprise at the Duke's quick reappearance. But the young man's face was so strangely set that she had not the heart to deny him sight of her mistress.

"I'll be," she sighed, "dismissed!"

The Duke smiled, and maybe he never was so handsome nor so gay as at that moment.

The maid said: "My mistress still sleeps. It is when she is happy that she sleeps."

"Happy? Does it make a woman happy, then, to see a man destroyed by love?"

"It is more comfortable, your Grace, to be loved than to love. But I know nothing of my mistress' heart. I came to her service only the other day. Yes, she is asleep. And the room is dark."

The Duke said: "Good! This is indeed my lucky day."

But a few minutes before he had left that room in a storm of rage. Now, a great peace was on him. He let the minutes pass by, standing there in the soft darkness. His sight began to distinguish the objects in the room. On a table some roses were fainting in a bowl. He made obeisance and kissed a rose, for kissing a rose will clean a man's lips. Then he knelt beside the still figure on the couch and he kissed her mouth.

"Oh!" she cried, and she cried: "You thief!"

HE laughed, his lips by her ear. "Beloved, do you think I would die without kissing your lips? Honestly, beloved, could you expect it?"

"Die?" she whispered.

He would have laughed again, but he fancied that maybe too much laughter would not become his situation, would appear like bravado. But he would have liked to show her he was happy, and why he was so happy. A vain man, he had realised that he was contemptible; therefore, it was good to die. Loving as he had never loved before, he was unloved; therefore, it was good to die.

He told her how he had been warned that the cock on St. James' tower had crowed thrice that dawn. And then he was amazed, for as he made to rise he could not. He cried out his wonder.

She said: "Be still!"

He cried out his despair.

She whispered: "Be still!"

Her arm was tight about his shoulder, and that was why his happiness had left him like a startled bird. He sobbed: "Child, for pity's sake! It's too late now. Let me die in peace. To have died without your love was blessedly easy. A moment ago I was happy."

"DIE! You!" And, as she mocked him thus, the cold irony of the English tongue tore aside the veil of the American accent, and when the Duke stared into her eyes he had leapt up and run away for shame but that her arm was still tight about his shoulder.

"You, Leonora, you! And so you have revenged yourself!"

She whispered: "Be still!"

And as he made to tear himself away she said: "Yes, I wanted to be revenged. I wanted you to fall in love with me. I wanted you to look a fool."

"Then you must be very content, Leonora! Let me go now."

"Let you go?" she cried. "Let you go! But are you mad!"

"Oh," he said pitifully, "what is this new mockery!"

"You see," she sighed, "I've gone and fallen in love with you again! That rather takes the edge off my joke, doesn't it? Oh, dear! Maximilian, I have waited to love you as I love you now ever since I married you four years ago. But you never would let me. Be honest, sweet—would you ever let me love you? You were always the world's spoilt darling, the brilliant and dashing and wealthy Duke of Mall—and I your American wife! Darling, what a lot of trouble you give those who love you! I have had to go through all the bother of divorcing you to make you love me, and now I suppose I must go through all the bother of marrying you again because you've made me love you——"

"Oh, but listen!" he made to protest.

"I certainly won't!" she cried. "I must say though, that you've made love to me divinely these last few months, and the real Ava would have fallen for you, I'm sure, if she hadn't been in California all this while. I dyed my hair a little, but the only real difference between me and your wife was that I listened to you while you talked about yourself. Darling," said she, "kiss me, else how shall I know that we are engaged to be married?"

HE said desperately: "Leonora, what are you saying! Do you forget that I am to die?"

"Not you, not you! You may be divorced for the time being, poor Maximilian, but you're not nearly dead yet. I sent that wire myself this morning from Victoria Station—to mark the fact that the Duke of Mall is dead! Long live the Duke of Mall!"

"Leonora, I can't bear this happiness!"

"But you must learn to put up with it, sweet!"

"Leonora, how divine it is to be in love! I love you, Leonora!"

"My, how this British guy mocks a poor American girl!"

"But Leonora, I adore you!"

"Words, words, words! Whereas, sweet, a little action would not come amiss. You might for instance, kiss me. Max, how I've longed to be kissed by you these last few months! Max darling, please kiss me at once! I assure you it is quite usual between engaged couples."

Note: The legend of the Dukedom of Mall may not find a full measure of credence owing to the fact (only recently pointed out to the author) that the weather-vane on the tower of St. James's Palace is adorned, not by a golden cock, but by a golden arrow. But have we not been warned in letters of gold, that shall last so long as mankind lasts, not to put our faith in the word of Princes? The author does in all humility venture to suggest that the same must undoubtedly apply also to the word of Dukes.

THIS WEEK'S COVER

IN "The Trail," which is reproduced on the cover of this issue of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, H. M. Hergert, a young St. Louis artist, has painted another of those Indian pictures which are rapidly winning for him success. The brave in war bonnet and war paint has stopped on the hillside, at the forest's edge. His cayuse stands alert behind him, while the Indian, stooping, examines a bit of paper that has been dropped, possibly by the settlers in their flight.

The artist has faithfully caught the color of the West in his work and the tawny hillside and the suggestion of the edge of the woods are convincingly presented, while the Indian's bronzed skin and gay war accouterments make a spot of brilliant color.

Herget is a St. Louisan who has spent several years in commercial art work and recently opened a studio of his own. He hopes ultimately to devote his life to painting Indian subjects and thus leave a record of the epic of the old days, so much of which developed through the history of the St. Louis in which he was born. Another of his paintings—"The Sioux Scout"—was reproduced on the cover of this Magazine for November 1.

'There Will Soon Be More Americans Than Frenchmen in Paris

By NIE
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

PARIS — All good Frenchmen, when they die, go to Paris, but there will have to be a falling off in the death rate of good Frenchmen in the next few months or else large numbers of the departed spirits, bound for the Happy Hunting Grounds along the banks of the Seine, will be forced to put up with accommodations out in the suburbs, for, when the coming tourist season gets in full swing, all the room, and the rooms, will be occupied by very much alive Americans hailing from Kokomo, Indiana, and all points west, east, north and south.

It used to be that Paris was a really foreign city where the occasional plutocratic visitor from the U. S. A. was a stranger in a strange land. Today Paris, except in the matter of steam heat, bathtubs and other plumbing arrangements, is rapidly becoming Americanized—so rapidly, in fact, that the natives are viewing with alarm the sudden changes, and there are many sensible Frenchmen who think that there ought to be a law, or something, to save Paris for the Parisians.

There are said to be 50,000 Americans making their homes in Paris today. The steamship lines brought over 265,000 tourists last summer and are making the proper arrangements, including the raising of the rates, for double that number this season. At least 25 new hotels, large ones, are being built in this city, which already has twice as many as any other city in the world, and the largest painted billboard sign in history, occupying two sides of a building which covers a large part of a large block on the Grand boulevards, calling attention to the fact that Mr. Ford's automobile now, to translate from the French reading matter, "has a new face but the same heart." It was to counteract the effect of this sort of American commercial enterprise that Andre Citroen, maker of the flivver of France, astounded his business associates by advertising his rival machine in electric lights up and down the full height of the Eiffel Tower.

THE commercial invasion from America, however, although it is gaining in strength, is not keeping pace with the human flood which is crossing the Atlantic. The Frenchman can't put his thumb in the hole and stem the tide of tourists but he can set his face against cash registers, shower baths, reclining barber chairs and all such foolish things which the country has got along very comfortably without for several thousand years.

But if the instruments of modern commerce are not crowding out the ancient business methods of ancient Paris the purveyors of enjoyment — Heaven save the mark—are keeping pace with the standards set in Keokuk, Iowa and Astoria, Oregon. The French newspapers carry many advertisements of dancing masters who guarantee to teach the Charleston in three lessons, the barrooms and cafes are crowded with American cabaret performers, two all-Negro musical revues with their cast imported from New York and Chicago, occupy two of the largest theaters and every otherwise all-French musical comedy points, if not with pride, with an eye to the main chance to the fact that its chorus is made up of Teller Girls, or Sunshine Girls, or Hoffmann Girls or some other collection of chorines from the United States or England. Jazz bands have crowded out the French musicians in Mon Martre and the spontaneous enjoyment and naive naughtiness of the Parisian shows of pre-war days has given way to American vulgarity of the sort that one sneaked off to view in the districts on the other side of the railroad tracks back home in the good old red light days.

THERE is really no exaggeration in the paragraph above and the average Frenchman has the idea pretty well set in his mind that what is going on in Paris now is just what is going on in America. Maybe he is right. At all events his suspicions, if he has any doubts at all, are quickly confirmed when he drops into his favorite cinema theater for there, except on rare occasions, he sees nothing but American films with the American movie director's poisonous propaganda of life in the states.

One would naturally expect the French film producers to turn out some beautifully artistic film dramas. Instead the product of France is cheap, tawdry and uninteresting even to the French theater-goer. The photoplay is poor, the action is slow and as a rule the reading matter—the sub titles—take up as much footage of film as the pictorial part. Small wonder then that Mr. and Mrs. Paris and all the little Parisees start at 8:30 o'clock at night for the neighborhood theater which is showing the latest American picture to come across the Atlantic. The American film is almost always sharp and clear with excellent photography, it is generally a great deal more indecent than the native movie drama and there is always plenty of movement and action.

WITH the same degree of alarm that the average Parisian is viewing the Americanization, in many ways, of Paris, the wine growers of France are seriously taking up the falling off of drinking by the French people themselves. In a measure, to a great measure in fact, the producers of fine wines blame somehow the effect of prohibition in the United States, although certainly the Americans who come to Paris bring no ideas of prohibition with them. The curtailing of the American market of course has cut into the profits of the French wine makers tremendously, but at the same time there is a very noticeable falling off in the amount of alcoholic consumption throughout the country. It can be seen in the restaurants of Paris, where the sale of ice cream, lemonade and table waters has rapidly increased among the French population. It may be lack of money or it may be for some other unknown reason, but the tendency is to blame, without any real explanation, America, just as that country is blamed for most of the other troubles of France.

It is the light wines of France—which, incidentally, have not gone up in price to anything like the extent that the franc has fallen and in which there must be, under those circumstances, small profit—which seem to appeal most to the average American visitor. This does not apply to the man who wants his liquor hard and who gets it, at fancy prices, around the American bars. But the average tourist seems to prefer the cheap wines which can be consumed in large quantities at a remarkably cheap price. In Paris one can sit around for hours and drink the red and white wines and get up from the table ready to move on to the next cafe without any trouble. Over in England drinking is a different proposition. After two pint bottles of the English ale an American is practically useless for the rest of the evening. He stays at the table where he finished his second bottle and every now and then a waiter comes around and brushes the flies off of him and eventually someone takes him to his hotel.

AS REMARKED before, France and Paris in particular, is rapidly becoming a land of tourists and now, thanks to the enterprise of the big steamship lines, one can bring his automobile, large one or small one, along with him with as little trouble as he brings his trunk and at a very small expense. The car is run on the boat at New York or New Orleans or Boston or at any other port and in less than half an hour after the ship docks on this side the flivver, or whatever else it may be, is on shore and ready to be driven to Paris all equipped with an international plate which permits entry into all European countries except Germany and Spain where special and rather complicated arrangements have to be made.

As a matter of fact the entry of a car into France is complicated if the individual traveler attempted to attend to the matter himself. There is an owners card to be got, a drivers license to be secured, the customs authorities must be assured with a bond that the car will be taken out within a year and a brown book, called, for short "Carnet de Passages en Douanes" together with a white book known as "Certificat Inter-National de Route Pour La Circulation Temporaire a L' Etranger" purchased. Also every car must be equipped with a hand horn. You may use your electric horn if you wish but you must also have a horn on the car.

But none of these matters need trouble the car owner in the least. The steamship lines take care of everything, put on the horns, attach the license plates, secure all of the papers, put gasoline in your tank and the entire cost is about $100, half of which comes back to you when you take the car out of the country. The freight varies, of course, with the size of a car. It costs 25 cents a cubic foot, weight not entering into the matter, to bring a car over as baggage. The freight on a Ford is about $100 and the largest machine would cost probably $250. That is for one way. Last year the steamship lines brought over 165 uncrated automobiles for tourists. This summer they expect to bring 500.

Driving over the wonderful roads of France is a delight in one's own car but driving in Paris is something else again. There is more congestion on the Paris streets and it is less regulated than in any other city in the world. If there is any law regarding speed no attempt is made to put it in force. As in America, unlike England, one drives to the right of the road in France—with one or two unimportant differences, you may, apparently, drive on the left or down the center if you wish and Paris taxi drivers seem to prefer the wrong side always. Also you can make a complete turn without warning through traffic in the middle of the block and you can draw up at either curb facing your car in any convenient, to yourself, direction. This may not be the law but it is the Paris custom and it goes to make driving in Paris exceedingly dangerous, a sort of sporting event with the odds considerably against the individual driver. There are some one way streets and some attempt at regulation at the Opera and other congested corners but the regulation usually consists of arguments between the police and the driver during which traffic gets tied into a knot.

THE parking rules in Paris are unique. On even days of the month a car must be parked only on the side of the street where the houses are numbered evenly. On the odd days parking is on the other side. This necessitates the carrying of a calender and the searching for a house which has a number followed by the attempt to turn around in the traffic to get on the other side. Of course you take your life in your hands driving in this sort of a jumble but as soon as you also take the chance of killing every one else in the immediate neighborhood it is a fairly even bet.

Reference has been made to the arguments which are constant between drivers and police. The Frenchman loves to argue and the French policemen is thoroughly French. This put the American driver, who cannot speak French, at a disadvantage and does not hurry matters at all. The policeman talks on and on at great length ignoring your statements that you do not speak French and when he is tired he steps aside and lets you go on your course, which is usually the wrong one and strictly against the law. There are no arrests made unless there has been an accident and the only law which is never violated by a French driver is the one requiring the sounding of your horn. The little hand horns squawk every foot of the way and the foreign driver soon gets into the habit. There is no noise in the United States to compare with this bedlam.

BUT once outside of Paris, on the roads to Switzerland, Southern France or, for that matter, any part of France, driving is a joy. The roads could not be better, the scenery is magnificent and hotels and food are excellent and remarkably cheap. Gasoline, being entirely imported, is high, the cost running around 37 cents a gallon regardless of the fl tion of the franc. Outsi Paris, except in the big citie will find little English spok understood. In Paris ho you will hear almost as mu glish especially along the b vards, as French. Ordering a in a Paris restaurant used a terrible affair. Now, if yo down at a table and say no at all, you will in all proba be served at once with an of ham and eggs—"two des avec jambon fried" in the w of the average American. I the other hand, you attempt t ter a few words of French make a mess of it the waite likely to bring you a boiled England dinner. Paris kn what Americans want—you frequently even get a glass of water.

3 Drafting Lessons FREE to prove you can learn at home in your spare time!

Sixteen of America's leading Engineers and Architects have developed a new one-step-at-a-time method of Drafting instruction, which, for the first time, does away with merely "copying" and tracing. They have made Drafting easy to understand. They start you off with standard Drafting room jobs right from the first lesson, and they have condensed and simplified the work so you make rapid progress. Under their wonderful system you can get ready for a beginner's job in Drafting in a few months!

I will make you an

1. Architectural (Building Construction) Draftsman, or a
2. Machine Design (Mechanical) Draftsman, or a
3. Structural Draftsman (Steel and Concrete), or an
4. Electrical Draftsman, or an
5. Automotive Draftsman.

Draftsmen are urgently needed in hundreds of industries. This is the only course of home instruction which gives you special training in any branch you choose, in addition to the general principles of Drafting. This special training is absolutely necessary to fill the better jobs in Drafting that pay from $60 to $125 a week.

Robert Knight, Deputy Commissioner.

Gentlemen: The same day I received my diploma I got word that I was one of the two candidates who had successfully passed the examination for Deputy Commissioner of Buildings of the City of Chicago, a position paying $3600 per year.

There were eight applicants examined besides myself, all men well known to the architectural and engineering profession. Seven of these failed to obtain a passing grade of 70 per cent. My grade was 84.69.

Inasmuch as I failed to pass this same examination three years before, my present success is mainly due to the knowledge gained through your School.

Yours very truly,
ROBERT KNIGHT.

the truth about coffee

secrets every woman should know!

What is a Coffee Bean?

The coffee shrub is an evergreen. It grows from 18 to 20 feet high. The fruit is a fleshy berry that looks like a cherry. Each fruit generally contains two seeds.

These seeds are the coffee beans.

Your Encyclopedia Brittanica, on page 646, Volume VI, says the best coffee comes from the high mountain slopes, 1000 to 4000 feet above sea level, but coffee grown in the low lands is more plentiful. More of it is grown. But it is not so good as the scarcer coffee grown on the mountain tops.

H & K Coffee is Mountain-Top Coffee. Ever so much better than ordinary coffee. No wonder more people prefer H & K, wherever it is sold, than any other coffee. More dealers sell it, too.

Next Sunday we will tell you other coffee truths,—Secrets Every Woman Should Know About Coffee. Look for the same space on this page.

"I BECAME ACQUAINTED over the chess board with a physician in this city. He believed that the colon contained the ills of the human body and that Yeast was the cure. Later I was afflicted with boils and carbuncles and was unable to work. One day in the restaurant where I dined, the proprietor said: 'Have you forgotten your old friend's remedy? Let me give you a yeast sandwich.' . . . The daily eating of Yeast has given me remarkable 'pep.' Health and happiness were restored. Never again did I forget my old friend's advice."

MISS BARNES IN DUTCH COSTUME

"I am a stenographer. I was generally run-down, lost my appetite and could not sleep well. I also suffered from many annoying pimples. Then I began taking yeast. I took three cakes a day before meals. Soon my condition began to improve. I began to enjoy my meals and my pimples are a thing of the past."

Evelyn Barnes, Chicago, Ill.

The Success Story of Thousands

Constipation conquered, skin and stomach disorders corrected, youthful vitality regained —thanks to One Food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, nibbled from the cake. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before breakfast and at bedtime. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N901 The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"I WAS TROUBLED with gas on the stomach, pimples, constipation and loss of appetite. My physician recommended Fleischmann's Yeast. I ate it between meals. After two weeks, the gas on my stomach ceased and gradually my condition returned to normal. My appetite is splendid, my skin has cleared, and my intestinal tract functions perfectly." John W. Hemmerle, West Philadelphia, Pa.

EAT FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST FOR HEALTH

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—aids digestion—clears the skin—banishes constipation.

"LAST FALL I felt tired and worn out with a lack of energy caused by constipation. Also troubled with pimples and blackheads on neck and shoulders. My friends were eating Fleischmann's Yeast and so I began. I ate two cakes a day spread on crackers. In the short space of three weeks I felt like a new person; no longer troubled with constipation and my skin free from blemishes."

4 Men in 7 Bald at 40

—91% needlessly, by tests

Costs Nothing

Unless we grow hair. The Van Ess 3-bottle treatment is absolutely guaranteed. You are the sole judge. The warrant is given by your own dealer. All we require is his signature showing you have purchased a ninety-day treatment. If it fails, we refund your money. Hence you assume no risk making this test.

Our experience shows falling hair most always due to Infected Sebum. Now quickly overcome.

Written Guarantee to Grow Hair This New Way—or Money Refunded

This is to offer you, under absolute money-back guarantee, the new Van Ess Treatment, which, under actual tests, grew hair on 91 heads in 100.

It embodies a new principle. A principle heretofore unknown to science. Now high authorities admit baldness may be greatly diminished. For hair roots seldom die from natural causes. And this method revives them. Test it yourself at our risk.

Hair Roots Rarely Naturally Die

We estimate that 4 men in 7 are bald or partially bald, at 40. Our investigation proves this to be unnecessary. Proves only about 9 men in 100 need ever be bald!

Baldness is a symptom of a disease. Note this fact and mark it. It is most frequently a symptom of infection of the Sebum—the scalp oil.

Remove this Infected Sebum and hair will almost always grow. Under the bald scalp the hair roots are generally alive. We have demonstrated this to be true in about 91% of our cases of falling hair or baldness.

We claim this new method reaches the roots. That it makes hair grow. But the public has often been deceived. So we guarantee it. You take no chance of loss.

New Hair or No Money

We make our guarantee without reservation—without strings. It is absolute. We guarantee to stop falling hair. We guarantee to grow new hair in 90 days. Sometimes it grows much sooner. But usually this treatment requires about 3 bottles of Van Ess. If we fail, your money back without question.

Note that your own dealer gives the warrant with each 3-bottle purchase. Thus you assume no risk. Over 400,000 men have made this test. It is safe for us thus to guarantee the treatment. For experiments of years have proven it effective to us on 91 heads in 100. Foremost authorities approve it. Noted dermatologists now employ it—some charge as much as $300,000 for a similar basic treatment.

We offer it in correct form for home use, at the price of an ordinary "tonic."

The Infected Sebum

We have traced about 91% of all baldness and falling hair to infection of the scalp oil (Sebum). Sebum forms at the roots of the hair. Its natural function is to lubricate the hair.

But Sebum cakes on the scalp. It forms a breeding place for bacteria. It clings to hair and destroys it. It lodges in hair follicles and plugs them. Then germs by the millions start to feed upon the hair. Loss of hair soon is marked. Then with neglect comes total baldness.

You can see this Sebum on your scalp, in the form of an oil. Or, when accumulated and dried with other ingredients, as dandruff. But it does not kill the hair roots. Hence when you remove it new hair has a chance to grow. This is a scientific fact—medical authorities will tell you so. You must remove the Infected Sebum.

Now We Remove It

For years, science has experimented to combat Infected Sebum. We found a 91% effective treatment.

Now we have embodied it in a home treatment. It is called Van Ess Liquid Scalp Massage.

It is applied in a new way—a scientific way. (Note the illustration at right.) It penetrates to the follicles of the hair. It combats the Sebum and removes it. Results are marked. They are quick. It stops falling hair. We have demonstrated that it grows new hair.

We urge you to try this new way. We know the statements we make are amazing—almost incredible, but remember, we back them with an absolute guarantee. There is a guarantee in the top of each package. Read it first before you buy. Note its fairness. Note that we let you be the judge.

Note the results yourself. Mark the healthy condition of your scalp—the freedom from dandruff. Look in your mirror—see for yourself.

Go today to any drug or department store. Obtain the VAN ESS 3-bottle treatment. With it you will get our signed guarantee. Hence it is folly not to try it.

—It Massages the Treatment Directly to the Follicles of the Hair

This patent applicator makes hair treatment, at home, possible for the first time. Blood alone revives. Treatment must reach the infected area under the surface. We accomplish it, as the illustration above shows, with hollow nipples of scientifically perfect rubber massage-cap which comes with every bottle of Van Ess Hair Grower. The medicament is fed directly to the follicles of the hair. At the same time the flow of blood is stimulated by massage to the hair root.

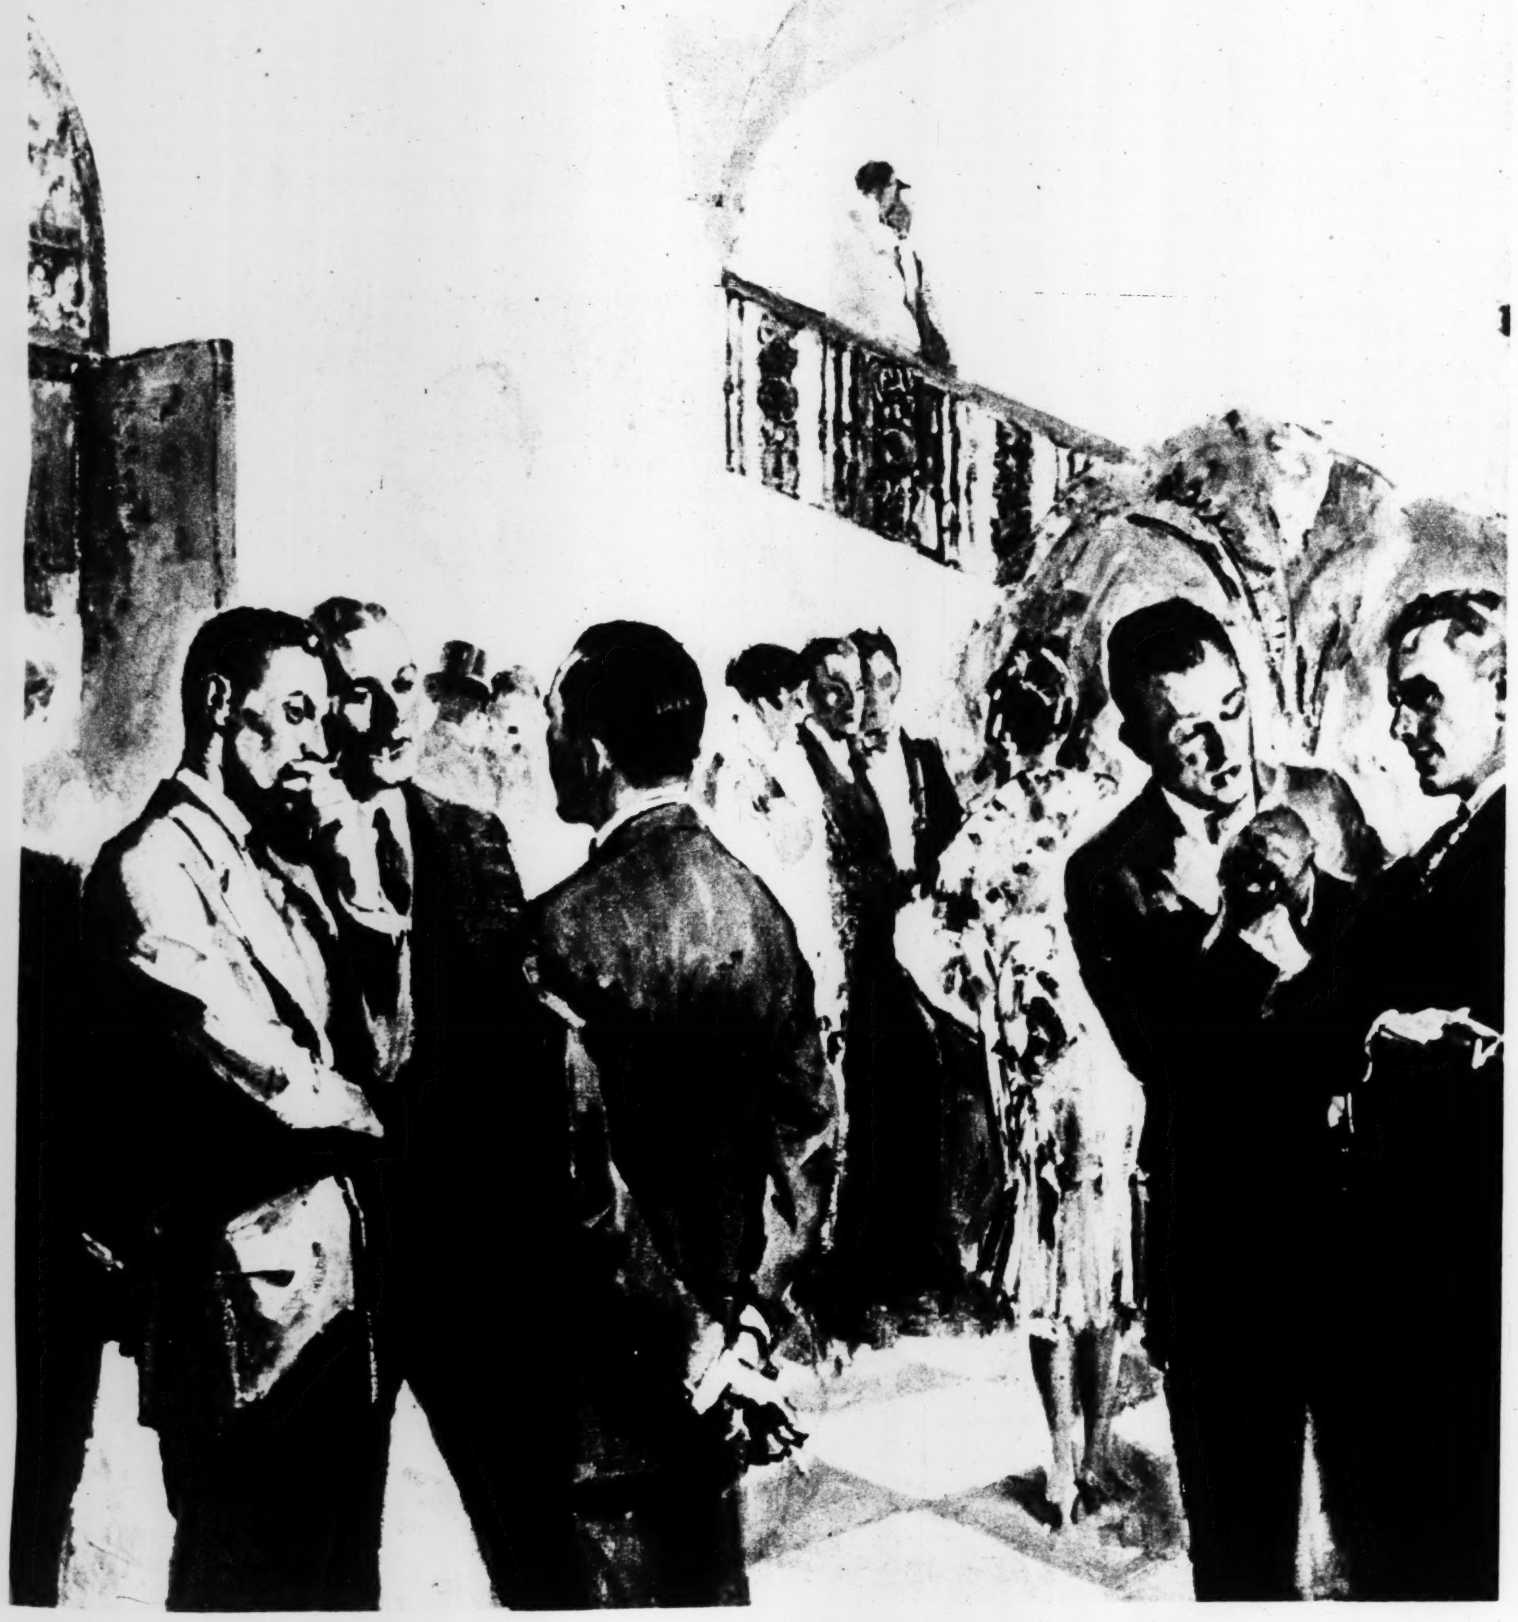
When the second act has come to an end—and the curtain is rung down amidst whirling applause—when you mingle outside with the excited throngs in the lobby —have a Camel!

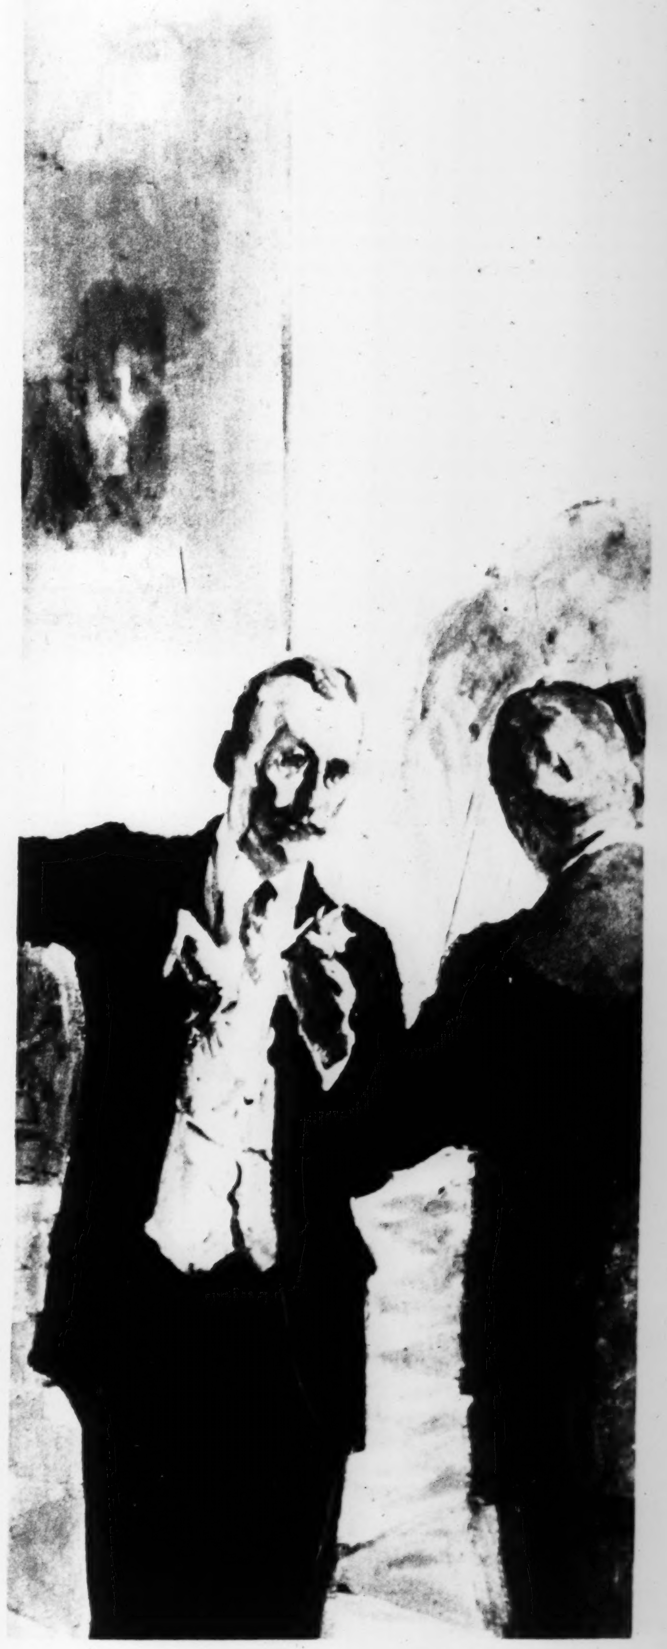


WHEN the thrilling second act has just come to an end. And the stars have taken their curtain calls in answer to round after round of applause. When you join the crowds outside just as pleased and thrilled as yourself —have a Camel!

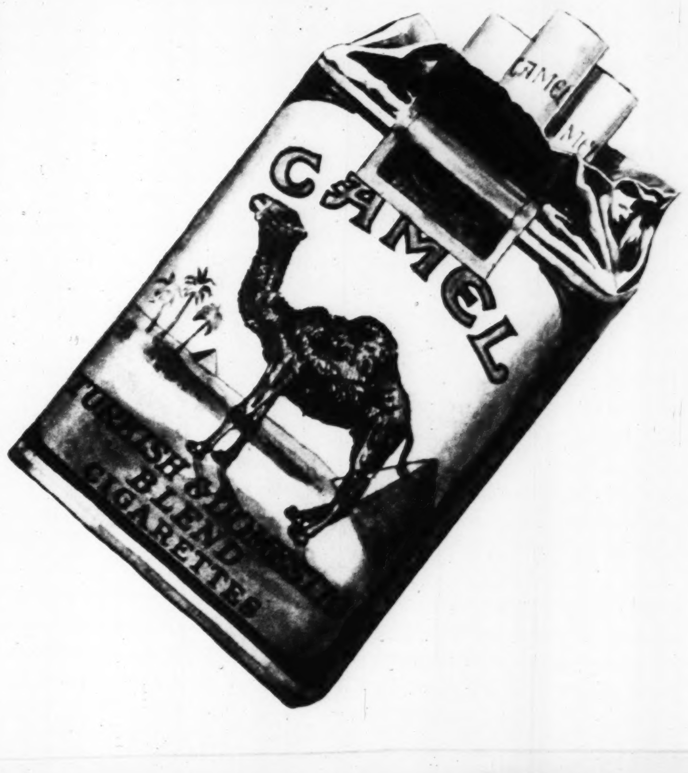
For no other friend is so cheerful, so resting between acts, as Camel. Camel adds its own romantic glamour to the brightness of memorable occasions. No other cigarette ever made—and kept—so many friends. Camels never tire your taste, never leave a cigaretty after-taste no matter how liberally you smoke them. All the desire to please, all the skill to serve of the largest tobacco organization in the world, go into this one cigarette.

So when you leave the theatre pleased and inspired for greater things, when you see life's problems and their solutions clearer —taste then the mellowest smoke that ever came from a cigarette. Know the mildness, the fragrance that's loved by millions of experienced smokers.

Have a Camel!



Into the making of this one cigarette goes all of the ability of the world's largest organization of expert tobacco men. Nothing is too good for Camels. The choicest Turkish and domestic tobaccos. The most skilful blending. The most scientific package. No other cigarette made is like Camels. No better cigarette can be made. Camels are the overwhelming choice of experienced smokers.



Our highest wish, if you do not yet know Camel quality, is that you try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any other cigarette made at any price.

The Patriotic Game of Presidents

Entertaining! Educational! Simply put the Pictures together right and name them and Win a Big Cash Prize!

CAN YOU cut apart the three pictures of Presidents of the United States printed above and put them together right? Liberty will pay $25,000.00 in Cash Prizes for best answers to The Patriotic Game of Presidents.

It Costs Nothing!

Every week Liberty will print a page of Composite Pictures of the Presidents of the United States, as shown above.

Eage page contains a set of three pictures, which when put together properly, will make three complete portraits. All you have to do is put them together right and name them. Clews will be given to help you.

Note the first set of Pictures above. They appeared in last week's issue of Liberty. You can start with them. Then get set No. 2 in tomorrow's issue of Liberty.

Try it! It's easy. Just an entertaining and educational patriotic game to familiarize everyone with all the Presidents in American history.

It costs nothing. Everyone has an equal opportunity to win a big Cash Prize.

Open to Every Man, Woman, Boy and Girl

Remember, The Patriotic Game of Presidents is open to everyone—boys, girls, men and women. It does not matter who you are or where you live.

The Prizes

1st Prize	$5,000
2nd "	1,000
3rd "	500
4th "	250
5th "	200
Next 80 Prizes at $25 .	2,000
Next 1355 Prizes at $10	13,550
10 Prizes to teachers at $250	2,500
1450 Prizes, totaling	$25,000

The $25,000 in Cash Prizes will be paid to the persons who send in the nearest correctly named and neatest complete sets of Pictures.

Begin at once! Set No. 1 is printed above. Do you know these Presidents? Set No. 2 will be printed in tomorrow's issue of Liberty! Save all pictures until you have the ten sets—then send them in.

RULES

1. Every week for 10 weeks a Set of Composite Pictures of Presidents of the United States will be printed in Liberty.

   Set No. 1 which appeared in the last issue of Liberty is re-printed above for the benefit of those who were unable to secure a copy of last week's Liberty. You can start with the pictures shown above. They will count! Then get Set No. 2 in this week's issue of Liberty, out tomorrow.

2. Each Set of Pictures, when cut apart and put together properly, will make complete portraits of American Presidents. The public is invited to assemble the pictures and send them in. Liberty will pay $25,000 in Cash Prizes to the persons who send in the nearest correctly named and neatest complete sets of Pictures. (See Prize List above.)

3. This contest is open to everybody—men, women, boys and girls—except employes of Liberty and their families. It does not matter where you live.

4. You pay nothing. Just prove your skill!

5. The Composite Pictures must be cut out, assembled and pasted or pinned together. Below each picture must be written the name of the President and the years of his administration. (Give only first and last year of administration. For example, Warren G. Harding, 1921-1923.)

6. In all, 29 Pictures will be printed—one of each President. Save them until you have the complete set of 29. Then send them to "Presidents," Liberty, Post Office Box 380, Grand Central Station, New York City. Be sure to write your name and address clearly on your entry. All Pictures must be in by midnight, 21 days afer Set No. 10 is published. We cannot undertake to return any entries.

7. Each entry should be sent by first-class mail—postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by Post Office Department. Contestants may send in as many sets as they wish, but no contestant shall be entitled to more than one prize.

8. Accuracy will count. Neatness will count. No elaborate treatments are necessary. Simplicity is best.

9. You need not purchase Liberty to compete. You may copy or trace the pictures from the originals and assemble the pictures from the copies you have made. Liberty may be examined at any of its Offices or at Public Libraries free of charge.

10. The Judges will be a Committee appointed by Liberty. The Judges' decision will be final. In case of ties a duplicate award will be given each tying contestant.

To Teachers

One of the most important purposes of this contest, aside from its endeavor to win more friends for Liberty, is to increase the knowledge of American History among the people, young and old.

We want especially to interest the children in this educational game. We want them to consult with their parents and their teachers as to the identities of the Presidents.

Therefore, to each of the ten teachers whose pupils rank highest in this contest, we will award a special prize of $250 each, a total of $2,500 to teachers. This applies to pupils in public, private and parochial schools, so when a child enters the contest, he is advised to state the name of the school he attends, the name of his teacher and the grade.

BAKER PROPOSES 10 PER CENT STATE AMUSEMENT TAX

Plan Incorporated in Proposed Amendment Designed to Raise $12,000,000 Annually for Schools

SIMILAR LEVY ON ALL TOBACCO SALES

Governor Drops Move to Divert Property Tax of Five Cents on $100 Valuation to Fund.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 18.—A second luxury tax has been added to Gov. Baker's proposed constitutional amendment to provide separate sources of revenue for support of public schools and State educational institutions, in the form of a 10 per cent tax on the admission fees of theaters and other places of amusement.

The proposal already carries a tax of 10 per cent on the salep rice of cigars, cigarettes and other forms of tobacco. The other tax items in the revised draft of the amendment are to the present State inheritance and foreign insurance taxes, which will be transferred from general revenue to the school support fund.

Gov. Baker held a conference in his office today with several State officials, at which the amusemen tax was added to the measure, and other changes made, including abandonment of the original proposal to transfer the present direct property tax of 5 cents on the $100 assessed valuation from general revenue to the school fund. The revision also resulted in abandonment of a proposal to levy a 2 per cent severance tax on all minerals mined in Missouri.

Proposal to Committee.

The committee selected by the Governor to work out the amendment will meet here Tuesday, to pass on the revised amendment. The tax on amusements, if the amendment is adopted, would result in a levy of 10 per cent on every 10 cents or fraction thereof charged as admission to amusements. For illustration, the tax on a 10-cent admission would be one cent, on a 15-cent amusement 1½ cents and on a 50-cent admission, 5 cents.

The Governor estimated the revised amendment carrying the amusement, tobacco, inheritance and foreign insurance taxes would produce about $12,000,000 a year for support of the schools. As originally drafted, the tobacco tax extended only to cigars and cigarettes and was to be collected from retailers. This brought protests and objections that the measure was discriminatory because it did not apply to all forms of tobacco.

In the revised draft the tobacco tax applies to all cigars, cigarettes, manufactured chewing tobacco, manufactured smoking tobacco, snuff and all other forms of manufactured tobacco. The measure provides for collection of the tax on the first sale of the tobacco within the State, which, in most instances, would invoice collection of the tax from the wholesalers.

Property Tax Dropped.

Baker said the property tax was dropped because of the difficulty anticipated in explaining to voters that no increase in property tax was proposed through transfer of the property tax to the school fund. The right to increase or decrease the taxes rests with the Legislature, irrespective of the adoption of the proposed amendment. Considerable opposition had been offered to the severance tax on minerals and a fight on such a levy was feared.

Some advocates of the Separate school fund have urged that it be based entirely on a direct mill tax on property without inclusion of so-called luxury taxes. Others have advocated the measure be submitted as an initiative proposal, subject to amendment by the Legislature as conditions and school needs changed, instead of a constitutional amendment, which would make the proposal a part of the State Constitution with specific limits. Once written into the Constitution it may be changed only by voting another constitutional amendment in a State-wide election.

It is planned to submit the amendment through the initiative at the November election.

Man Who Read Bible 49 Times Dies
